The only authorities in favour of the recent decision are Churchill v. Dibben (2 Ld. Ken., part 2, pp. 68, 84; 9 Sim. 447, note) and Peacock v. Monk (2 Ves. sen. 190), both decisions of Lord Hardwicke, and identical in substance. A wife, entitled under her marriage settlement to real and personal estate for her separate use, with a general testamentary power over the real estate, purchased real estate with her savings, and took a conveyance of the fee to herself. It was held, that the real estate so purchased did not pass in equity by her will, although leaseholds purchased with her savings did pass. In the earlier case, one estate was in contract when the testatrix died. "All these purchased estates are legal estates in her, subject to the rules of law, and therefore not devisable by virtue of her ownership, on account of her incapacity, nor by virtue of any power, for there neither was, nor could be, any such power. If the husband should agree generally with his wife, that she should have a power to make a will, and dispose of her real estate, it would be void†. The land contracted for must be considered as if the conveyance had been executed." In the later case, Lord Hardwicke spoke with much more hesitation against the validity of an ante-nuptial agreement for a devising power. As to the purchased estate, "she has purchased it so as to go directly to her heirs; for she takes the conveyance directly of the legal estate to herself and her heirs—not to trustees." These cases seem to have turned on the consideration, that the wife, by taking a conveyance to herself, without reserving any power or trust, must be considered to have abandoned her separate interest; so that it would have been held, that her husband could have claimed the rents during her life. The authority of these judgments of Lord Hardwicke is very much weakened by their containing the erroneous doctrine, that an ante-nuptial agreement for a devising power is ineffectual, which has been clearly overruled (Rippon v. Dawding, Amb. 565; Wright v. Cadogan, 1 Bro. P. C. 486; Master v. De Croesman, 11 Beav. 184; Field v. Moore, 7 De G., Mac., & G. 703); and, at the most, they do not extend to the case of an express trust for separate use. The dictum of Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., in Moore v. Morris (4 Drew. 33); repeated in Blackford v. Woolley (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 569), in accordance with the decision of the Master of the Rolls, had no bearing on the case in hand; and what little weight is due to it is balanced by the contrary dicta of Sir J. Leach, V. C., in Minot v. Eaton, (4 L. J., Ch., 134), and of Sir G. J. Turner, L. J., in Atcheson v. Le Mann (23 Law T. 302).

On the whole, it is submitted, that authority and principle are in favour of the absolute power of disposition of a married woman over her separate interest in real estate settled for her separate use.

WEST INDIAN INCUMBERED ESTATES COURT,

Park-street, Westminster, June 28.

[Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Chief Commissioner.]

In re George Price, ex parte Lady Dunsany and Others.

The Worthy Park Estate, containing 4122 acres, situate in the island of Jamaica, and said to be the finest estate in the island, was sold by auction for 8550*l.*, exclusive of the stock, to be taken at a valuation. Mickleton Pen, containing 623 acres, was sold for 300*l.*

Solicitors for the petitioners, Messrs. Stephens & Son.

In re Edward Hyde Clarke, ex parte George Rochfort Clarke.

The Swanswick Estate, containing 1161 acres, in the same island, was sold for 2300*l.* on the same terms. Solicitors for the petitioners, Messrs. Bell, Stewart, & Lloyd.

In re Hiatt and Pink, ex parte James Davidson.

Up Park Pen, containing 682 acres in the same island, was sold for 1500*l.* on similar terms.

Solicitors for the petitioners, Messrs. Tuke & Valpy.

Messrs. Leifchild & Cheffins acted as the auctioneers of the court.

There was a large attendance and considerable competition, and the prices were considered very good under the circumstances, and certainly shewing a rise in the value of West Indian property.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Friday, June 26.

The Innkeepers' Liability Bill passed through committee. The Security against Violence Bill was read a third time and passed.

Monday, June 29.

Lord Brougham withdrew his Councils of Reconciliation Bill, with the view of bringing in a new one.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Friday, June 26.

The Partnership Law Amendment Bill was committed pro forma.

The Misappropriation by Servants Bill passed through committee.

Tuesday, June 30.

POISONING BILL.

Lord Raynham moved the second reading of the Poisoning Bill.

Sir G. Grey opposed the measure, which appeared to go beyond what was at all necessary. He moved that it be read a second time that day three months.

The amendment was agreed to without a division.

* This referred to the question in Peacock v. Monk (2 Ves. sen. 190), whether a contract on marriage could bind the wife's heir without a fine.

† It is evident from the context, and also from the judgment in Peacock v. Monk, that the Lord Chancellor was here referring to an ante-nuptial agreement, and not, as Sir G. J. Turner, L. J., assumes in Field v. Moore (7 De G., Mac., & G. 703), an agreement after marriage.

CORPORAL PUNISHMENT IN SCHOOLS BILL.

Lord Rayleigh in moving the second reading of this bill, stated that its object was to prevent corporal punishment being inflicted in schools with any instrument except a birch rod.

Sir G. Grey thought that this was a subject to which it was rather ridiculous to invite the attention of the House, and opposed the second reading of the bill.

Mr. Locke supported the bill.

Lord H. Trevor moved that the bill be read a second time that day three months.

Mr. Bass expressed his approval of the bill. He at the same time moved advise the noble lord who had introduced it to postpone its consideration to a future session, when it might be introduced sufficiently early to admit of its being duly discussed.

After a few words from Mr. Lygon and Mr. Coringham, the motion for the second reading of the bill was negatived.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, JULY 11, 1863.

WE proceed to conclude our observations on the speech of the Lord Chancellor in introducing to the House of Lords his bill for the revision and expurgation of the statute law. The bill is now printed, and has been read a second time, on which occasion the Lord Chancellor said, "he must ask the House, considering its nature, to take it upon trust, placing reliance on the industry, skill, and fidelity of those by whom it had been prepared;" a sentiment which was echoed by Lord St. Leonards, Lord Brougham, and Lord Chelmsford; and if responded to by the House, increases a hundred fold the responsibility of the compilers of the bill.

One of the great objections to any proposal for the complete codification of the law is, that such a codification must involve a codification of the constitution of the country. It is one of the fallacies of the day that there is little or no connexion between the laws and political government of a people. This fallacy shews itself in many forms. For instance, we constantly hear a distinction taken between political and other offences, with proposals to restrict the trial by jury to the former—as if any human power could draw the line of demarcation among offences, so as to define what are and what are not political. The most common-place charge, nay, the most ordinary action, may involve a most important constitutional question; and every lawyer knows that two of the most remarkable cases affecting the rights and liberties of the subject that have ever presented themselves—Ashby v. White (2 Ld. Raym. 938) and Stockdale v. Hansard (9

Ad. & El. 1)—arose, the one in a special action on the case, and the other in an action of libel. If the form of government and the laws of a country are not cast in the same mould, if they are not constructed so as to harmonise with each other, there is not much hope for the vigour of the general system. Now, the constitution of England is in strict analogy with its law—i. e. it has its base in custom, with a superstructure of statute; and the law and constitution of England, as of other countries, are so bound up together that codifying the one more or less includes codifying the other. But the value of paper constitutions is written in blood in the history of almost every nation of continental Europe. The reason is obvious; nothing but a customary constitution—one that has its roots in the habits and affections of the people—has much chance of withstanding the attacks of an armed executive. Moreover, tell the despot that the limits to his power lie within the four corners of a sheet of paper—it is easy to raise a pretended difficulty as to the meaning of its language; he puts the construction favourable to his views, and, if opposed, solves the difficulty with the sword. The great and invaluable principles of the British constitution, which have given it its world-wide celebrity, have been evolved, one after another, as occasion required, and possibly fresh ones may be evolved in time to come; but define the constitution on a piece of paper, and this hardy natural growth is arrested for ever.

The Lord Chancellor is fully aware of this difficulty. He says—"In carrying out this plan, of course, it becomes most desirable to preserve intact all those ancient monuments of our legislation connected with our political rights and institutions, on which no man should lay his unhallowed hands. Those statutes, which may be considered to have become stones in the edifice of the constitution, are preserved wholly intact; and no enactment or statute is touched that may be considered to have entered into the common law, or formed the foundation of any rule of practice or procedure, or may be referred to as the basis on which the right or title of property is made to rest." This is well, but the execution of such a plan imposes a fearful responsibility. In excluding a statute from the new statute-book the compiler must be in a condition to decide incontestably that it does not involve any constitutional principle. To give an instance. The stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 4, commonly called the "Irish Coercion Act," long since expired, after investing the Crown with large powers for the suppression of dangerous associations, and for trying offences in certain districts by courts martial constituted in a peculiar manner, enacts as follows, in sect. 40—"Provided always, and be it declared and enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to take away, abridge, or diminish the undoubted prerogative of his Majesty, for the public safety, to resort to the exercise of martial law against open enemies or traitors." Here is a statute, in its nature both local and temporary, which declares a very important principle of constitutional law. How much more likely are declarations of equal moment to be discovered among enactments which were meant to be general and permanent.

The Lord Chancellor makes some other proposals of vast magnitude. He says, "I intend, my Lords, that the commission should also direct its inquiries into another important point, namely, the correction and improvement of the present system of reporting, because it is of no use to reduce, expurgate, methodise, and arrange that which exists, unless we have a means of preventing the recurrence of the evils which now exist. If your Lordships should confirm that view, I shall undoubtedly, at some future time, ask you further to give me a committee for the purpose of ascertaining what is the best mode by which the future legislation of this country may be conducted so as to secure an improved form in the composition of bills."

These are, indeed, great projects. The first we have recently considered at some length (ante, pp. 159, 167, 195), and the second may be pronounced a decided improvement. But the remaining proposal is of a more doubtful character.

"When the task of expurgating and classifying the statutes has been completed, it will still be necessary to adopt some system for revising future reported cases, so as to check the uncertainty and confusion they introduce into the law. For, observe the manner in which error grows up in the law. A case is decided, say, by a Vice-Chancellor, or by one of the courts of law at Westminster. The decision may be bad, but one of the parties to the litigation may not have the means of appealing against it, and so it is not corrected by a higher court. Then this bad law is recorded in the reports, and passes unnoticed for three or four years. It is then cited as a precedent before another judge. That other judge says, 'I find that Mr. Justice A. B., or Mr. Vice-Chancellor C. D., decided a case from which the case now before me cannot be distinguished;' and thus a bad precedent is accepted and confirmed. The thing, therefore, becomes inveterate, and bad law is established, there being in our system no agency at all to exercise that which ought to be exercised, viz. an annual revision of the reported cases, with power to determine what is to be regarded as entitled to authority, and what ought not to be quoted hereafter for the purpose of determining the law. All this might be accomplished by what is called the institution of a Department of Justice. At all events, there ought to be some mode and power of revising these reports from time to time, as long as you adhere to the practice of making them guides for judicial decisions."

This notion is taken from Bentham, who strongly advocated a periodical revision of the law. But we wish his Lordship had been more explicit as to the means by which he proposes to accomplish this object. If he means a periodical revision of reports by the Legislature, it is superfluous to invest the Legislature with a power that it possesses already. But if his Lordship means a periodical revision of reports by a commission, or individuals appointed by the Crown, we protest, in the strongest possible terms, against any project so thoroughly unconstitutional and perilous. Is it to be endured, that at the end of each year, or some other specified time, a number of commissioners dependent on the Crown are, assembled in camera, without the assistance of counsel or any of the usual checks on judicature, to sit as a court of error on the decisions of all the judges in the land, and erase from our jurisprudence any decisions which they may deem erroneous, or dislike as obnoxious? Even in the most honest hands, such a power is virtually despotism; what it would become in dishonest ones, we shudder to think.

We have thus laid before our readers the whole of the plan for the amendment of our jurisprudence, which has been brought before the Legislature by the head of the legal profession. The matter is of such momentous importance, that though proceeding from so exalted a quarter, we have felt it our duty to speak our mind freely upon it. For bringing these proposals forward, the Lord Chancellor has deserved well of his country; and to many parts of his scheme we heartily wish success. But one word more. The Lord Chancellor informs us in his speech, that what he proposes will do little, if anything, more than revive the proposal of Lord Bacon. We are inclined to doubt this; for we think the Lord Chancellor's views in some places go much farther. There is, however, one passage in Lord Bacon's proposal for amending the laws of England which we hope his Lordship will ever keep in sight:—"I dare not advise to cast the law into a new mold. The work which I propound tendeth to pruning and grafting the law, and not to ploughing up and planting it again: for such a remove I should hold indeed for a dangerous innovation."

ERRATUM.—In the last line but one of the article on "Separate Estate in Land," in our last number (ante, p. 246), for "separate" read "equitable."

LAW AMENDMENT SOCIETY.

THE annual dinner of this society took place on Saturday, at the Ship, Greenwich. Lord Brougham occupied the chair, and was supported by Lord Lyttelton, Sir J. G. Shaw Lefevre, Mr. J. Stuart Mill, Mr. Taylor, M. P., Mr. Marsh, M. P., Mr. Hadfield, M. P., &c. About sixty gentlemen sat down to dinner. After the usual toasts,

The Chairman gave the toast of the evening, "The Amendment of the Law," remarking on the great improvement which had taken place in the last sixty or seventy years, before which it was the custom to say the law was as good as could be made. Amendments were still being made, though he was sorry to say the last twelve months were very nearly a blank. He considered that the great measure of Courts of Conciliation had now a very good chance of being carried into law. This measure had been time after time rejected in Parliament, and treated as fanciful and theoretical, but the change that had been made in it had got rid of almost all objections. That change consisted in excluding the compulsory part, and leaving the measure voluntary, but he had no doubt that after it succeeded as a voluntary measure they should have the compulsory part made law. One great defect in their law was that which prevented any man in a criminal proceeding, whether a felony or misdemeanour, from being examined as a witness, even though he should tender himself to be examined, and of course cross-examined. He disapproved of the French system, which allowed defendants in criminal cases to be compulsorily examined, and then cross-examined by the judge; by whom, with all the information and other materials of cross-examination before him, they were tortured so as to compel them either to confess or to forswear themselves. He considered that our examination of defendants in criminal cases should be confined to those instances in which they wished to be examined, and therefore exposed themselves to be cross-examined. He congratulated the society upon the extension of their principles into France, Belgium, and Holland, and also on the success which had attended the literary department connected with the amendment of the law during the last twelve months, referring in terms of commendation to a work on the discipline of the bar by Mr. Lefevre; also to another work by Mr. Phillips upon jurisprudence. But of all those works the most agreeable and valuable was Mrs. Austin's progress in the completion of the invaluable work of Mr. John Austin. The noble Lord called attention to the valuable measure amending the law relating to the transfer of land which had been devised and carried into law in the colony of South Australia, and had subsequently been adopted in the other Australian colonies, which measure afforded the solution of the great difficulties which the Legislature of this country had so long been struggling to overcome in amending this most important branch of the law. He regarded it as the greatest practical reform of the day, and congratulated the society on having the author of that system, Mr. Torrens, amongst its members present on that occasion. There had been a report sent in by the commission on the execution of the criminal law, and from all he had heard he was very much grieved to say that he did not think it would in all respects prove satisfactory. The noble Lord concluded by giving "The Amendment of the Law."

After some other toasts,

The Chairman, in proposing the concluding toast, "Colonial Justice," bore testimony to the wisdom and sound legal knowledge of the colonial judges generally, as exhibited in their decisions which had come under his cognisance as a member of the Judicial Committee of the House of Lords; and coupled with the toast the name of Mr. Torrens, to whose labours, as he had before remarked, jurists, both in the mother country and the colonies, were so much indebted.

Mr. Torrens, after acknowledging the compliment paid to himself, returned thanks on behalf of the colonial judges, who, he believed, as a body, well deserved the eulogies that had been bestowed upon them by the high authority of the venerable President. There were several legal questions of great interest, involving affairs of the mother country conjointly with those of the colonies, which he hoped would become the subject of discussion during the next session of the society. He referred to the want of reciprocity in the bankruptcy and insolvency laws as inflicting much injustice on colonial creditors. With reference to the remarks of the President upon the report of the "Penal Servitude Commission," he gathered from the article which appeared in The Times that morning, that transportation was to be resumed, and that Western Australia was recommended as a receptacle capable of absorbing all the convicts from this country. At that hour he would not go into the merits of this question as a deterring punishment, but as representing the Australian Colonies on that occasion, he must raise his voice in protest against this conclusion. It had been asked, what right had they to interfere while Western Australia was willing to receive convicts? He replied, the same right which an Englishman would have, were his neighbour to post a notice on the land adjoining his dwelling—"Filth and night soil may be shot here." There was a moral atmosphere as well as a political atmosphere; and you had no more right to pollute the one than to pollute the other. A shipment of some forty conditionally-pardoned felons had recently been made from Swan River to Sydney, and one of them taken in charge for drunkenness, was found to have concealed a complete set of pick-lock tools. Their properties and lives would be imperilled, their police and judicial expenses largely increased by the proposed resumption of transportation, and therefore they had a right to protest. They had passed an act in South Australia, making it penal in the captain of a ship to land in the colony any conditionally-pardoned criminal, and rendering such criminal liable to be imprisoned and shipped back whence he came by the first opportunity. This act might be declared "ultra vires," as repugnant to British law, but the colonists were determined to uphold it, and the position was calculated to induce collision between the Legislature and the Bench, than which nothing could be more disastrous. Her Majesty had no more loyal subjects than the Australian colonists; even the colonial born, when they speak of visiting England, say, "We are going home." They had shewn their loyalty by pouring out their wealth to relieve distress and famine in the mother country, and in contributing largely to every national testimonial, whether to commemorate those who fell in defence of the empire or the memory of a revered prince, and this was an evil requital, and would be received in Australia as the grossest insult. He begged to be excused if, as a colonist, he spoke warmly on this subject; but he yet hoped her Majesty's Ministers would consider well before they took a step which would alienate the affections of a million and a quarter of her Majesty's loyal subjects in Australia.

[We give these proceedings at greater length than usual in consequence of the important statements made by the Chairman and Mr. Torrens, relative to the expected report of the commission on transportation and penal servitude.—ED.]

HOUSE OF LORDS.—July 6.

The Jurisdiction of Justices Bill was read a third time and passed.

July 7.

STATUTE-LAW REVISION BILL.

The Lord Chancellor, in moving the second reading of this bill, said he must ask the House, considering its nature, to take it upon trust, placing reliance on the industry, skill, and fidelity of those by whom it had been prepared. The mere examination of the points to be found in the schedule had occupied him and his auxiliaries in the work for a considerable period of time, and he should merely give a brief account of the mode in which they had proceeded, hoping that their Lordships would give them credit for having accomplished their task with care and accuracy. It was, in the first instance, desirable, that by the side of every enactment which it was the object of the bill to repeal, the reason of that repeal should be given with some minuteness, and a column had been framed with that view, which it was proposed to strike out in committee. The House would, however, see, upon looking over the number of pages in the schedule, and the manner in which the column was worded, that great pains had been taken to examine every particular of the enactments it was proposed to sweep away from the statute-book, because of their having been repealed or having become obsolete, or being generated by a condition of society which had long passed away, thus rendering them no longer applicable. In the schedule those enactments were ranged under the general heads of those which had expired, those which were repealed by the operation of general terms, those which had been virtually repealed, those which had become superseded, and those which had become obsolete. The gentlemen engaged in the arduous work had, under his direction, prepared from time to time a printed paper containing any question or suggestion with respect to the doubts which arose in the course of their examination, and he could assure their Lordships that no single point had been neglected, and that every minute doubt and difficulty had been carefully examined by himself and the law officers. He had the more confidence that their Lordships would accept the result of those labours, inasmuch as his predecessor in office had the honour of presenting to their consideration, in 1861, a similar schedule, which had been received with a similar explanation as to the manner in which the work had been accomplished. In the prosecution of the present work he and his fellow-labourers derived great assistance from the fact that they were enabled to found their efforts, in a great degree, on a very remarkable document, which he thought must have been prepared under the immediate superintendence of Lord Bacon. He alluded to a manuscript which particularised the several statutes that had been repealed or had expired from the 3 Edw. 1 to the 7 Jac. 1. In addition to that, great assistance had been derived from another manuscript work, and from some other documents which existed, and which had been prepared, under the direction of the House, for the purpose of shewing how far the existing statute law did or did not represent the body of the statute law now in force. No pains, he might add, had been spared in the matter, and he trusted their Lordships would take the present bill, as they had done the bill of 1861, in which no error had been discovered. The noble and learned Lord concluded by moving the second reading of the bill.

Lord St. Leonards concurred in the opinion that the measure was entirely of a nature which called upon their Lordships generally to shew confidence in those by whom it was prepared. The noble and learned Lord then, after observing that there was a very general tendency to look to the last decided cases, and for that purpose to use reports by unauthorised reporters because they were published sooner than the regular reports, said, that as to revising the decisions of the judges so reported, the scheme was impracticable. The judges took great pains to give at length the grounds and reasons for the judgments which they pronounced, so as to satisfy all men that their judgment was mature, that it was founded upon authorities, and that it was justified by principles. Any set of men who were competent to revise those judgments, to correct that which was mistaken, and to reconcile that which was conflicting, would be worthy of seats in their Lordships' House; but he was inclined to think, that to embody their mere opinions in an act of Parliament would not be a satisfactory way to deal with the carefully-prepared judgments of the judges, and that it would be better to leave the task of revision to the Exchequer Chamber and the appellate jurisdiction of their Lordships' House. As he was one who objected to a code, it was satisfactory to know that there were so many difficulties in the way that they were not likely to have it; but at the same time he approved the preparation of a revised and expurgated edition of the statutes.

Lord Brougham thought it would be utterly impossible for their Lordships to do more than give a general supervision to a bill of this magnitude. If their Lordships wished for a digest, they must be content to take it on trust to a great extent, and to put confidence in those who were intrusted with the preparation of it. To insist on going into every separate provision would only be a roundabout way of refusing to have a digest at all. Jeremy Bentham always used to say that we had an invaluable repository of law in the judgments of our courts, and it would be of immense advantage to have the substance of these judgments well digested. It was quite a mistake to suppose that the noble and learned Lord had proposed to review the judgments of the courts; for, of course, that could only be done by the appellate jurisdiction, or by the Legislature. The commission proposed by his noble and learned friend would confine its labours to a digest of the matter and substance contained in various bodies of reports. He hoped that ere long we should have a Department of Justice—a measure which had been supported by his noble and learned friend on the woolsack, and in favour of which a unanimous vote of the House of Commons had been recorded.

Lord Cranworth wished to express, not only his concurrence with the bill, but also a somewhat more confident hope than had been indulged in by his noble and learned friend as to the completion of this work. There had already, under a bill introduced by the late Lord Campbell, been a revision of the statutes repealed since 1770. Now it was proposed to deal with all the statutes from Magna Charta down to the reign of James II. There would then remain an interval of only some eighty years to complete the revision of the statutes. It was true that the statutes of those years would not be dealt with quite so easily as those which formed the subject of the present bill, but he recommended that, with regard to these statutes, a digest should be commenced such as that which had been set on foot when he was Lord Chancellor. In his opinion such a digest was an absolutely necessary preliminary to a consolidation of the statute law.

Lord Chelmsford agreed in thinking it impossible, that a laborious work of this kind could be performed in any other way than that proposed, and suggested the advisability of printing in the bill the valuable reasons given for the repeal of the statutes, which would very much facilitate the labours of the Commons.

The Lord Chancellor proposed that these reasons, which it was intended should be ultimately struck out of the bill, should go down to the House of Commons as part of the measure. With regard to the other part of his plan, he only desired to do that which almost every State in America had already done, namely, to make a digest of the whole of their law, including the law contained in the reports of cases; and that book had been the standard law of the land from that time until now, with the approbation of all classes of the community. He was sorry that his noble and learned friend who had spoken on this part of his scheme had left the House, because he was going to appeal to an authority whom his noble and learned friend could hardly dispute—he would appeal from Lord St. Leonards to Sir Edward Sugden. Sir Edward Sugden had been the great codifier, condenser, and digester of reports on given subjects. In his admirable treatises he had canvassed the decisions, and marked the cases, that were objectionable and unfit to be cited as law, and the result was, that the judges, both in law and equity, were in the habit of saying upon the class of cases treated by his noble and learned friend, "You will find the whole law in Sir Edward Sugden's treatise." If that had been done with regard to certain subjects, undoubtedly it could be accomplished, in an equally satisfactory manner, with regard to other subjects, by a learned body of men appointed for the purpose.

Lord Brougham, on the part of his noble and learned friend, Lord St. Leonards, who had left the House, wished to say he was convinced, that if his noble and learned friend were present, he would admit that what he had done was all very well for a text writer. But what his noble and learned friend on the woolsack proposed to have produced was an authoritative work, binding on the courts with the force of an act of Parliament.

The bill was then read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—July 2.

The Lords' amendments to the Security from Violence Bill were considered and agreed to.

July 3.

PARTNERSHIP LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

Mr. Scholefield moved that this bill should be recommitted.

The House went into committee.

Mr. Crum-Ewing moved that the chairman report progress.

The committee then divided, and the numbers were—

For the motion.....	32
Against.....	19

Majority.... 13

The Chairman therefore left the chair, and the House resumed.

July 6.

ALTERATION OF THE CIRCUITS.

Mr. Hadfield asked the Government whether a bill would be introduced for the alteration of the circuits before the next assizes commenced, or at what other time.

Sir G. Grey said that the Lord Chancellor was in communication with the judges on the subject; but the intentions of the Government in respect to it were not yet finally formed.

The Removal and Punishment of Prisoners' Bill passed through committee.

July 8.

Mr. Paul's Poisoned Grain Prohibition Bill was read a second time.

Lord Raynham withdrew his Bill for the Protection of Domestic Servants and Apprentices.

Edward James, Esq., Q. C., has been appointed Attorney-General of the county palatine of Lancaster, in the room of Henry Bliss, Esq., Q. C., resigned.

We have to announce the decease of Edward Lewis Richards, Esq., Judge of the County Court Circuit No. 29, and Chairman of the Quarter Sessions for Flintshire.

HUDSON v. SLADE, Bart., and Others.—Our readers doubtless remember the action of Hudson v. Slade, Bart., and Others, which was brought in the Queen's Bench by Mr. Hudson against the Benchers of the Middle Temple, for assault and false imprisonment, in giving him into custody on a charge of taking a paper from the parliament chamber of that Honourable Society. (See 8 Jur., N. S., part 2, p. 583). The transaction which gave rise to it arose on the investigation of the charges brought against Mr. W. Digby Seymour, Q. C., M. P., when the plaintiff, who was called as a witness, on being shewn a certain paper, claimed it as his own, and refused to give it back to the Benchers. The cause was tried before Cockburn, C. J., in December of last year, when the jury, not being able to agree, were, with consent of counsel on both sides, discharged without giving a verdict. On the 2nd inst. it came on again for trial, before the same judge, when the record was withdrawn on the terms of a reference to an eminent person once a judge of the court (we believe Sir J. Coleridge), who is to say what is right to be done in the matter.

PETTY SESSIONS PRACTICE.

In thick 12mo., price 18s. cloth, lettered,

STONE'S PRACTICE OF PETTY SESSIONS.

With the Statutes, a List of Summary Convictions, and an Appendix of Forms. Seventh Edition. By THOMAS BELL and LEWIS W. CAVE, Esqrs., Barristers at Law. With a Supplement, bringing the Statutes and Cases up to 1863. 12mo., price 18s. cloth.

"It is remarkable for a rare combination of conciseness and clearness in the composition, which have recommended it to magistrates who have not been educated as lawyers, and to whom, therefore, the books written for the use of lawyers are often obscure by reason of their technicalities. The present editors have preserved this characteristic of Mr. Stone's volume in their own abundant additions to it."—Law Times.

* * The Supplement may be had by itself, price 3s. boards.

MALCOLM, Esqrs., Barristers at Law. In 1 vol. royal 8vo., 1853, price 1l. 16s. cloth.

In the parliamentary debate on disqualified witnesses (House of Commons, Feb. 12, 1861), referring to the case of Madan v. Catnach, Sir G. C. Lewis said, "He would read from Starkie on Evidence, which was known to be a standard work upon the subject, a statement of the law as applicable to the case (vide Examination as to Religious Belief, pp. 115, 116). That is a clear statement of the rule of law upon the subject."

THE JURIST.

LONDON, JULY 18, 1863.

In a former number (ante, p. 235) we made some observations upon the doctrine of the equity of a married woman to a settlement, particularly with reference to the case of Wallace v. Auldjo (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 687), recently decided by Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., and we proposed at a future time more minutely to examine the authorities upon which his Honor, in giving his judgment, relied.

The real point decided in Wallace v. Auldjo is this—that although a married woman has filed a bill in Chancery claiming a settlement out of her personal property in the hands of trustees, if she die before a decree, her children will not be entitled to file a bill to enforce a settlement.

His Honor fully admitted that the case could not be decided on general principles, inasmuch as any conclusion which, by that process of reasoning, would be arrived at, would be found to be at variance with the conclusion which would be arrived at from reasoning in the same way from other propositions well established with respect to the doctrine. So that the reasoning would be baffled, and the conclusion would not be worthy of being trusted. And his Honor agreeing apparently with an observation made by some former judge in adjudicating on a case arising out of the consideration of the doctrine now under discussion, thought that all that could be done was to deal with each case as it arose, by endeavouring to ascertain what had been the practice of the Court with reference to the particular question; that practice being only deducible from the decisions that had been made, and the opinions expressed, by learned judges in pronouncing those decisions.

Notwithstanding what his Honor lays down, it will be observed, that many of the judges appear to dispose of the cases upon this subject upon what they term general principles—doubtless not always in a manner satisfactory to any one who carefully considers them, nor without contradicting what has been laid down in other cases by other judges.

Independently, however, on general principles, and viewed only as a matter of practice, it seems to us, at least, doubtful, whether the case of Wallace v. Auldjo is rightly decided.

In giving judgment in that case, the first class of cases commented upon by his Honor, is that in which a bill has been filed, by which property of the wife has been brought under the dominion of the Court, but she has died without making any claim to a settlement. Sir J. Leach, in Steinmetz v. Halthin (1 Gl. & Ja. 64), which was the case of a simple administration suit on a bill filed by the trustees of a fund, although the married woman entitled to part of it died before decree and without putting in her answer, held, that her children might enforce a settlement in their own favour after her death, because, in his opinion the equity attached upon the filing of the bill, and the wife having died without waiving it, the children became entitled to the benefit of it.

In De la Garde v. Lempriere (6 Beav. 344), which was also an administration suit, in which a decree for taking accounts, and making certain inquiries, had been made, but the married woman entitled to the estate died, without having claimed a right to a settlement, Lord Langdale, M. R., dissenting from the decision of Sir J. Leach, held, that her children were not entitled to a settlement, as the equity could not be considered as attaching on the property on the filing of the bill. "If it did," said his Honor, "it must, I apprehend, be considered for the benefit of her children at the same time; but if so, she could not afterwards waive it for herself, because her equity and theirs are one: and as it is admitted that she can waive it after the institution of the suit, it seems to me to follow, that it is not an equity which, upon the filing of the bill, attaches upon the property for the benefit of the children."

This reasoning of Lord Langdale is not very accurate, for, by the same process he might have arrived at the conclusion, that even although a decree for a settlement had been obtained, the children could not, after the death of their mother, enforce their claim for one. He might have argued, that as after a decree for a settlement, the wife can waive her right to it, it follows that it is not such an equity which, upon obtaining the decree, attaches for the benefit of the children—a conclusion, contradicted by cases, upon which no one could seriously attempt to throw a shadow of doubt.

It will be observed, however, by any one attentively reading the case of De la Garde v. Lempriere, that Lord Langdale expressly founds his judgment upon the fact, that the wife had not claimed a settlement; and says enough to lead us to infer that the result would have been different had she done so. "In this case," said his Honor, "the wife filed no bill claiming a settlement, and she died before an order for a settlement was made. . . . The Court will not pay the wife's legacy to the husband if she desires a settlement, or unless she waives it; but when death has made any option on her part impossible—when nothing has occurred from which it can be concluded that she has made an option—there seems to be no reason why the legal right of the husband should not prevail."

Now, even assuming that the opinion of Lord Langdale, in overruling the decision of Sir J. Leach, is right, it seems evident, if full weight be given to his observations, that he considered children were entitled to a settlement in all cases where the wife had declared her option in favour of having one made, and had died without waiving it; but that where no option had been declared, then the legal rights of the husband ought to prevail.

In the subsequent case of Lloyd v. Mason (5 Hare, 153), Sir J. Wigram, V. C., said that if, in order to decide that case, an obligation had been imposed upon him of deciding between the conflicting opinions of Sir J. Leach and Lord Langdale, he should certainly have taken a great deal of time to consider the matter. A dictum, however, of Sir J. Wigram in Lloyd v. Mason seems (in the opinion of Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C.) to favour the conclusion at which his Honor arrived in Wallace v. Auldjo. Sir J. Wigram says, that "where a decree is made for the plaintiff, he may waive the decree; but the defendant is bound by it; but the mere filing a bill to enforce a right does not necessarily bind him." Now, the meaning of his Honor in this dictum is, perhaps, not quite so clearly expressed as it might have been; but in all probability it was intended to be confined to the case before him, and to the cases which he had just been considering, of Steinmetz v. Balhith and De la Garde v. Lempriere; in none of which had any settlement been claimed by bill for the wife.

Vice-Chancellor Kindersley next cites Osborn v. Morgan (9 Hare, 432), in which he considers, from the observations made by Vice-Chancellor Turner, that it was clear he did not hold with Sir J. Leach, that the mere filing of a bill had the effect of impressing a trust upon the property.

Now, with regard to Osborn v. Morgan, it has no application to the question in discussion; for the wife in that case was living, and the point his Honor had to consider was, whether the wife was entitled to a settlement out of a reversionary interest in personalty—a point which he determined adversely to the claim of the wife, upon the ground that her equity "only arose upon her husband's legal right to present possession." It is true, that his Honor says, "that the obligation of doing equity is not enforced upon the bill filed, because the bill may afterwards be dismissed." But this is a mere dictum, perhaps not intended to have so wide an application as it might have if detached from the case and the context; at all events, the reason given does not add to its weight; for why may not an equity attach upon the filing a bill, subject only to be enforced if the bill be not dismissed?

Vice-Chancellor Kindersley next claims a dictum of Lord Eldon in favour of his view upon this subject, where his Lordship says, in Murray v. Lord Elibank (10 Ves. 92), "The principle must be, that the wife obtained a judgment for the children, liable to be waived if she thought proper, otherwise to be left standing for their benefit at her death." Now, Lord Eldon, in this observation, merely confines himself to the case before him; he does not decide that it was essential to the success of the claim of the children that a judgment should be obtained by the wife, but that a judgment having been obtained by her children after her death, were entitled to the benefit of it.

There is, however, another very important dictum of Lord Eldon in a former part of the same case (p. 90), which seems entirely adverse to the decision of the Vice-Chancellor, and from which we cannot but infer, that, in Lord Eldon's opinion (at any rate, where the wife filed a bill claiming a settlement), her right attached upon the filing of the bill, and not merely upon her obtaining a decree. "I should have supposed," says Lord Eldon, "a decree made in the cause proceeded upon the right or equity in the wife at the filing of the bill; for decrees are only declarations of the Court upon the rights of the parties, when they begin to sue. The wife is entitled to call for a declaration that she then had a right to a provision for herself and her children; and yet it is clear, after such a bill filed, she might come into court, and consent to her husband having the fund entirely under his dominion. If she does not, the Court, by the decree, orders a proposal to be made for a settlement upon the wife and issue."

The last case referred to by Vice-Chancellor Kindersley is Lloyd v. Williams (1 Mad. 450). There the only point which it was necessary for Sir T. Plumer to decide was, whether, a contract having been entered into between the assignees of the husband, for a settlement upon the wife and her children, the children could enforce it after her death; and his Honor very rightly decided that they could do so. He went, however, rather out of his way in uttering the dictum, that the right of the children "can arise only out of contract, or under a decree." The authorities would, no doubt, have borne him out, had he confined himself to laying down the proposition, that the children have no independent equity of their own, but that they were able to enforce their right to a settlement when a contract or a decree for a settlement had been entered into or obtained before the death of their mother. But he does not cite any case which justified him in confining their claim to those two cases, or which determined that the children are not entitled to a settlement when it has been claimed by the bill of their mother, though she may have died before entering into a contract, or obtaining a decree.

We cannot but think that the more convenient rule would be, that the children should be held to be entitled to a settlement whenever their mother has exercised her option by claiming one. And if there is no distinct authority in favour of such a rule, there certainly does not appear to be any one against it.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—Your correspondent "J. B. S." seems to have mistaken the point in the case of Atkinson v. Holby; on a more minute investigation of the devise, he will probably convince himself that the great grandchildren in question took their estates tail directly, and not by implication, and that the real question was, whether cross remainders should be implied amongst the different stocks from the gift over, or that cross remainders should be, as it were, anticipated and defeated by implying, for no reason whatever, estates tail in the grandchildren. I quoted the case of Ives v. Legge (3 Durn. & E. 488), as illustrating the referential construction to which I referred; and "J. B. S.," if he will examine for himself, will find that the Lord Chancellor, holding the words "in default thereof" to include the case of the parent, tenant for life, dying without children, was nevertheless of opinion that the remainder over was vested, and took effect on the determination of the entail in the children. "J. B. S.'s" argument appears to be this—the word "heirs" being read "issue," therefore there could be no dispute about the expression, "in default thereof;" but this is a manifest fallacy. All I needed was a referential construction; when this was established, cross remainders would arise from a well-known general rule.

As to the case of Ginger d. White v. White (Willes, 348), I am astonished at the boldness with which "J. B. S." disputes the nature of it. It was a case in which the children of John had, after a life estate in John, been held to take estates tail; and a further question was, as to the construction of the words, "if John shall die without issue." Willes, C. J., says, "Let us see, in the next place, whether the words, 'In case John die without issue,' give him an estate tail in remainder. I am as clearly of opinion that they do not, and I think there are several cases that warrant this opinion, founded upon a rule of law which has never been contradicted in any case, and that there is not one case to support the contrary opinion" (p. 355). And, again (p. 358), "In the present case, the word 'issue' need not be rejected, but may have a reasonable construction, viz. to mean such issue as he had mentioned before." If "J. B. S." thinks (as I am led to conclude from some of his remarks) that he can partially adopt the referential construction for which I contend, and at the same time evade the implication of cross remainders, I flatter myself that he stands alone in that view of the case.

"The granddaughters are the first takers of the devised estates," writes "J. B. S."; if they had been under the devise, in the sense in which I understand "takers," I should have had no reason for occupying your valuable space, sir, at the length to which these comments have unavoidably grown.

Your obedient servant,
G. L.

THE STATE OF THE LAW COURTS.

Mr. Montagu Smith rose to call attention to the insufficient accommodation in the courts of law at Westminster and in the city. He hoped the Government would give serious attention to the subject, which was of considerable importance. When a judge was obliged to suspend his sittings because the state of the court was dangerous to the health of those who had to attend in it, and when the business of the Queen's Bench was thus impeded, it was surely high time that a remedy should be provided for so great a scandal. The Government were bound to provide proper accommodation for the administration of justice. The present courts were, however, utterly unworthy of the country, and totally unfit for the purposes they had to serve. They combined all the defects which a court could possibly exhibit, and were as objectionable on account of their want of space as on account of the absence of convenient arrangement. The bar might, perhaps, become acclimatised to the bad atmosphere of these places; but some consideration should also be given to the suitors, witnesses, jurors, and the general public, who were occasional visitors. Of the six or seven courts of Westminster, only two, the Queen's Bench and Exchequer, were in the least suitable for the transaction of business. The Common Pleas, in which a full third of the important law business of the country was conducted, was much too small, and extremely ill-ventilated. When there was a trial which attracted public attention, the court was most inconveniently crowded; and there was an utter want of that proper accommodation, and that regard for the health of those who were engaged in the court, which ought to be exhibited in a tribunal of so much importance. The Court of Common Pleas might probably be borne with, but the Bail Court and the Court of Exchequer Chamber, which were now used for purposes for which they were not originally intended, were utterly disgraceful. With the exception of three courts in the city of London, they were the worst he had ever seen. There was but one entrance, and the greatest difficulty was experienced in transacting the business with common decorum and decency. But the courts in the city of London were infinitely worse. In the city six courts were now required, because each of the superior courts had two courts. At Guildhall there were only two or at most three courts which were fit for the transaction of business. The Queen's Bench and the Common Pleas, although nothing to boast of, were large and well ventilated; but the others were the very reverse. There were two new courts, which seemed to have been constructed for the purpose of preventing business being satisfactorily done in them. They were modelled after the fashion of cucumber frames, being large square boxes with glass tops; and in hot weather it was impossible to remain in them without extreme danger to health. It was in one of these courts that Mr. Justice Mellor recently found himself unable to go on with the business. The occurrence was reported in the Times; and the report, appearing, as it did, in a paper read throughout Europe, was a disgrace to the Government which permitted such a state of things to continue. It was as follows:—

"The Lord Chief Justice, upon taking his seat to-day, said that he had received a note from Mr. Justice Mellor, to the effect that it was utterly impossible, with due regard to the health of the judge, the bar, and the jurors, to continue the sitting of a second Queen's Bench Court in what was called the South Court of Guildhall. The atmosphere at this time of the year was most oppressive, and as there were no proper means of ventilation, long continuance in it was attended with most pernicious and injurious results. His Lordship added, that Mr. Justice Mellor was about to leave for circuit, but, under these circumstances, he could not ask any other judge of the Queen's Bench to incur the serious inconvenience from which his Brother Mellor had suffered for several days. There would, therefore, be no second Court of Queen's Bench for the remainder of these sittings."

The consequence had been a great addition to the arrear of causes. But the report in the Times did not go far enough, for he believed that Mr. Justice Mellor complained also of the confined space of the court, and its inconvenience in every respect. On the following day the recorder for the city held a sitting in the same court. He presumed the city authorities acted on the principle that they might do what they liked with their own; but certainly the learned recorder must have sat in an atmosphere extremely injurious to his health. The city authorities were scarcely to be blamed for this state of things, because it was only in recent years that two courts had existed for each of the superior courts, and he believed that the additional accommodation provided was intended to be only of a temporary character. Unfortunately, however, it had existed without change for a number of years, and, notwithstanding numerous complaints, no effort had been made to remedy the inconvenience. Both at Westminster and in the city there were no waiting-rooms or retiring-places for witnesses, many of whom were women; and all attending the courts had either to haunt the purlieus or to remain in neighbouring taverns until they were called. No attempt had been made to give the bar any accommodation whatever. At Westminster there was no room where the bar could have a library. In that respect Edinburgh and Dublin were far before London, and a much better state of things existed even in Liverpool and other provincial towns. He did not wish to throw blame on the present Government. Only a year ago, indeed, they endeavoured to provide a remedy by proposing the establishment of a palace of justice. It was to be regretted that their scheme was defeated by a hasty division; but he was bound to say, that although the hon. and learned member for Cambridge University had the apparent honour of defeating it, he believed it received its death-wound from some unseen hand at the Treasury. He hoped the Government would either re-introduce that measure or bring forward one of a less comprehensive character, for if millions could be expended on fortifications, and if a large sum could be voted for the purchase of a building for a collection of stuffed animals, surely we could afford to have courts of justice worthy of the greatness and wealth of the country.

Mr. Malins said, that, bad as were the defects of the courts of law, they sank into insignificance compared with those of the courts of equity. By alterations made during the last three or four years the courts of equity had been turned into nisi prius courts. The Chief Commissioner of Works, who had visited Lincoln's-inn, would know that a vast amount of the administrative business of the Court of Chancery was conducted in chambers not larger than the room behind the Speaker's chair, and which were utterly unfit for the transaction of any business whatever. Then, the courts of equity themselves were in a worse state, as regarded accommodation, than even the courts of common law. There was no space for a jury box, no place for the jury to retire to when they had to consult together, no room for the bar and the solicitors, and the room into which the judge had to retire was about eight feet square. Two of the Vice-Chancellors sat in sheds that were erected twenty years ago, when the judicial staff was increased. There ought to be one great central building, where justice in all its branches could be duly and decorously administered, instead of having the courts scattered, as was now the case, in different parts of the town. The courts of equity might be kept together at Lincoln's-inn for an outlay of about 100,000*l.* only. If that were carried out, he would be glad to support the scheme for placing all the courts of law under one roof between Lincoln's-inn and the Temple. He would be happy to concur in that, or in any other situation which the Government might fix upon in which to provide suitable courts, with accommodation for the judges, the bar, the solicitors, the suitors, the jury, and the witnesses; so that there might be some approach made to the proper and decent administration of justice. When the Government contemplated making an expenditure at Kensington, or elsewhere, there seemed to be no lack of means for the purpose; and the Chancellor of the Exchequer ought not to refuse to provide the funds for an improvement so important and so imperatively called for as the present. He thought a million of money would suffice for the whole of the courts of law and equity, the interest upon which, at 3*l.* per cent., would be 30,000*l.* The suitors, he was sure, would be gladly taxed to pay that amount of interest; although, as the Solicitor-General knew, the means already existed for defraying it. He appealed, therefore, to the Government to take the necessary steps without delay for securing an object which ought to be the first concern of a civilised State.

Mr. Collier thought that the hon. and learned member for Truro deserved the thanks of the profession and the public for calling attention to what had long been a crying grievance. The complaints regarding the defective accommodation in Westminster-hall were very old, and Lord Erskine had once called the Court of Common Pleas a hole in the wall. There had been a vast increase of judicial business of late years, owing to a variety of causes, and the courts of law were entirely blocked up. There was a great delay in the hearing of cases, and if a case was entered in the Court of Queen's Bench the chances were that it would not be disposed of for twelve months. Indeed, it was a question with him, whether the existing judicial strength was sufficient for the transaction of all the business which now came before the courts. He regretted that the comprehensive scheme of the Lord Chancellor, for erecting one large building in which all the courts should be concentrated, had not been successful.

Mr. Whiteside instanced the Probate Court recently erected in Ireland as an instance of bad taste and inconvenient arrangement. He wished, before the Solicitor-General spoke on this subject, to put to him two questions—a particular question and a general one. The particular question related to the assimilation of the law in the two kingdoms. A person had lately been tried in Ireland for sending a threatening letter. There they might establish the proof of writing by comparison, but in England that law was made to apply only to civil cases; in Ireland it applied to both civil and criminal cases. He wished, therefore, to ask the Solicitor-General which was the best law; and whether, as there were two separate laws of evidence, the one in civil the other in criminal cases, that distinction should prevail. The other question he had to put was general. Elsewhere something was being done in the consolidation and assimilation of the statute law; he wished to know if anything was to be done in that respect for Ireland.

The Solicitor-General observed, that at that late period of the session it would, of course, be impossible for the Government to introduce any measure on the subject of the law courts with any chance of carrying it. He had, however, heard with great interest and satisfaction the observations made by so many of his hon. and learned friends relative to the deplorable condition of the courts compared with those of any other civilised country. He owned, if those eloquent statements from the other side had been made last year they might have been attended with considerable effect. The measure introduced by the Government, which was now described as an excellent comprehensive measure, was lost by a majority of one, and his hon. and learned friend for Warrington was that individual. He did not mean to say what would be the best course for the Government to take, with the uncertainty that might still prevail as to the views of Lincoln's-inn, and of other members sitting on the same side of the House with his hon. friend the member for Warrington. Undoubtedly the evil complained of required a remedy; but he should not so much regret the temporary continuance of the miserable state of things described as an attempt to meet it by incomplete or inadequate measures. The country had a real and important interest in providing properly for the administration of justice; and we had actually got the money in hand. Not one farthing need be voted by the House. There was every reason to believe that the funds in the Court of Chancery which might be legitimately used for this purpose would be adequate for the whole expense of the purchase of ground and buildings. He hoped this discussion would not be without fruit; but he certainly did not admit that the Government in 1869 was to blame for the continuance of the inconvenience complained of. With reference to the questions put by the right hon. gentleman the member for the University of Dublin, he had to state that the rule of evidence ought to be the same in criminal as in civil matters, and before long he hoped the anomaly would be removed. With regard to the general consolidation of the statutes, that was a very large undertaking, as to which he could give no promise at present. In England the work of expurgation and reduction was going on; when that was done, other undertakings might follow. He believed preparations were going on, and the work was actually in progress, with regard to the body of the Irish statutes.

Mr. Lygon protested against its being supposed that there were not serious objections to the great and comprehensive scheme which had been referred to. In his opinion it was unnecessary and extravagant. The better plan would be, to make use of existing accommodation, and add to it anything which might be needed. He was, however, content to leave the matter upon the Treasury minute of 1861, which shewed that it was probable that, according to the scheme proposed, a large charge would fall upon the public.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the Treasury minute referred to was not a statement of the outlay which the scheme must necessarily involve, but a maximum estimate of the sum which it might cost. Of late years the Treasury, warned by what had occurred with regard to public buildings, more especially with regard to the Palace of Westminster, had adopted the course of submitting to the House only maximum estimates—estimates of the highest sum which the works referred to could possibly cost. Unfortunately, hon. members had, in two or three cases, assumed that these were minimum estimates, which would be sure to be exceeded, and thus a certain amount of delusion had been produced. With respect to the building of new courts, the Government had been waiting for the concurrence of the House; and after the encouragement which they had received in the course of this debate, they would, no doubt, be ready to discharge the duty to which the hon. and learned member opposite had directed their attention.

Mr. O'Hagan said, that two gentlemen of capacity and experience were engaged under his direction in doing for the statutes of Ireland what was now being done for those of England, and he had no doubt that their work would be efficiently and successfully performed.

Mr. C. Bentinck, as a member of the committee which examined the scheme for the construction of the courts of justice, said that the opinion of that committee was, that the estimate was not a maximum but a minimum one, and that the building could not be erected simply out of the Sultors' Fund. The fact was, that it was the case of the Brompton boilers and Captain Fowke over again. It was a pet scheme of the present Lord Chancellor, then Attorney-General, who had his pet architect, Mr. Abraham. Mr. Abraham himself was forced to admit that if the proposition of Lincoln's-inn were accepted one-half the expense would be saved.

RE-ARRANGEMENT OF CIRCUITS.

In reply to Mr. Haughton.

The Solicitor-General said he believed a bill enabling her Majesty to re-arrange the circuits had been or would be immediately introduced into the House of Lords by the Lord Chancellor, with every hope that it would be passed this session. He was not aware of any proposal to increase the number of judges, or to effect any extensive alterations in the existing assize arrangements.

Tuesday, July 14.

Mr. Whalley obtained leave to introduce a bill to amend the law relating to persons charged with petty offences, and to enable such persons and their wives to give evidence.

Mr. B. Vaughan Williams, of the North Wales Circuit, has been appointed Judge of the County Court Circuit No. 29, vacant by the decease of Mr. Edward Lewis Richards.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, JULY 25, 1863.

THE Commissioners appointed to inquire into the operation of the Acts relating to Transportation and Penal Servitude have made their Report, which has been printed, and presented to both Houses of Parliament.

This commission, which bears date the 29th December, 1862, consisted of thirteen members, namely, Earl Grey, Lord Naas, Lord Cranworth, Lord Chelmsford, Mr. Bouverie, Sir John Pakington, Bart., Mr. Walpole, Mr. Henley, Lord Chief Justice Cockburn, Mr. Waddington, the Recorder (Russell Gurney, Esq.), the O'Connor Don, and H. C. E. Childers.

Lord Chelmsford took no part in the proceedings of the commission. The Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Henley declined to sign the Report, and have issued memoranda, stating their reasons for dissenting from it; and Mr. Childers, though signing the Report, has also issued a memorandum dissenting from a portion.

The remaining nine commissioners have signed it unreservedly. The Report consists of sixty-five pages, royal octavo, the memorandum (as it is called) of the Lord Chief Justice consists of twenty-three more, while those of Mr. Henley and Mr. Childers together make up about a page. The Report is accompanied by an extract from the minutes of the proceedings of the commission, shewing the amendments proposed to the draft Report, and the divisions thereon, and also by a voluminous Appendix of documentary and verbal evidence.

The Report begins with a statement of the changes made in the law by the Penal Servitude Acts, the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, and the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, and the manner in which sentences of penal servitude have been carried into effect under the latter. For legal readers it is unnecessary that we should state the provisions of the former, but, as indispensable to understanding the recommendation of the Commissioners, we proceed to give a short sketch of the latter; and difficult would it be to describe in the judicial history of any land, a similar record of misplaced humanity, imbecility, and absurdity:—

"Adult male convicts, sentenced in Great Britain, are first detained in separate confinement for about nine months, as a general rule, though latterly the average period of detention has not been so long. Milbank and Pentonville, and parts of Wakefield and Leicester prisons, have been used for this purpose, and some further accommodation has been recently provided elsewhere. In these prisons the convicts are chiefly employed in various trades, such as tailoring, shoemaking, weaving, and mat-making, in which they receive such instruction as may be necessary. After six months' good conduct, a convict in separate confinement may earn a weekly gratuity of 8d., 6d., or 4d., payable after his discharge, the rate being determined by his industry at work.

"At the end of his period of separate confinement, the convict is removed to another prison for associated labour on public works. The prisons now used for this purpose are, Chatham, Portsmouth, Portland, and Gibraltar, for able-bodied convicts; Dartmoor for light-labour convicts; and Woking for invalids. The convict establishment at Bermuda has been given up. The hulk system has been altogether abolished in England for some years. No convict has been confined in a hulk in this country since 1858, prisons having been erected at Portsmouth and Chatham, capable of containing a large number of convicts, with a separate sleeping cell for each.

"On the reception of a convict on public works the remaining term of his sentence is divided into three portions or stages of discipline, in the lowest of which there are three classes. Convicts are first placed in the first, second, or third class, according to the report received of their conduct whilst in separate confinement. Those in the second or third class are advanced to the next class if their conduct has been good for a period of three months. No convict is advanced beyond the lowest stage unless he is in the first class, and if, having attained to a subsequent stage, he is degraded for misconduct to a lower class than the first, he is removed back into the lowest stage, until, by good conduct for three or six months, as the case may be, he has regained the first class.

"The conduct of a convict on public works is denoted by the class he is in, and if bad, by a mark on his badge. A daily record of it is also kept by the warder under whom he works. His industry is recorded from day to day by the same officer, the signs used for the purpose being 'V. G.' (very good), 'G.' (good), and 'O.' (ordinary).

"Convicts in the lowest stage of public works are credited with the following gratuities, good conduct and industry being for this purpose separately considered:—

"For good conduct:—

First class, per week	-	-	-	6d.
Second "	"	-	-	4d.
Third "	"	-	-	nil.

"For industry:—

Very industrious (V. G.) at work, per week	-	-	-	9d.
Industrious (G.)	"	"	"	6d.
Not industrious (O.)	"	"	"	nil.

"These gratuities are cumulative: thus, a man of exemplary conduct and industry may earn 15d. a week; a man of fair conduct and industry, 10d.

"After a convict has passed through the lowest stage, his advance to each of the subsequent stages entitles him to an additional weekly gratuity of 4d. for industry, and to certain other indulgencies, in receiving letters and visits, and in diet."

We will continue this subject in our next number.

BILL FOR PROMOTING THE REVISION OF THE STATUTE LAW, BY REPEALING CERTAIN ENACTMENTS WHICH HAVE CEASED TO BE IN FORCE, OR HAVE BECOME UNNECESSARY.

THE above is the title of the bill introduced by the Lord Chancellor as the first instalment of his plan for the amendment of the law. It has already passed the House of Lords, with a few verbal amendments, and will in all probability pass the House of Commons, and become the law of the land in the course of a week.

The bill is as follows:—

Whereas, with a view to the revision of the statute law and particularly to the preparation of a revised edition of the statutes, it is expedient that certain enactments (mentioned in the schedule to this act) which have ceased to be in force otherwise than by express and specific repeal, or have, by lapse of time and change of circumstances, become unnecessary, should be expressly and specifically repealed: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

SECT. 1. The enactments described in the schedule to this act are hereby repealed, subject to the exceptions in the schedule mentioned:

Provided, that where any enactment not comprised in the schedule has been confirmed, revived, or perpetuated by any enactment hereby repealed, such confirmation, revival, or perpetuation shall not be affected by such repeal;

And the repeal by this act of any enactment shall not affect any act in which such enactment has been applied, incorporated, or referred to;

And this act shall not affect the validity or invalidity of anything already done or suffered—or any right or title already acquired or accrued, or any remedy or proceeding in respect thereof—or the proof of any past act or thing;

Nor shall this act affect any principle or rule of law or equity, or established jurisdiction, form, or course of pleading, practice, or procedure, or existing usage, office, or appointment, notwithstanding that the same respectively may have been in any manner affirmed, recognised, or derived by, in, or from, any enactment hereby repealed;

Nor shall this act revive or restore any jurisdiction, office, duty, franchise, liberty, custom, privilege, restriction, exemption, usage, or practice, not now existing or in force.

2. This act shall extend to England only.

3. This act may be cited as "The Statute-law Revision Act, 1863."

This schedule is intended to comprise (as the preamble to the bill states) enactments which have ceased to be in force, otherwise than by express and specific repeal, or have, by lapse of time and change of circumstances, become unnecessary.

I.—For the purposes of the schedule, six different classes of enactments are considered as having ceased to be in force, although not expressly and specifically repealed, namely, such enactments as are—

(1.) Expired.—That is, enactments which, having been originally limited to endure only for a specified period, by a distinct provision, have not been either perpetuated or kept in force by continuance, or which have merely had for their object the continuance of previous temporary enactments for periods now gone by effluxion of time:

(2.) Spent.—That is, enactments spent or exhausted in operation by the accomplishment of the purposes for which they were passed, either at the moment of their first taking effect, or on the happening of some event, or on the doing of some act authorised or required; as, for instance, 1 Hen. 5, c. 6, of which the marginal abstract is:—"No actions shall be brought by Welshmen in respect of injuries sustained in the late Rebellion:" and see, for an instance of another kind (the event on which the operation of the act becomes spent being the death or failure of issue of a sovereign), 1 Eliz., c. 6, in the schedule:

(3.) Repealed in general terms.—For instance, by the repeal (by 5 Eliz., c. 4, s. 1,—s. 2, in Ruffhead's edition) of "as much of all the statutes heretofore made, and every branch of them, as touch or concern the hiring, keeping, departing, working, wages, or order, of servants, workmen, artificers, apprentices, and labourers, or any of them"—no statute being specified as intended to be comprised within this repeal, and the repeal, consequently, being, though express, yet not specific:

(4.) Virtually repealed.—Where an earlier enactment is inconsistent with, or is rendered nugatory by, a later one; as, for instance, 20 Hen. 3, Stat. Merton, c. 7, relating to the refusal of heirs to marry at the request of their lords, is virtually repealed by 12 Car. 2, c. 24, which abolishes military tenures:

(5.) Superseded.—Where a later enactment effects the same purposes as an earlier one, by repetition of its terms or otherwise; as, for instance, 21 [& 22] Jac. 1, c. 2, "for the general quiet of the subject against all pretences of concealment," is superseded by the Nullum Tempus Act, 9 Geo. 3, c. 16, which is for the most part a reproduction, word for word, of the provisions of the earlier act, some additional provisions being inserted, but the earlier act being left to stand unrepealed:

(6.) Obsolete.—(i.) Where the state of things contemplated by the enactment has long ceased to exist; as, for instance, in the case of 13 Edw. 1, Stat. Westm. 2, c. 43, which prohibits hospitaliers and templars bringing any man into plea before the keepers of their privileges for matters cognisable in the king's court:

(ii.) Where the enactment is of such a nature as to be no longer capable of being put in force, regard being had to the alteration of political or social circumstances; as, for instance, the 4 Edw. 3, c. 12, providing that a cry shall be made that none be so hardy to sell wines but at a reasonable price . . . and that assay shall be made of such wines two times every year . . . and all the wines that shall be found corrupt shall be poured out, and the vessels broken. . . ."

II.—For the purposes of the schedule, enactments are considered unnecessary where the provisions are of such a nature as not to require, at the present day, statutory authority. An instance is—the 28 Edw. 3, c. 13, "that none of what condition that he be, by art or engine, shall disturb any ship charged with merchandises to come to any port of England, but to the port where the masters, mariners, and merchants will first of their free will arrive; nor, after they have arrived, shall meddle with the sale of the same merchandises, nor disturb the merchants nor their servants, that they may not themselves, by their own hands, according as to them shall seem best for their profit, sell and deliver their merchandises at what time and to whom it shall them best please."

In many instances it appears, from entries in the third column, that enactments comprised in the schedule have been already expressly and specifically repealed. They are inserted in the schedule, in order that a complete and simultaneous repeal may be effected of the whole statute or act (as the case may be). Such a sweeping repeal is in various ways convenient, and particularly for simplifying the notes of repeal to be made in the intended revised edition.

The schedule of the Statute-law Revision Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 161), was framed on the basis of the Register of Public General Acts (mainly prepared under the late Statute-law Commission, and printed for the period from the Union of Great Britain and Ireland to 1858, under an order of the House of Lords of the 7th July, 1859), which furnished nearly complete materials for ascertaining the actual condition of the statutes of the period covered by that schedule.

But the statutes of the period covered by the present schedule are all of them much earlier in date than the time to which the register has been carried back, namely, the session of the 11 Geo. 3. In the preparation, therefore, of the present schedule, the register has only been of service, so far as it records (in its fifth column) the extent to which those earlier statutes are affected by the legislation of times subsequent to the 10 Geo. 3. For assistance in ascertaining how far the legislation of times anterior to the 11 Geo. 3 has affected the statutes of the period covered by the present schedule, recourse has been had to the editions of the statutes by Ruffhead and by Raithby (with the lists of expired and of repealed statutes given in Raithby's Index), and to the following compilations, having more or less of a similar character with the present schedule; namely,

- (1.) The expurgatory list prepared by Mr. Anstey and Mr. Rogers (Statute-law Board) of public general statutes by them proposed to be declared no longer in force. Ordered by the House of Commons to be printed the 29th January, 1855.
- (2.) The list of the statutes from Magna Charta to the 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict., prepared by the late Sir Henry Seton, partly printed and partly in manuscript, referred to in the First Report of Mr. Bellenden Ker to the Lord Chancellor (Statute-law Board), dated the 12th August, 1853, p. 5.
- (3.) The list of statutes and parts of statutes repealed during the period from the 41 Geo. 3 (U. K.) to the 22 Vict., inclusive, chronologically arranged, subjoined to Part I of the Index to the Statutes compiled by order of the Select Committee on the Library of the House of Lords.
- (4.) A Chronological Index to the Statutes at Large, from Magna Charta to the 23rd July, 1830, by Richard Lowndes. 8vo., London, 1831.
- (5.) The Chronological Tables of the Statutes from Magna Charta to the 6 Geo. 4, contained in Tyrrwhitt & Tyndale's Digest of the Public General Statutes. 4to., London, 1822-1826.
- (6.) A manuscript volume in the British Museum (Harl. MSS. 244), referred to in the Introduction to the first volume of the Statutes of the Realm, p. xxvi, and therein described as "containing the plan of an elaborate report, particularising the several statutes from the Statute of Westminster 1, 3 Edw. 1, to the 7 Jac. 1, 1609, then actually repealed or expired, and also the statutes thought fit either to be absolutely repealed, or to be repealed, and new laws to be made in their place."

With a view to ascertain which of the statutes of the period covered by the present schedule may be properly treated as not in force at this day, text-books, digests, and reported cases have, of course, also been resorted to for information as to the condition of those statutes.

The early statutes stand in a peculiar position with relation to modern law. Many of their provisions remain, in some sense, embodied in the existing law, notwithstanding that their immediate subject-matter may no longer exist. [To mention one instance—6 Edw. 1, Statute of Gloucester, c. 5, respecting the writ of waste, forms part of the existing law as to waste, although the writ of waste has been abolished.] This peculiarity has always been borne in mind in the compilation of the schedule, and the very special terms of the saving in the repealing clause of the bill have been adopted in order to preclude any apprehension of a substantive alteration of the law being produced by the repeal of any of these early statutes.

SCHEDULE.

The words and figures in italics are intended to be struck out at a late stage of the bill.

This Schedule is intended to be read as referring to the edition prepared under the direction of the Record Commission, intitled "The Statutes of the Realm; printed by Command of His Majesty King George the Third, in pursuance of an Address of the House of Commons of Great Britain. From original Records and authentic Manuscripts." The dates and titles of the statutes and acts are taken from that edition; the chapters (before the division into separate acts) are described by the marginal notes, and the enactments cited in terms are cited from the translation into English, or the original English, given in that edition.

The repeal by the present act of a part of a statute or act set out or referred to in the terms of the translation given in that edition is intended to operate on the original Latin or Norman French of which the translation is set out or referred to, as if the original itself were in like manner set out or referred to.

A description or citation of a portion of a statute or act is intended to be inclusive of the words, section, or other part referred to as forming the beginning, or as forming the end, of the portion comprised in the description or citation.

The edition of Ruffhead referred to is that by Serjeant Runnington, 1786.

The edition of Raithby referred to is the octavo edition.

Then follows the body of the schedule, consisting of 190 folio pages.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Thursday, July 16.

ALTERATION OF CIRCUITS BILL.

The Lord Chancellor, on moving the second reading of this bill, explained that its object was to confer upon her Majesty additional powers with reference to the alteration of circuits, and that it was rendered necessary by the provisions of the law as to the appointment of revising barristers. He did not at present think it desirable to enter into an explanation of the changes which it was intended to make in the circuits; but he trusted that the arrangement would be satisfactory, and would come into operation at the next Spring Assizes. The noble and learned Lord moved that the bill should be read a second time.

Lord Brougham entirely approved of the bill.

The Earl of Poles was understood to ask whether the bill would empower the Sovereign to abolish the holding of assizes in places in which they were now held.

The Lord Chancellor said that the power referred to by the noble Earl was not included in this bill, because it already existed under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 71.

The bill was then read a second time.

The Misappropriation by Servants Bill was read a second time.

Friday, July 17.

The Jurors' Remuneration Bill was withdrawn.

The Alteration of the Judges' Circuits Bill passed through committee.

The Misappropriation by Servants Bill passed through committee.

Monday, July 20.

The Alterations in the Judges' Circuits Bill was read a third time, and passed.

The Register of Voters Bill was withdrawn.

Tuesday, July 21

The Misappropriation by Servants Bill was read a third time, and passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Wednesday, July 15.

The Jurisdiction of Justices Bill was read a second time.

Thursday, July 18.

The Poisoned Grain, &c. Prohibition Bill passed through committee.

STATUTE-LAW REVISION BILL.

The Solicitor-General moved the second reading of this bill.

Sir F. Kelly approved of the bill.

Mr. Hennessy moved that the bill be read a second time on this day two months, with a view to its being considered next session in a select committee. He also expressed an opinion that it was an infringement of the Commons' privileges for the House of Lords to send down such a bill, referring as it did largely to questions of religion, trade, and taxation.

The Solicitor-General said that the work of revision had been carefully done, but it must be taken on trust. It was in the power of any hon. member to prevent any such measure passing, but he doubted whether the hon. and learned gentleman used his influence well, in obstructing a bill which, if it became law, would reflect credit upon the session. He proposed to set down the bill for committee on Wednesday next.

Mr. Bentinck supported the amendment, and said he was authorised by the right hon. gentleman the member for Oxfordshire, to state that he also was opposed to the bill passing the present session.

Mr. Lygon said no possible harm could accrue from delay.

The House divided—

THE JURIST.

LONDON, AUGUST 1, 1863.

WE resume the consideration of the Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the operation of the Acts relating to Transportation and Penal Servitude.

On the subject of gratuities for good conduct and industry, we may advert to the following statement in the Appendix, p. 195:—

"The prisoner who received the largest sum was one whose sentence was 'penal servitude for life;' but she was released on conditional pardon at the end of 7 years, 8 months, and 19 days."

The sum here alluded to was 15*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.*, but the nature of the prisoner's crime is not stated. This was at the female prison, Brixton, and several other instances of gratuities received by prisoners are mentioned.

"On the passing of the act of 1857, a circular was addressed by the Secretary of State to all judges, recorders, and chairmen of quarter sessions, explaining the provisions of the act; containing the scale of remissions intended to be granted, and giving full information as to the manner in which it was proposed to carry into effect sentences of penal servitude; making it distinctly known, that while a certain fixed term of the sentence would in all cases be inflicted, a remission of the remaining portion of it would be granted to those convicts, sentenced for any terms of years, whose conduct in prison should be such as not to deprive them of that indulgence. The scale of remissions laid down, which is still in force, varied from one-sixth of the term of the sentence, in sentences of three years, to one-third, in sentences of fifteen years and upwards. In the first instance, it was intended that the remission should, in general, be unconditional, and not qualified by a revocable ticket of leave; but this intention was subsequently departed from, and, as a rule, revocable licenses were issued. It was stated in the circular, that sentences for life would require to be dealt with separately, and to be considered according to the special circumstances of each case.

"A convict is considered entitled to the remission of the proportion of his sentence mentioned in the circular, unless he forfeits his right to this indulgence by misconduct or idleness. In such cases he is sentenced, by a special order of one of the directors of convict prisons, to lose the whole or part of the remission to which he would be otherwise entitled. If, however, towards the close of his sentence, his name has not appeared in the 'defaulters' book' for at least six months, his case is taken into consideration with reference to the time of his remission forfeited, and a certain portion of it, not exceeding three-fourths, may be restored for good conduct and industry. The practice has been to restore one-half the forfeited time, if the convict has been clear of all unfavourable prison reports for at least twelve months, and one-third if he has been clear for less than twelve months, but for at least six months."

The form of a ticket of leave is then given (p. 15); and it appears that in December, 1856, the Executive, deeming it hard to cancel such documents, as matter of course, in the event of the convict's relapsing into crime, altered the ticket to its present form, by which the convict is merely told that such conduct may produce that consequence.

"Notice was given in November, 1861, that the regulations as to the remission of a portion of the sentence, should not apply to convicts thereafter sentenced to penal servitude while holding tickets of leave; and this exception has recently been extended, prospectively, to all convicts under a second, or subsequent sentence of penal servitude.

"A certain number of convicts have been from time to time selected from amongst those employed on public works, for removal to Western Australia, which is the only colony to which convicts can now be sent. It is stated in the circular of the 27th June, 1857, before referred to, that the selection would be made, as far as possible, from among those whose sentences were for terms of not less than seven years, and that they would be removed to a colony after having undergone about one-half of their original sentence; but these regulations have been in many cases departed from, in consequence of the demand for convicts in the colony, and the limited number eligible for removal to it."

The tickets of leave and mark system in Western Australia are then explained (p. 17), together with the Irish system (p. 18), and also the system observed here with female offenders (p. 18), and juvenile male convicts under the age of sixteen (p. 17). It appears, inter alia, that some convicts in Western Australia are employed as constables (p. 17), the working of which may be seen in the case of the notorious convict "Red-path;" whose crimes are, doubtless, well known to our readers, and are such as in any rationally-governed country would have brought him to the scaffold, the mines, the galleys, or real penal servitude. His case is given thus, in the Appendix, p. 262:—

"The following are the principal dates:—He was convicted and sentenced for life in January, 1857; despatched from England in August, 1858; arrived in the colony on the 23rd November, 1858; discharged with ticket of leave on the 3rd June, 1861.

"By the ordinary operation of the rule for transported men, he would have been eligible for a ticket of leave in January, 1863; if he had been 'exemplary,' or earned four marks a day during all his time in the colony, he would have become eligible about January, 1862; but it is by means of the large number of marks allotted to constables that he must have acquired his discharge so early as June, 1861."

The officer reporting the case remarks:—"The rules generally will, doubtless, undergo revision as soon as the commission, now sitting, has closed its inquiries."

But the indulgences and advantages of convicts do not end here. The statement recently made, that the prisoners are often called in from their work during rain, when free labourers would remain out, is admitted, and justified by the Commissioners, on a reason supplied by the late Sir Joshua Jebb—the difficulty of drying the clothes of a great number of men at once (p. 41).

Again: corporal punishment has been resorted to in the public works prisons, for acts of violence by prisoners against their fellow-convicts, or their officers. These acts of violence appear to have been common, and corporal punishment has been used for their repression. Formerly, it seems, four dozen lashes with a cat were inflicted, but here, again, (soi disant) humanity stepped in, and a lighter cat is now used, and the lashes restricted to two dozen, while the punishment sometimes cannot be inflicted without considerable delay (p. 43).

One more, and very important privilege of ticket-of-leave-men remains to be noticed, which comes to us on the testimony of the very best witness on the subject—Sir Richard Mayne—as appears from the following questions and answers:—

"I think you stated, that, even in the case of the ticket-of-leave-men frequenting suspected houses haunted by thieves, when the police see them, and also thieves in the house, they may warn the keeper of the house against the thieves, but they are not allowed to point out the ticket-of-leave-men?—There is a distinct order given to the police to that effect; it was given by me, believing that that was the view that the Legislature and the authorities desired should be carried out.

"What, in your opinion, is the natural tendency and effect of such a system upon those men who are holders of tickets of leave, and who are frequenters of these houses?—The natural effect is to give them opportunities to commit crime, which they might otherwise not have."

In a previous answer the witness stated:—

"There was this difference as to the observation of the police being incidentally kept upon them, that, with regard to those who were released on ticket of leave, they were directed not to notice them, as they were looked upon as persons who must be considered reformed, and therefore the police were not to notice them, lest it might make them known, and interfere with their getting employment."

Much has been said in disparagement of legal fictions, but the passage which we have marked in italics introduces us to a fiction of police law which equals any of them in absurdity.

Such being the system which the Commissioners had to review, the first question that presents itself is, how did it work? One would have supposed that the state of society during the last winter, especially in the metropolis, where burglary and garotting took up their head quarters, and any person who ventured abroad after dark ran, at least, the risk of being knocked down, plundered, and half strangled, and twenty-three persons were convicted of the latter offence at a single session of the Central Criminal Court, sufficiently answered this question. But not so: the Government inspector of prisons, the late Sir Joshua Jebb, addressed a letter to the newspapers, in which he dogmatically informed the public that the system worked well, and many persons, including some members of Parliament, during the debates on Mr. Adderley's bill, to which we shall presently advert, boldly asserted that there was no increase of crime whatever. Let us hear what the Commissioners—to whom it would be a gross libel to impute any undue want of consideration for criminals—say on this subject:—

"Confining our view to the last seven years, we find, in England and in Ireland, that there was a very considerable decrease in the number of convictions in the years 1858 and 1859, as compared with the two preceding years; that in the year 1860 crime was nearly stationary; but that in the last two years there has been a very large increase in both countries. In the year 1862, as compared with 1860, the number of convictions rose in England from 12,066 to 15,312, and in Ireland from 2979 to 3796; and the number of sentences of death and penal servitude in England from 2267 to 3196, and in Ireland from 304 to 585. In England the increase has been especially remarkable in the number of serious crimes within the metropolitan police district, where, as appears by returns laid before us by the Chief Commissioner of Police, robberies with violence have risen from 32 in 1860 to 97 in 1862, and burglaries in the same time from 179 to 259. In Scotland there was a diminution in the number of convictions in the years 1859 and 1860; no substantial variation in 1861; and an increase in 1862, not, however, extending to cases followed by sentences of death or penal servitude."

As connected with what is stated in the portion of this passage which we have marked in italics, it may be observed, that, in 1860, the wholesome warning, in tickets of leave, that they would be cancelled in the event of misconduct, was discontinued, and that in 1861 capital punishment was abolished for all violations of the law, except treason, murder, and one or two more; leaving such offences as wounding with intent to murder, highway robbery with violence, burglary with violence, exhibiting false lights with intent to bring ships into danger, &c., to be dealt with by the phantom punishment of penal servitude.

Having described the Augean stable, we should now proceed to the cleansing process recommended in the Report of the Commissioners, but want of space compels us to break off for the present.

CORRIGENDUM.—In the leading article of last week, p. 267, col. 2, line 3 from end, for “describe,” read “find.”

SEPERATE USE OF REAL ESTATE.

A CORRESPONDENT, referring to the case of Lechmere v. Brotheridge (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 705), and to the remarks on it (ante, p. 244), considers that in neither was sufficient weight allowed to the decision of Sir J. Leach in Minot v. Eaton (4 L. J., O. S., Ch., 134). That case was brought to the notice of the plaintiff's counsel, and cited to the Court after the commencement of the argument for the defendant, and was received by the Master of the Rolls as an important authority, but it is not noticed in the judgment, although the Court took pains to distinguish the less opposite case of Atcheson v. Le Mann (23 Law T. 302). Neither case, however, amounts to a decision on the question in the case under discussion. In Atcheson v. Le Mann it was held that the wife took an estate for life, with a testamentary power; and Sir J. L. Turner, L. J., only expressed an opinion that she would have had the same power under a gift of the fee to her separate use. In Minot v. Eaton the devise was to trustees, upon trust for the testator's widow during her life, and after her death, for Mrs. P., her heirs and assigns, not to be subject to the debts or control of her husband, but for her own use only, and subject to be disposed of by her in her lifetime, or by her will, as she might think proper. But if Mrs. P. died before the widow, the property was given over to her husband. During the widow's life Mr. and Mrs. P. executed a mortgage of the reversion in fee by deed of lease and release. It was contended that the words “subject to be disposed of,” &c., were merely part of the description of Mrs. P.'s separate interest, and did not give her a power independent of that interest; and if that was so, she could not dispose of her separate estate without a fine. The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that there was no distinct power, but that the separate estate carried with it a power of disposition, and he decided the case in favour of the mortgagee on that ground. The case is valuable as shewing the opinion of an able judge; but as there was unquestionably a power of appointment by express limitation, if there was none as incident to the separate estate, the decision, apart from the reasons given for it, is not of much importance.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION.—MICHAELMAS TERM.

THE Council of Legal Education have approved of the following rules for the public examination of the students.

The attention of the students is requested to the following rules of the Inns of Court:—

“As an inducement to students to propose themselves for examination, studentships shall be founded

of fifty guineas per annum each, to continue for a period of three years, and one such studentship shall be conferred on the most distinguished student at each public examination; and further, the examiners shall select and certify the names of three other students who shall have passed the next best examinations; and the Inns of Court to which such students belong may, if desired, dispense with any terms, not exceeding two, that may remain to be kept by such students previously to their being called to the Bar. Provided that the examiners shall not be obliged to confer or grant any studentship or certificate unless they shall be of opinion that the examination of the students they select has been such as entitles them thereto.”

“At every call to the Bar those students who have passed a public examination, and either obtained a studentship or a certificate of honour, shall take rank in seniority over all other students who shall be called on the same day.”

“No students shall be eligible to be called to the Bar who shall not either have attended during one whole year the lectures of two of the Readers, or have satisfactorily passed a public examination.”

RULES FOR THE PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR HONOURS, OR CERTIFICATES ENTITLING STUDENTS TO BE CALLED TO THE BAR.

An examination will be held in next Michaelmas Term, to which a student of any of the Inns of Court who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship or honours, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name at the treasurer's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs on or before Thursday, the 22nd day of October next; and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship or other honourable distinction, or whether he is merely desirous of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar.

The examination will commence on Thursday, the 29th day of October next, and will be continued on the Friday and Saturday following.

It will take place in the Benchers' Reading-room of Lincoln's-inn; and the doors will be closed ten minutes after the time appointed for the commencement of the examination.

The examination by printed questions will be conducted in the following order:—

Thursday morning, the 29th October, at half-past nine, on Constitutional Law and Legal History; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on Equity.

Friday morning, the 30th October, at half-past nine, on Common Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on the Law of Real Property, &c.

Saturday morning, the 31st October, at half-past nine, on Jurisprudence and the Civil Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, a paper will be given to the students including questions bearing upon all the foregoing subjects of examination.

The oral examination will be conducted in the same order, during the same hours, and on the same subjects, as those already marked out for the examination by printed questions, except that on Saturday afternoon there will be no oral examination.

The oral examination of each student will be conducted apart from the other students; and the character of that examination will vary, according as the student is a candidate for honours or a studentship, or desires simply to obtain a certificate.

The oral examination and printed questions will be founded on the books below mentioned, regard being had, however, to the particular object with a view to which the student presents himself for examination.

In determining the question whether a student has passed the examination in such a manner as to entitle him to be called to the Bar, the examiners will principally have regard to the general knowledge of law and jurisprudence which he has displayed.

A student may present himself at any number of examinations until he shall have obtained a certificate.

Any student who shall obtain a certificate may present himself a second time for examination as a candidate for the studentship, but only at one of the three examinations immediately succeeding that at which he shall have obtained such certificate; provided, that if any student so presenting himself shall not succeed in obtaining the studentship, his name shall not appear in the list.

Students who have kept more than eleven terms shall not be admitted to an examination for the studentship.

THE READER ON CONSTITUTIONAL LAW and LEGAL HISTORY will expect candidates for honours to be well acquainted with the origin and progress of our Laws and Constitution, as explained in chap. 8, part 3, of Hallam's History of the Middle Ages.

He will expect them to be well acquainted with the Great Charter (on which they will find an excellent Commentary in Sullivan's Lectures, 39, 40, 41, 42, and 43, pp. 343 to 381); with the reigns of Edward I and Richard II; with the chapters in Hallam's Constitutional History, which contain an account of the reigns of Henry VII, Henry VIII, Elizabeth, the Stuarts, William III, and Anne; with the State Trials in the reign of Henry VIII, of the Duke of Buckingham, in Mary, of Throgmorton; the remarkable Trials during the reigns of the Stuarts and William III; with the History of the Law of Treason, Libel, and of the Tenure of Land, down to the beginning of this century.

He refers those candidates especially to the 26th, 27th, 28th, and 29th chaps. in the 3rd vol. of Lord Brougham's Political Philosophy, to the close of the 23rd chap. of Hume's History, vol. 3, p. 296, 8vo. ed., the passage beginning "Thus far have we pursued the History of England," &c.; to the 3rd vol. of Millar's History; to the Preface to Gilbert on Uses, by Lord St. Leonards; the Preface to the State Trials; the 5th chap. of the 2nd vol. of Blackstone's Commentaries (edition in which the text is preserved); and chaps. 1, 2, and 3 of Mr. Justice Foster's Work on the Crown Law.

All candidates will be expected to know the principal events in English History from the Conquest to the Accession of George III; to have an accurate knowledge of the reigns of the Stuart Kings, of Magna Charta, the Petition of Right, the Bill of Rights, the Law of Treason, and the Act of Settlement.

THE READER ON EQUITY proposes to examine in the following books:—

THE JURIST.

LONDON, AUGUST 8, 1863.

WE proceed to conclude our observations on the Report of the Commissioners on Transportation and Penal Servitude. Having described the existing system of penal servitude, and declared their conviction of the necessity for reform in it, the Commissioners, in the end of their Report (p. 72) give the following as "the most important of their recommendations:"—

- "1. That sentences of penal servitude should not in future be passed for shorter terms than seven years.
- "2. That the principle, already recognised by the law, of subjecting re-convicted criminals to severer punishment, should be more fully acted on.
- "3. That convicts sentenced to penal servitude should be subjected, in the first place, to nine months separate imprisonment, and then to labour on public works for the remainder of the term for which they are sentenced, but with the power of earning, by industry and good conduct, an abridgement of this part of their punishment.
- "4. That all male convicts, who are not disqualified for removal to a colony, should be sent to Western Australia during the latter part of their punishment.

"5. That those who may be unfit to go there, but may earn an abridgement of their punishment, and who may consequently be discharged at home under license, should be placed under strict supervision till the expiration of the terms for which they were sentenced, and that the necessary powers should be given by law for rendering this supervision effectual."

The Commissioners also recommend that, in order to guard against premeditated outbreaks among the convicts, they be divided into classes, kept separate from each other (p. 42); and observe that the restrictions imposed on the corporal punishment of convicts for acts of outrage against the officers in charge of them, or their fellow convicts, have been injudicious (p. 43); that the practice of giving a convict half-a-day's schooling a week, in the hours that would otherwise be devoted to labour, is objectionable (p. 44); that communication between convicts and free labourers ought not to be allowed (Id.); and that the system of gratuities to convicts ought to be put under better regulation (p. 48). They also think the present remission of punishment in Australia excessive (p. 56); and that the practice of conditional pardons there should be discontinued (p. 57).

But, while making these recommendations calculated to render the punishment of penal servitude somewhat less of a farce than it is at present, the Commissioners seem anxious to protect the convicts against undue severity. Thus, they declare, that, in their opinion, the punishment of penal servitude is more severe than is generally supposed (p. 41), and that they cannot undertake to say that the diet of the convicts is excessive (p. 42); and they suggest the establishment of savings banks in Australia, in which the holders of tickets of leave may deposit their earnings (p. 63). They also complain that the convicts do not now enjoy such frequent opportunities of seeing the chaplain as formerly (p. 49)—a complaint the value of which will necessarily be affected in some degree by the conduct of those chaplains towards the prisoners, and the amount of discretion exhibited by them in recommending convicts for tickets of leave.

Weak and objectionable as we deem this Report on many grounds, there is none in which the incapacity of the Commissioners appears so deplorable, if not ludicrous, as where they openly acknowledge the existence of evils, and at the same time avow their inability to suggest a remedy. Instances of this will be found at p. 68, where the Commissioners tell us that they are embarrassed what to do with those convicts who, having undergone their course of penal servitude, are unfit for removal to a colony. On this the Commissioners say—"There seems no reason to suppose that, by a proper system of superintendence, they may not be prevented from becoming dangerous to society, but it is an embarrassing question, how an honest living is to be earned by men who, in general, will be unfit for hard labour, besides being exposed to the same disadvantages with other discharged convicts in the competition for employment. This appeared to us so formidable a difficulty, that we were in the first instance disposed to consider, whether it would not be necessary to establish some special refuge for such unfortunate persons; but on looking further into the question, we were satisfied that any such scheme would be open to insurmountable objections, and that these men can only be left to that provision which the law has made for the destitute, whatever may be the cause of their destitution. Some assistance may, we hope, be given to them by those excellent institutions the Prisoners' Aid Societies, but we are convinced that this can only be safely done by private benevolence." They express similar apprehensions respecting female convicts (p. 70); and respecting the existing race of convicts who are under sentence of penal servitude not exceeding four years, to whom the Commissioners think it only good faith not to apply the punishment of transportation (pp. 71, 72).

As previously stated, one of the Commissioners, Mr. Childers, dissents from the proposals as to transportation (p. 97); and another, Mr. Henley, refused to sign the Report on the ground, that he believes that the "granting licenses to be at large unsuited to this country, and injurious to the convicts and to society. It is better when a convict is discharged, either by pardon from the Crown or at the termination of his sentence, that he should be a free man" (p. 74).

We now turn to the Memorandum of the Lord Chief Justice, who dissents from most of the Report. This document reflects the highest credit on that eminent judge, and its philosophical spirit, straightforwardness and manliness stand out in fine contrast to the trifling with crime, vacillation, and false humanity which pervade the Report. Viewed as a literary composition also, the Memorandum is greatly superior to it; but that is a small matter.

In the first place, the Lord Chief Justice lays down principles—a thing which from the other Commissioners we look in vain, unless the desire to interfere with a vicious system as little as possible, and to postpone the interests of those who obey the law to the interests of those who break it, can be denominated such.

The true principles of punishment are thus stated by the Lord Chief Justice:—

"It is necessary to bear in mind what are the purposes for which the punishment of offenders takes place. These purposes are two-fold; the first, that of deterring others exposed to similar temptations from the commission of crime; the second, the reformation of the criminal himself. The first is the primary and more important object: for though society has, doubtless, a strong interest in the reformation of the criminal, and his consequent indisposition to crime, yet the result is here confined to the individual offender, while the effect of punishment, as deterring from crime, extends not only to the party suffering the punishment, but to all who may be in the habit of committing crime, or who may be tempted to fall into it. Moreover, the reformation of the offender is in the highest degree speculative and uncertain, and its permanency, in the face of renewed temptation, exceedingly precarious. On the other hand, the impression produced by suffering, inflicted as the punishment of crime, and the fear of its repetition, are far more likely to be lasting, and much more calculated to counteract the tendency to the renewal of criminal habits. It is on the assumption that punishment will have the effect of deterring from crime that its infliction can alone be justified, its proper and legitimate purpose being not to avenge crime, but to prevent it" (p. 85). "It may well be doubted whether, in recent times, the humane and praiseworthy desire to reform and restore the fallen criminal may not have produced too great a tendency to forget that the protection of society should be the first consideration of the lawgiver" (p. 86).

We strongly recommend the perusal of the whole of this able paper, from which we have only space to give the following additional extracts:—

"The weakness of our system of penal servitude is to be sought in the manner in which the punishment is inflicted under it rather than in the periods to which it has been extended. Moderate labour, ample diet, substantial gratuities, with the remission of a fixed portion of the sentence, are hardly calculated to produce on the mind of the criminal that salutary dread of the recurrence of the punishment which may be the means of deterring him, and, through his example, others, from the commission of crime" (p. 81).

"Moreover, the inefficiency necessarily inherent in a system thus administered has probably been greatly aggravated by a total disregard, in practice, of the fundamental conditions on which remission, as an essential part of it, is deemed to be justified" (p. 82).

"It appears to me most material, to the full efficiency of punishment, that its infliction shall be certain. The chances of eluding detection, or of escaping conviction, already introduce a degree of uncertainty sufficient to neutralise to a considerable extent the salutary restraint which the fear of punishment would otherwise engender. If to this be added a doubt whether, when conviction has taken place, the sentence pronounced by the judge will be fully carried into effect, a new element of uncertainty and confusion is necessarily introduced. It is essential that the sentence of the judge, once pronounced, should, except under very special and exceptional circumstances, be carried into effect to the full extent of its requirements. The fact, that by good conduct while under sentence, a convicted criminal can escape a portion of the punishment, is calculated to detract from its effect in deterring from crime" (p. 89).

"I can see no reason to think, considering the powers of coercion, discipline, and reduction of diet, possessed by the prison authorities, that by the application of firmness and determination, with a sufficient force of officers, convicts, especially if not massed in too great numbers, but judiciously distributed, may not be kept under perfect control and discipline" (p. 90).

"How little dependance is to be placed on good conduct and apparent industry while undergoing sentence, may be gathered from a further statement of Mr. Smith:—'As a rule,' he remarks, 'the prisoners who are the most dangerous to society are the best conducted while in prison. This makes all marks for mere good conduct in the observance of rules, &c., and all professions of amendment, perfectly fallacious as indicating their real state'" (p. 92).

"My persuasion is, that punishment should be made as rigorous as is consistent with health of body and mind; that, being rendered thus rigorous, it should not be prolonged beyond what is necessary to deter from similar crime; but that, the sentence of the judge once pronounced, the punishment should be suffered for the full and entire period of the sentence" (p. 97).

Before dismissing the subject, we must call attention to stat. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 44, founded on a bill introduced by Mr. Adderley during the last session, which we cannot help looking on as a parliamentary protest against the scandalous inefficiency of the law respecting persons convicted of serious offences. That statute is intitled "An Act for the further Security of the Persons of her Majesty's Subjects from personal Violence." After reciting that the provisions of stats. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 43, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 21, against robbery or attempted robbery with violence, &c., are insufficient to deter from crimes of violence: it enacts, that "where any person is convicted of a crime under either of the said sections, the Court before whom he is convicted may, in addition to the punishment awarded by the said sections, or any part thereof, direct that the offender, if a male, be once, twice, or thrice privately whipped, subject to the following provisions:—

"1. That in the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years, the number of strokes at each such whipping do not exceed twenty-five, and the instrument used shall be a birch rod:

"2. That in the case of any other male offender, the number of strokes do not exceed fifty at each such whipping:

"3. That in each case the Court, in its sentence, shall specify the number of strokes to be inflicted, and the instrument to be used:

Provided that in no case shall such whipping take place after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence; provided also, that every such whipping to be inflicted on any person sentenced to penal servitude shall be inflicted on him before he shall be removed to a convict prison, with a view to his undergoing his sentence of penal servitude."

Whether burglary and garotting will enjoy, during the ensuing winter, a Saturnalia like that enjoyed by them during the last, remains to be seen. Should such fortunately not be the case, it will then become a question whether this result is attributable to the exertions of the Royal Commission, to the efficiency and number of Sir George Grey's police, to the terror of this new enactment; or, to what we cannot help thinking probable, that persons who are not desirous of being throttled and plundered will avail themselves of the clause in the Bill of Rights, which declares that all Englishmen have a right to bear arms for their defence, to walk armed through the land, and perhaps even go so far as to inflict Lynch law on their assailants,—to the eternal disgrace of England as a civilised country, and a caution to future rulers against false humanity, empiricism, and credulity.

DEATH OF SIR CRESSWELL CRESSWELL.

WE announce, with much regret, the decease of the Right Hon. Sir Cresswell Cresswell, Knt., the respected judge of the Court of Probate, and Judge Ordinary of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, which took place on the 29th ult., in the sixty-fifth year of his age, it is believed, from disease of the heart. This had lain dormant and perfectly unsuspected in his system until set in motion by an accident which occurred a few days before his death, when himself and the horse on which he was riding were thrown down by a carriage.

The deceased judge received an academic education at Cambridge, but was not greatly distinguished there. He was what is commonly called the "wooden spoon"—a fact worthy to be recorded in this notice for the encouragement of others who may be equally unfortunate: He was known to the Profession so far back as 1822, when he became contributor to the Reports of Barnewall & Cresswell. He subsequently rose into first-rate practice on the Northern Circuit, where, for several years previous to 1842, when he was raised to the dignity of judge of the Court of Common Pleas, he completely distanced all his rivals. In this post he remained until 1858, when he was appointed to the office of judge of the recently-created Courts of Probate and for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, which he occupied until his death. He was in Parliament for several years, but, like many others of his Profession, little is known of him as a legislator.

Sir Cresswell Cresswell was a good lawyer, a man of great tact and judgment, and a speaker of singular clearness and precision of language. But he was not an orator, and appeared devoid of passion. Although a most efficient advocate in general, we doubt if he could have defended Hardy as it was done by Lord Erskine; or, had he attained the post of Chief Justice, would have stood comparison with Coke or Hale, or perhaps even Campbell, in point of soundness, knowledge, or vigour. He is chiefly remarkable as the first judge who presided over the somewhat anomalous tribunal denominated "The Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes." He was there called on to administer a system compounded partly of common law, partly of equity, partly of ecclesiastical law, and partly of new principles, introduced by the Legislature; the bar over which he presided being a mixture of three classes of practitioners whose systems differed widely from each other. To blend these different elements into one harmonious whole, and to form a practice for the new tribunal, was indeed a work of difficulty, and its successful execution remains a monument of his fame.

Whether the subject of this notice was a popular man, in a personal sense, is questionable. He seemed to have an excellent opinion of his own abilities, and a considerable contempt for his opponents when at the bar, for the counsel who practised before him when on the bench, and generally for all brought into professional connexion with him; at the same time it is probable that his manner led to the belief that he entertained this feeling more strongly than he did in reality. Supercilious conduct at the bar is not calculated to excite respect or make friends; and although we are far from denying that satire and sarcasm are often useful on the bench to keep down refractory persons on whom reason would be thrown away, still a judge with a sneer almost continually on his countenance, as was unfortunately his case, is not an impersonation of the highest judicial character. Making, however, every abatement for these defects, Sir Cresswell Cresswell was an able and learned judge, and, in the flower of his intellect, died in harness; the accident which accelerated, if it did not occasion, his death, having happened while he was returning home from the court over which he presided, and which owes its present state of efficiency to his genius, learning, and industry.

PROSPECTUS OF THE LECTURES

To be delivered during the ensuing Michaelmas Educational Term, by the several Readers appointed by the Inns of Court.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND LEGAL HISTORY.

The Reader will trace the History of our Constitution from the middle of the reign of Henry VIII to the latest period which the time allotted to the Course will enable him to reach. He will dwell particularly on the Judicial and Legal History of the different ages which he describes, as recorded in the Statute-books, the volumes of Reports, and the State Trials.

In his Private Classes he will begin with the reign of William III, and proceed in regular order to that of his successors, till the accession of George III.

The books to which he will chiefly refer are—Blackstone's Commentaries, by Kerr (last ed.)—Burnet's History of the Church—Rapin's History of the Period—Statute-book of the Period—Lord Clarendon's History—May's History—Rushworth's Collections—

Brodie's History—Hallam's Constitutional History—Hayes' History of Conveyancing—Burnet's Memoirs—State Trials—Starkie's Law of Libel.

EQUITY.

The Reader on Equity proposes to deliver, during the ensuing Educational Term, a course of Six Lectures:—

1. On the Sources of English Law. The Origin of the Feudal System, and the Judicial Procedure to which it gave rise in Normandy and England.
2. On the Office of Chancellor; its Connexion with the Common-law Courts. The Rise and Principles of the Equitable Jurisdiction. The Custody of the Great Seal.
3. On the Present Constitution of the Court of Chancery. The Principles of Equity Pleading. The Recent Alterations in the Procedure of the Court.
4. On the Law of Bankruptcy.

The Reader on Equity proposes to form two Private Classes, a Senior and Junior, according to the amount of preliminary knowledge possessed by the Students; using, in the Junior, "Smith's Manual of Equity Jurisprudence," as a Text-book; and in the Senior, examining the principal branches of Equitable Jurisdiction, with a frequent reference to Cases; and also commencing the perusal of Lord Redesdale's Treatise on Equity Pleadings.

THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

The Reader on the Law of Real Property, &c., proposes to deliver, in the ensuing Educational Term, Six Lectures on the following subjects:—

1. The Specific Performance of Contracts for the Sale and Purchase of Real Estate.
2. The Ownership of Machinery and Chattels attached to or used with Land or Buildings.

The Reader on the Law of Real Property will, in his Private Classes, refer from time to time more particularly to the Cases cited in his Public Lectures. He will also endeavour to go through a Course of Real Property Law, using Mr. Joshua Williams's work on Real Property, and Mr. Tudor's Leading Cases on Conveyancing, as Text-books.

JURISPRUDENCE AND THE CIVIL LAW.

The Reader on Jurisprudence and the Civil Law proposes, in the ensuing Educational Term, to deliver Six Public Lectures on the following subjects:—

1. The Jurisconsulti of Ancient Rome; their Functions and Emoluments.
2. The Historical Development of the Roman Civil Procedure, and its Influence upon the Amendment of the Substantive Law.
3. The System of Pleading in Roman Civil Actions, and the Modes of Determination of Questions of Law and Fact.
4. The Modes of Proof in Roman Civil Actions.

In his Private Class, the Reader proposes to commence a complete Course of the Roman Civil Law, using Sandars' Justinian, and the Systema Juris Romani of Mackeldey as Text-books. The Reader will also in his Private Class discuss various points of International Law, using the work of Wheaton as the Text-book.

COMMON LAW.

The Reader on Common Law proposes to deliver, during the ensuing Educational Term, Six Public Lectures as under. The first Lecture will be Introductory to the Study of the Law. In the remaining Lectures, our Common Law will be viewed in relation to—

1. The Leading Doctrines of Constitutional Law.
2. Principles of Legislative Policy.

3. Principles regulating Civil Lights and Liabilities.

With his Private Class, the Reader will follow out the above scheme, using for reference—the State Trials, Smith's Leading Cases (last ed.); and Broom's Legal Maxims (2nd ed.)

By order of the Council,

SHIPPING LAW.

In 8vo., price 20s. cloth, lettered.

THE SHIPPING LAW MANUAL: a concise Treatise on the Law governing the Interests of Shipowners, Merchants, Masters, Seamen, and other Persons connected with British Ships. Together with the Acts of Parliament, Forms, and Precedents relating to the subject. Being especially intended for popular use in Seaport Towns. By W. T. GREENHOW, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"The 'Shipping Law Manual,' by Mr. W. T. Greenhow, brings into a popular shape, and to the latest date, the entire body of legal regulations affecting the shipping trade of the country alike in relation to owners, merchants, masters, and seamen, and is especially adapted for ordinary use by all persons connected with the business of seaport towns."—Times, Jan. 31, 1863.

"The object of the author of this book is to popularise the Law of Merchant Shipping, and to compress within the compass of a single volume all that is necessary to be known by those directly interested in British navigation. It was no easy task to condense and arrange this mass of legislation, so as to make it intelligible to the general reader. But Mr. Greenhow has achieved it, and placed within reach of every one connected with shipping a valuable compendium of the law relating to that branch of industry."—Shipping and Mercantile Gazette.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, AUGUST 15, 1863.

THE case of Wallace v. Auldjo, which we have already noticed on two former occasions, has been heard by the Lords Justices on appeal from Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., and they have affirmed his Honor's decree; we may, therefore, consider it to be now settled, unless the question should be discussed before a higher court of appeal, that where a woman files a bill, expressly claiming a right to a settlement of her own property as against her husband, if she dies before obtaining a decree, her children, although she may never have waived her right, will not be able, by taking subsequent proceedings, to obtain such a settlement in their favour, to which, had their mother not died, they would clearly have been entitled.

The Vice-Chancellor, in his judgment, disclaimed the idea of deciding the question upon principle; he decided it solely upon the practice of the Court. Upon an examination, however, of the cases relied upon by his Honor, we did not think, and we still do not think, that the practice of the Court upon the point was by any means settled; in fact, that it was open to discussion, and that it was precisely one of those cases where a judge was at liberty to extend a most beneficial doctrine of equity, in a manner against which no one could justly complain.

said, "Assuming that if the wife had in her lifetime prosecuted the cause to a hearing, she might have obtained a decree, I think that all possible benefit of the suit was lost by her death—that the rights of the husband then became, to all intents and purposes, the same as if the suit had not existed. Judicial opinions have not been uniform on this point; but reason and analogy, as well as the balance of authority, appear strongly in accordance with this view."

Sir G. J. Turner, L. J., after stating that he had read the cases cited, and the judgment of the Vice-Chancellor, and that he agreed with his opinion, said—"It was attempted to distinguish the case on the ground that, the bill having been filed by a wife in her lifetime, the discretion of the trustees was thereby taken away. Whether that were so or not, I can find no satisfactory answer to the argument that there is nothing to bind the rights of the husband until the decree."

Whether the decree of the Court of Appeal be right or wrong, it is to be regretted, that in a case where one of the judges admitted that "judicial opinions had not been uniform" upon the point under discussion, that he should not by a close examination of the authorities have shewn "that the balance of authority was strongly in favour of the view" taken by the Court. Much also is it to be regretted that the learned judge should simply have contented himself with asserting, "that reason and analogy were strongly in accordance with the same view," without shewing in what manner reason and analogy really supported the opinion which he expressed. And this would have been especially desirable, if possible, inasmuch as the learned judge who so efficiently presides over the Court below, as we have before observed, asserted that the point could not be satisfactorily solved upon principle, but must be decided solely upon practice.

The united acumen and industry of the learned judges of the Court of Appeal might, perhaps, by a critical examination of the cases, have shewn that the balance of authority was in their favour, and that the point as decided by them might be justified by principle, and supported by the analogy of other decisions, and even by reason. The legal world, however, have only been favoured by the result arrived at by the learned judges (no doubt after a careful examination of the subject), but without being admitted to observe the process by which that result was attained.

The consequence of the judgment of the Lords Justices in Wallace v. Auldjo is, that the equity of the children is made to depend upon a mere accident. We have all heard that in early times the jealousy of the professors of common law attributed so much uncertainty to the administration of equity, that the learned Selden ventured to assert, that it proceeded upon a standard as liable to variation as that of the Chancellor's foot—a most uncertain measure he with truth alleged—as “one Chancellor has a long foot, another a short foot, a third an indifferent foot.”

The decision of the Vice-Chancellor and the Lords Justices places the rights of the children of a married woman who claims an equity to a settlement in a similar state of uncertainty.

The time when a decree may be obtained by a mother filing a bill for a settlement depends upon a variety of circumstances; amongst others may be mentioned the speed with which the judge may proceed, the time of the year in which the bill is filed, the duration of other causes.

Suppose A. B., a married woman, having filed a bill claiming a settlement for herself and her children, has the misfortune, perhaps by a transfer, to have her cause set down in the court of a judge before whom proceedings are conducted with greater deliberation than speed, her death might well occur before a decree could be obtained; whereas, if the cause had been attached to the court of another judge, a decree might have been had, and the rights of the children preserved. In these days also, a few long patent jury cases might be equally fatal to the fortunes of the children. This shews the absurd result of the decision of Wallace v. Auldjo.

We still think that the only true principle upon which cases similar to Wallace v. Auldjo should be decided is this—that the equity of the wife and the children should be considered to attach not merely upon a decree for a settlement being obtained, but upon the wife unequivocally announcing her option to have a settlement, rather than that her fortune should be handed over to her husband, whether such option be shewn by her demand for a settlement in a bill in which she herself is plaintiff, or by her answer to a bill filed by another person, with reference to the property out of which she claims a settlement.

Reviews.

A Manual of the Laws affecting the Qualifications and Registration of Parliamentary Voters in Counties, Cities, and Boroughs: with the Practice of the Revising Courts on Objections, Costs, and other Matters, including the Duties of Clerks of the Peace, Town Clerks, Overseers, &c., and a Digest of all the Cases decided on Appeal; to which are added an Appendix of Statutes, and a full Index. By EDWARD BRETHERTON, Attorney-at-Law. London, 1863. [H. Sweet.]

THE registration season being now approaching, the appearance of the present work is well timed. It must not, however, be looked on as a systematic treatise on registration law; for, as Mr. Bretherton expressly informs us in his Preface, “It is not intended, or for one moment anticipated, that this publication will supersede the more elaborate works of Elliott, Rogers, and others, on the same subject. Those are for study in the chamber—a labour preliminary to the application in court of the principles they enunciate.” We regret this, for an able work on registration would be very desirable. The last edition of the excellent treatise of Mr. Elliott bears date as far back as 1843, previous to the Registration of Voters Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 18), while the Supplement by Mr. Power was published in 1847; and although the subject is well treated in Mr. Rogers's Law and Practice of Elections, Election Committees, and Registration, the last edition of which comes down so late as 1859, it only occupies 182 pages out of a work consisting of 595.

The object of the present work, Mr. Bretherton declares to be, “to collate those leading points of law and practice that ordinarily present themselves for consideration in the registration courts.” His Preface contains some strictures on the system of registration in general, and the Registration of Voters Act. Thus, he recommends that the appointment to the office of revising barrister should be for life, and in the nomination of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas in rotation—a proposition which appears to us extremely questionable, especially if no power were reserved to transfer revising barristers from one district to another. One of Mr. Bretherton's positions, however, with which it would be difficult to quarrel, is that where he tells us that the person trusted with the arbitrary authority of final decision which the law reposes in revising barristers, “should not only be of ripe judgment and experience, but, from position in his profession, above every political or other influence.”

The author also observes, with considerable truth, “Another important subject requiring consideration, is the desirability of securing more uniform decisions as to notices, amendments, production of documents, costs, and other matters of a similar character, ordinarily grouped under the term ‘points of practice.’ The present unsettled state of practice in the revision courts, varying as it does with each newly-appointed revising barrister, is a cause of grave complaint, and of much useless and unnecessary annoyance.” He likewise thinks the provisions made by law respecting the allowance of costs to parties attending the registration courts deficient.

Having been, as he informs us, an advocate for twenty years in the registration courts, the suggestions of Mr. Bretherton are entitled to attention. We wish he had given us more of them, and, in particular, that he had touched on the vexatious question of the right of overseers to withdraw their objections.

The work is divided in Seven Parts.

PART I.—REGISTRATION.—Registration Table^o.—2. Observations on Registration. Digest of Cases.

PART II.—COUNTY QUALIFICATIONS.—1. Qualification Table for Counties.—2. Observations on Estates and Interests conferring County Qualifications which have been Subject-matters of Appeal. Digest of Cases.

PART III.—CITY AND BOROUGH QUALIFICATIONS.—1. Analytical Table of 101. Householdors' Qualifications conferring City and Borough Votes.—2. Observations on the Nature of Qualifications conferring Votes for Cities and Boroughs. Digest of Cases.

PART IV.—PERSONAL DISQUALIFICATIONS OF ELECTORS.—1. Observations on the Personal Disqualifications of Electors. Digest of Cases.

PART V.—APPEALS.—1. Observations on Appeals. Digest of Cases.

PART VI.—DUTIES OF REVISING BARRISTERS AND OFFICERS CONNECTED WITH THE PREPARATION AND COMPLETION OF THE REGISTER OF VOTERS FOR COUNTIES, CITIES, AND BOROUGHs UNDER 6 VICT. CAP. 18.

PART VII.—SUGGESTED GROUNDS FOR OBJECTIONS AGAINST PARTIES ON THE REGISTER; PUBLICATION OF THE SEVERAL LISTS; AND DIGEST OF CASES DECIDED IN MICHAELMAS TERM, 1862.

The work concludes with an Appendix of the Statutes referred to.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR'S PLAN FOR DIGESTING, BY A COMMISSION, THE COMMON LAW OF ENGLAND.

THE following is taken from The Solicitors' Journal of the 1st August. It is given to the Profession by a contemporary as "communicated," an expression which we presume must be understood to mean emanating from some parties in authority:—

"The Lord Chancellor's speech on the revision of the law has elicited a strong expression of opinion against giving to commissioners direct powers of codification—that is to say, powers which would enable them to alter brevi manu the law of England, or any part of it. That law is a matured system—the growth of centuries. It may have defects, but these are not to be cured by a coup de main, or by the legislation of a board. The example of foreign countries and of despotic governments is no rule for England, especially if the end sought can be otherwise accomplished.

"Lord Cranworth has remarked that the bulk of English law is 'well settled.' And it must be owned that after hearing counsel the judges rarely disagree in pronouncing their decision. A suit makes the law transparent. But, until tried forensically and judicially, it is often unknown, and almost always uncertain. It exists, indeed, but the difficulty is to find it out and make sure of it. Searches painful and laborious result in an attempted reconciliation of innumerable precedents—many of them obscure and contradictory, and all of them dispersed. The Lord Chancellor thinks that these should be examined carefully by a royal commission. He proposes to deduce the law from them, and to set it forth in order. He hopes to make a perpetual reference to 1200 volumes of reports unnecessary. There is in this, we think, nothing to alarm or beget jealousy. To alter the law will not be within the scope of the commission. It will not interfere with the current reports, and it seems scarcely necessary to say that it will not invade copyright.

"High opinions are divided on the question of code or digest. Sir Samuel Romilly was for a code, as appears by the valuable article in the Edinburgh Review, of 1817—the last production of his pen. The profound jurist, Mr. Austin, was strongly for a code. His second and third volumes are full of wise and cautious suggestions. Lord Lyndhurst is for a digest. Lord Brougham is, or was, for a code. Lord Campbell was ultimately for a code, and came to regard it as almost a necessity. Lord Cranworth would be for a code if we could get 'a perfect one'—a thing of course unattainable. Lord St. Leonards holds that the Exchequer Chamber or House of Lords must do the work, which seems but another way of saying that it is impracticable. Lord Kingsdown thinks a code would be liable to change, for that Parliament would alter it every session, but he has not said that a digest would be preferable. The Lord Chancellor is of opinion that 'it is to the form of a code that the law of any advanced nation ought ultimately to be reduced.'

"Here, then, we have Sir Samuel Romilly, Mr. Austin, Lord Brougham, Lord Campbell, and the Lord Chancellor opposed, with more or less qualification, to Lord Lyndhurst, Lord Cranworth, Lord St. Leonards, and Lord Kingsdown. But it may be doubted whether the differences which subsist between the law peers are not rather verbal than substantial. An accurate and safe enunciation of English law would probably receive the approbation of them all; and whether we should call it code or digest seems not very material. No digest could be promulgated without arrangement; and what, it may be asked, is an arranged digest but a code?

"It would seem that the execution of the work (by whatever name we call it) must be cautious and progressive; beginning with those parts of the law which, though unarranged, are, to use Lord Cranworth's expression, 'well settled,' and advancing afterwards as the law itself advances, and as the tempter of the public mind accompanies it. A systematic digest or incipient code might thus be prepared, consisting of text and notes (with references to the authorities)—the text setting forth the law so far as 'well settled' at the date of its publication; the notes pointing out its blemishes and its defects. Such an incipient code—brought out, after great deliberation, by a commission including the Lord Chancellor and other high functionaries and ex-functionaries—would be of instant value to the practising lawyer and to the judges, besides proving highly acceptable to the public at large. It would give confidence to legal opinions, and prevent litigation in many cases where counsel, after balancing authorities, advise dubiously a suit or a defence. It would gradually supersede the anterior law reports, the burthen of which has lately been pronounced 'overwhelming.' In truth, this seems the only rational way of undermining the empire of old precedents. Story affirms that the best mode of attaining this end is by a 'gradual digest of those parts of the law which shall from time to time acquire scientific accuracy.'

"The incipient code, with its notes, being submitted to Parliament and the country generally, the next duty of the commissioners would be to receive from all proper quarters opinions and suggestions respecting it. Questions would be drawn up and circulated, inviting responses; and witnesses, if necessary, might be examined orally. The information thus collected would be arranged and printed for general circulation. Thus the whole nation would be gradually made familiar with our jurisprudence, not omitting those parts of it which might require emendation.

* This Table is compiled from the Registration of Voters Act, and promises to be useful, as well as some other Tables to be found in the work, e. g. that at p. 88, of "Yearly rents calculated at weekly payments."

"It may be said that the scheme here propounded would be tedious, and trying to the patience of the public. The want of despatch, however, would be counterbalanced by advantages of greater value."

KENNEDY v. BROUN—THE SWINFEN CASE.

ANOTHER scene has been added to the Swinfen affair. It seems, that in addition to his recent action against Mrs. Broun (formerly Swinfen) to recover 20,000*l.* as compensation for his services as her advocate in the various steps of the cause of Swinfen v. Swinfen, Mr. Kennedy had induced that lady to execute a deed in his favour for the like sum, founded on the same consideration. This deed Mrs. Broun took proceedings in equity to impeach, and on the 31st July the following judgment is reported to have been given by the Master of the Rolls, after an argument in which Mr. Cole and Mr. Kay were heard on the part of the plaintiff, and Mr. Kennedy was heard in person in his own cause:—

"His Honor said that he had given the most anxious consideration to this case, which was remarkable in every point of view. The object of the suit was to set aside a voluntary deed, on the ground that it was executed under undue influence; and the defence was, that meritorious services were the foundation of the deed, which a subsequent alteration in the mind of the donor could not obliterate or impugn. It could not be denied, that the defendant had rendered Mrs. Swinfen the most essential services in the prosecution of her rights; that his labour in her cause had been of no common nor ordinary character; that Mrs. Swinfen had expressed towards him the warmest gratitude, and recorded her sense of his having 'nobly won her cause.' The position of the parties was an anomalous one, and there was no doubt that a very great friendship had existed between them from the year 1856 to 1858; Mr. Kennedy during that time devoting himself, both as a legal adviser and a friend, to Mrs. Swinfen's interest with the most earnest assiduity. Mr. Kennedy not only performed the duties of an advocate for Mrs. Swinfen in the legal prosecution of her rights, but he had also written a pamphlet for her, which she acknowledged had been of the greatest service towards the furtherance of her success. In looking at such a case as the present, the Court must consider the relative position of the parties, and the many other remarkable incidents with which the case was enveloped. A deed of gift executed by a lady in favour of a gentleman to whom she was under so great obligation, and by whom she would naturally be greatly influenced, must be regarded with much the same jealousy as our Courts are wont to view deeds of a similar character when executed by a daughter in favour of her father, or a wife in favour of her husband. Under all the circumstances detailed in the evidence, it was clear, that at the time Mrs. Swinfen executed the deed in question in favour of Mr. Kennedy, she was so far under his influence that she had no power to resist the appeal made to her, or to refuse compliance with Mr. Kennedy's request to execute such a deed. This influence existed not only at the time of executing this deed, but afterwards, and apparently up to the time when she began to contemplate a second marriage. But then it was said that this deed ought to be sustained, because there were, in addition to the meritorious services spoken of, accounts stated between the parties to fully cover the value of the advantages receivable under the deed; but, on this part of the case, the Court concurred in the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas as to a counsel not being allowed to sue for his fees. As to what had been urged on the plea of 'moral obligation,' the Court would refrain from going into Mr. Kennedy's private relations in support of such a plea, on the ground, that if the averments made by him were true, they would only confirm the conviction that Mrs. Swinfen had executed the deed while under undue influence; and if they were not true, the Court could not find words to express the reprobation with which it must regard the defendant's conduct. The feelings of bitterness and animosity which had been evidenced in the course of the present suit afforded a most unhappy instance of how often the depth of former friendship, when rudely interrupted, is only to be measured by the vehement animosity of its abrupt termination. On the most careful consideration of all the circumstances, the Court was of opinion that the deed of May, 1859, was obtained from Mrs. Swinfen under overpowering, and therefore undue, influence; that such deed could not be supported in any point of view; that Mr. Kennedy must give the deed up to be cancelled; and that he must reconvey the property, and pay the costs of the suit."

Beyond an expression of deep regret at seeing a man of Mr. Kennedy's undoubted talents and learning cut such a figure, it is impossible to feel interest or sympathy in either of the parties to this disgraceful proceeding.

We regret to announce the decease of Sir F. W. Slade, Bart., Q. C., one of the leaders of the Western Circuit. The particulars are given as follows in The Times of the 11th instant, in its circuit intelligence, under the head Wells, August 10:—"A heavy gloom has been thrown over this circuit, in consequence of a special messenger having arrived in this city yesterday morning with intelligence that Sir F. W. Slade had died in his bed. The learned counsel had conducted a case in the Nisi Prius Court here on Friday, with his usual vigour and ability, and apparently in robust health. Having concluded his day's work, he retired to his country seat at Maunsel, near Bridgewater; in the evening he complained of fatigue, and on Saturday morning he called in a medical friend, but there was not much the matter. He went to bed rather early on Saturday night, and about eleven o'clock Lady Slade, who was by his side, discovered that he had ceased to exist. As far as we have at present heard, his death was caused by apoplexy."

According to newspapers supposed to be in the confidence of the Government, Sir James Plaistead Wilde, Knt., one of the Barons of the Exchequer, will succeed the late Sir Cresswell Cresswell as Judge of the Court of Probate and Judge Ordinary of the Court of Divorce and Matrimonial Causes.

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN PARLIAMENT.—Sir Colman Michael O'Loughlen, Bart., of Drumconora, in the county of Clare, one of her Majesty's Counsel, for the county of Clare, in the room of Francis McNamara Calcutt, Esq., deceased.

COMMISSIONER TO ADMINISTER OATHS IN COMMON LAW.—Frederick West, Gent., of No. 3, Charlotte-row, Mansion House, in the City of London, has been appointed a London Commissioner for administering oaths in Common Law in the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer.

STARKIE'S LAW OF EVIDENCE.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the LAW of EVIDENCE. By THOMAS STARKIE, Esq. Fourth Edition, with very considerable alterations and additions; incorporating the Statutes and reported Cases to the time of publication. By G. M. DOWDESWELL and J. G. MALCOLM, Esqrs., Barristers at Law. In 1 vol. royal 8vo., 1853, price 1s. 16s. cloth.
In the parliamentary debate on disqualified witnesses (House of Commons, Feb. 12, 1861), referring to the case of Madox v. Catnach, Sir G. C. Lewis said, "He would read from Starkie on Evidence, which was known to be a standard work upon the subject, a statement of the law as applicable to the case (vide Examination as to Religious Belief, pp. 115, 116). That is a clear statement of the rule of law upon the subject."

THE JURIST.

LONDON, AUGUST 22, 1863.

THE plan for reform of the law brought forward by the Lord Chancellor in his able speech in the House of Lords during the last session of Parliament, comprises, among other things, "The institution of a Department of Justice." This expression was not then used for the first time; for the appointment of a "Minister of Justice" has been very frequently advocated. Not only, however, are the expressions "Minister of Justice" and "Department of Justice" by no means synonymous, but the latter may be understood in several different senses; some indicative of salutary reform, and others of innovations, idle, if not mischievous. It is, therefore, incumbent on those who seek to initiate legislation in this matter to be unequivocal in their language.

The proposal to establish a "Minister of Justice" may mean simply, that the duties connected with the administration of justice, which the law at present imposes on the Secretary of State for the Home Department, are too much for that official, so that with the view to the alleviation of his labours, a minister should be appointed specially to attend to those duties. Such a change might, for aught we know, be advisable, and there is, at least, one argument in its favour; namely, that judging from the manner in which these duties of the Home Office have hitherto been discharged, especially the reckless pardons and commutations of punishment for offences, and the absence of all discretion in granting tickets of leave, no change could be for the worse.

But the creation of a "Department of Justice" is, or at least may be, a very different matter, and one on which the country has a right to require the most distinct explanations. Nor is it so easy to get them, and this, for the simple reason, that the advocates of the measure do not seem agreed among themselves, or, if otherwise, are singularly unfortunate in the language they choose to express their meaning.

To take a few examples:—

Mr. Napier, Ex-Chancellor for Ireland, in a speech delivered at a meeting of the Social Science Association in 1862 (see its Transactions, pp. 199, 200), says:—"There were some who objected to the name, minister of justice; but about the name he cared little, so that he got the thing. What he wanted was a special department of government, whose bounden duty it would be to look after law reform, and avail itself of the suggestions of able and practical men. . . . The Vice-President of justice should be a member of the House of Commons, whose duty it would be to examine all measures submitted to the House, so as to guard against defects and inconsistencies springing up." If this latter proposal is to be understood with reference only to measures introduced by the Government, it seems fair enough, though there is already an officer whose duty it is to draw all such bills. But if the officer here proposed to be created is to overlook and approve all bills brought into the House of Commons by independent members and members of the opposition, it would be an innovation of a most unconstitutional character—enacting for England the most objectionable of Poyning's laws, which, until 1782, kept the Legislature of Ireland in a state of semi-strangulation. The only difference would be, that while Poyning's law prevented any bill being introduced into the Irish Parliament without the consent of the Government, Mr. Napier's law would prevent any being carried through the English Parliament except in a form approved of by the Government. After the delivery of Mr. Napier's speech, Dr. Zimmermann, one of the foreign members of the association, who spoke from experience, as Mr. Napier did from theory, said, "he had seen so many evils arise from such an institution in other States, that he congratulated England on not having a minister of justice—an officer who interpreted the laws, not according to precedent, but according to his individual views." To this, Mr. Napier, in a sentence which lets us a little deeper into his plan, reminded Dr. Zimmermann, that the minister of justice in this country would not have anything whatever to do with the administration of justice.

The Lord Chancellor in his recent speech, 12th June, 1863, thus introduces the subject. (See Macqueen's Report, pp. 29 et seq.) I shall, at some future time, ask your Lordships "to give me a committee for the purpose of ascertaining what is the best mode by which the future legislation of this country may be conducted, so as to secure an improved form in the composition of bills. When the task of expurgating and classifying the statutes has been completed, it will still be necessary to adopt some system for revising future reported cases, so as to check the uncertainty and confusion they introduce into the law. For, observe the manner in which error grows up in the law. A case is decided, say, by a Vice-Chancellor, or one of the Courts at Westminster. The decision may be bad, but one of the parties to the litigation may not have the means of appealing against it, and so it is not corrected by a higher court. Then, this bad law is recorded in the reports, and passes unnoticed for three or four years. It is then cited as a precedent before another judge. That other judge says, 'I find that Mr. Justice A. B., or Mr. Vice-Chancellor C. D., decided a case from which the case now before me cannot be distinguished;' and thus a bad precedent is accepted and confirmed. The thing, therefore, becomes inveterate, and bad law is established, there being in our system no agency at all to exercise that which ought to be exercised, viz. an annual revision of the reported cases, with power to determine what is to be regarded as entitled to authority, and what ought not to be quoted hereafter for the purpose of determining the law. All this might be accomplished by what is called the institution of a department of justice. At all events, there ought to be some mode and power of revising the reports from time to time, as long as you adhere to the practice of making them guides for judicial decisions." It must not be forgotten that this speech was "corrected under the Lord Chancellor's supervision." And, in another delivered by his Lordship, then Sir Richard Bethell, at the Judicial Society, in February, 1859 (see its Transactions, vol. 2, pp. 129, 135), we find these words:—"Now, one duty of the minister of justice would be, to take the decisions of the current year in connexion with those of past times, and enunciate and express, in a compact form, those general rules for which, as the law stands, you are obliged to apply to authority whenever you want to deduce a rule to be applied to the case before you."

Mr. Fitzjames Stephen in his "General View of the Criminal Law of England," published during the present year, pp. 322 et seq., also advocates the creation of a Department of Justice. After stating that, in his opinion, the power of legislating now virtually possessed by the judges, should be maintained, recommends "the making the judges avowed legislators within certain bounds, and bringing their legislative power into harmony with the legislative power of Parliament;" and adds, "How to do this, is a practical problem of great delicacy. I should propose to solve it by the establishment of a new department of government, which might be called the department of legislature and justice, or the ministry of justice." On this department Mr. Stephen proposes to confer the duty of drafting bills introduced by the Government, and, so far, is more explicit than Mr. Napier. But, he then says, "this department ought to have in its hands the whole system of reporting. The law reports are, in the present day, private speculations. . . . If the reporters were not paid by the sheet, as they are at present, but by a salary from the public, the reports of each particular case might be compressed into a small fraction of their present size." Mr. Stephen does not say whether he would establish more than one set of paid reporters; if not, here would be a monopoly, not like that which formerly existed, when the judges recognised only one set of reports, but a monopoly created by, and dependent on, the executive.

Mr. Stephen further proposes to empower the new department "to call upon the judges to state the law upon particular points raised, but not decided, by particular cases." And, lastly, "the department might also take particular branches of the law, and, by extracting from adjudicated cases the rules and principles on which they proceed, frame a set of rules independent of the particular circumstances of the cases adjudged, and so compress the cases themselves into a very small compass. Such rules should be submitted to, and corrected by, the fifteen judges, or the majority of them; and when issued by their authority, should be quoted as authorities, if not overruled by Parliament within a certain time. . . . The judges should have the same power to alter existing rules as they have to overrule adjudged cases."

The purity of the Bench of England is one of the brightest features in her constitution, and owes its existence, partly to the natural love of justice and fair play, and obedience to the law, instinctive in the British people, and partly to the noble provision in the Bill of Rights, which renders the judges independent of the Crown. Whether among the transcendent powers which the admirers of a department of justice would vest in their new creation is to be comprised a power of supervising and controlling the judges, we leave them to explain; but from the foregoing extracts it seems tolerably clear, that one part of the project is to subject the decisions of every tribunal in the land to an annual, or at least periodical, revision by persons chosen by the Crown, who are to constitute a tribunal for this purpose, probably sitting in secret, and certainly without the presence of counsel, or the usual checks on judicial indolence or misconduct. It is a specious and high sounding thing to say, "Erase from the reports, at the end of each year, all the erroneous decisions to be found in them." But who is to be the judge of what decisions are erroneous? Judging from the language of these persons, one would think that to determine this was one of the easiest, instead of being, what it really is, one of the most difficult things in the world. Imagine all the decisions that take place in the course of the year: including those on charterparties, insurance, railways, poor laws, highways, boards of health, and other questions which fill the Crown paper in the Court of Queen's Bench; as well as all questions on the construction of wills, and on revenue law; and all the decisions of the equity courts; together with all questions of criminal law, including those affecting the liberty of the subject, the rights of the Crown, and the alleged misconduct of its officers, brought before a secret tribunal—nominated by the executive, with power to erase, under the name of bad law, every decision which they might, rightly or wrongly, deem erroneous, or which, through prejudice or worse motives, they or their employers might wish to see expunged from our jurisprudence. Have those who bring forward such a plan as this reflected on the degradation to which it would expose the Bench:—how it would lower the judicial office in the estimation of the community; and what the effect on the minds of the members of that Bench would be, to know that their decisions existed only by sufferance, until, at the end of the year, they should receive a certificate of approval from a body composed of men immeasurably their inferiors in talent and knowledge? The spirit of theorising and red tape which would impose on such a body the task of conferring such a certificate, and the presumption and coxcombry that would undertake it, are a fair subject of contempt to every enlightened mind, and would be of mirth also, were not the questions at stake too serious, and the consequences of mistake respecting them too deadly.

LAPSE WHERE ONE OF THE MEMBERS OF A CLASS OF LEGATEES IS NAMED.

LAPSE is the failure of a testamentary gift by the death of the object in the testator's lifetime. What lapses is the interest he would have taken if he had survived the testator. Thus, if a fund is given to A., B., and C., in equal shares, the disposition is considered to be equivalent to a separate gift of one-third part of the fund to each of the individuals, and if one of them dies in the testator's lifetime, his share does not go to the others, but lapses. On the other hand, a gift to a class of persons by a general designation, as to the children of A., whether all the possible members of the class be in existence at the date of the will (as in the case of a gift to "the children of my late brother," or to "the executors of my will"), or the class be capable of future additions (as in the case of a gift to the children of a living person), is a gift of the entire fund to such members of the class as may ultimately be able to take according to the terms and conditions of the gift; and the death of any member before the testator, though it deprives him of any benefit from the gift, causes no lapse of any part of the subject. No share fails, because no share is given to any other than those who form the class when the gift takes effect. This rule is of necessity, in the case of gifts to a class capable of future augmentation; for it would be absurd to hold, that when, for the first time, the number of persons capable of taking is ascertained, their shares must be diminished for the purpose of reserving and abstracting a share in respect of some one who cannot take it. But the rule extends also to cases where all the possible members of the class are in being and ascertained at the date of the will. (Viner v. Francis, 2 Bro. C. C. 658). In other words, every gift to a class of persons contains an implied condition that the members composing it shall be living at or after the testator's death. Therefore, a gift to such of the children of A. as shall be living at B.'s decease, in equal shares, is equivalent to a gift to such of the children of A. as shall be living at B.'s decease, and also at or after the testator's decease; and the death of B. before the testator, though it will (just as A.'s death would) prevent any addition to the members, will not finally ascertain the objects of the gift, but the subsequent death in the testator's lifetime of any of A.'s children (short of all) will merely contract the class, and not occasion lapse. (Lee v. Paim, 9 Jur. 247; 4 Hare, 250; Leigh v. Leigh, 17 Beav. 605).

When a gift is made to several persons, one of whom is designated by name, while the others are described in general terms as a class—as, to A. and the children of B.—the share of A., if he lives to take a share, cannot be ascertained until the other legatees are ascertained—cannot be ascertained in the testator's lifetime, unless in the testator's lifetime it becomes impossible that there can be any one to share the gift with A. It seems to follow of necessity, that the death before the testator of the legatee designated by name, cannot occasion a lapse; for the death of a legatee can only occasion lapse of what was intended for him; and in the case put it cannot be said that any definite share was intended for A. Having to take his lot with a class, he was to be regarded as one of the class. Thus, if the gift is to A. and the children of B., and A. dies, then B. dies, leaving three children, then one of the children dies, and then the testator dies, it cannot be said that A. was intended to take either one-fourth or one-third, for there might have been a dozen children of B. living at the testator's death, or all might have died before him. Accordingly, where a testator gave a fund for the benefit of his grandchildren and his nephew Thomas Owen, to be distributed as they should become of the age of twenty-five years respectively, and added directions which were considered to render the gift to the grandchildren void for remoteness, it was held, that Thomas Owen could not take a share, for he could only share as one of a class, and gift to the class was void. So, where the testator gave his residuary estate to the children of A., to the children of B., to C., to the children of D., and to E. in equal shares, and the gifts to C. and to the children of A. were revoked by a codicil, it was held, that the other legatees took the whole, although the revocation extended to the share of C., a person named. Again: where the gift was to trustees, in trust for the testator's wife for life, and after her decease for his daughters, Harriet, Maria, Charlotte, and Amelia, and their issue, and the testator directed that if his wife should have any other daughter or daughters, such daughters and their issue should be entitled, in equal shares with his daughters before named, to the residue of his estate, it was held, that the issue were to take only by way of substitution for their parents, and that the death of one of the daughters who were named, without issue, in the testator's lifetime, did not occasion a lapse. (In re Stanhope's Trusts, 27 Beav. 201).

We are, therefore, at a loss to understand the recent case of Drakeford v. Drakeford, as reported in 9 Weekly Rep. 977. In that case the testator gave the half-yearly interest from his funded property to his wife during her life, and after her decease to his brother Henry Lewis during his life, and proceeded thus:—"at whose death the principal is to be equally divided amongst his surviving legitimate children, and my niece and goddaughter Rosamond Willows." Rosamond Willows died before the testator. Henry Lewis survived the testator, and died in the widow's lifetime, leaving four children, two of whom died before the widow. It was held, that the rule in Cripps v. Wolcot (4 Mad. 11) did not apply, but that the children of Henry Lewis who survived him took vested interests. But it was also held, that the share [what share?] of Rosamond Willows did not belong to the children of Henry Lewis, but lapsed, and, as there was no residuary gift, for the benefit of the testator's next of kin. The Master of the Rolls is made to say, "No doubt, if the gift had been 'to the children of A., and to my niece Rosamond,' that might be considered as a gift to a class. But in order to make Rosamond a member of the class here, the testator should have said, 'I give my property to Henry Lewis for life, and at his death the principal is to go among his legitimate children and my niece, or such of them as shall survive Henry Lewis.' In that case the class would be ascertained at that period; and if no member of it was dead in the interval there would be no lapse. But here Rosamond was to take at all events, and the only class to be ascertained were the children of Henry Lewis, who were to be ascertained at his death." This is evidently misreported. If a gift to the children of L. and to R., makes R. a member of a class so as to prevent lapse, a gift to the children of L., living at L.'s death, and to R., must have the same construction. G. S.

A General View of the Criminal Law of England. By JAMES FITZJAMES STEPHEN, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Newark-on-Trent. 1863.

[London and Cambridge: Macmillan & Co.]

THIS work, as we are informed in the Preface, "is intended neither for practical use nor for an introduction to professional study. Its object is to give an account of the general scope, tendency, and design of an important part of our institutions, of which surely none can have a greater moral significance, or be more closely connected with broad principles of morality and politics, than those by which men rightfully, deliberately, and in cold blood, kill, enslave, and otherwise torment their fellow-creatures. It surely ought to be possible to explain the principles of such a system in a manner both intelligible and interesting."

These admissions may seem unpromising, but we can assure the reader who is desirous of understanding the principles on which the English criminal law is founded, that the present work—albeit, like ourselves, he may be unable to subscribe to all its positions—will be read alike with pleasure and profit.

Mr. Stephen discusses most of the defects and proposed alterations in the criminal law which of late years have agitated the public mind. Thus, at p. 86 et seq., he considers at some length the subject of irresponsibility for crime on the ground of mental aberration. At pp. 94, 95, he says—

"The case of what is called impulsive insanity is easily dealt with. It is said that on particular occasions men are seized with irrational and irresistible impulses to kill, to steal, or to burn, and that under the influence of such impulses they sometimes commit acts which would otherwise be most atrocious crimes. Many instances of the kind are collected in medical books. It would be absurd to deny the possibility that such impulses may occur, or the fact that they have occurred, and have been acted on. Instances are also given in which the impulse was felt, and was resisted. The only question which the existence of such impulses can raise in the administration of criminal justice is, whether the particular impulse in question was irresistible, as well as unresisted. If it were irresistible, the person accused is entitled to be acquitted, because the act was not voluntary, and was not properly his act. If the impulse was resistible, the fact that it proceeded from disease is no excuse at all. If a man's nerves were so irritated by a baby's crying that he instantly killed it, his act would be murder. It would not be less murder if the same irritation and the corresponding desire were produced by some internal disease. The great object of the criminal law is to induce people to control their impulses, and there is no reason why, if they can, they should not control insane impulses as well as sane ones. The proof that an impulse was irresistible depends principally on the circumstances of the particular case." And further on, at p. 96—

"The state of the law above described has often been blamed. Some persons have complained of its laxity, others, and this has been the more frequent complaint, of its cruelty. It appears to me to be perfectly reasonable. To punish men for acts which they either could not help or could not know to be wrong would not really increase the deterring power of punishment. It would only deprive it of all the support which it derives from the moral sentiments of the public. On the other hand, to make madness a plea in bar of all further proceedings, so that every one affected with that disease in any degree whatever might commit any crime he pleased upon his neighbours, his keepers, or his companions in a madhouse, would be dangerous in the extreme. Madmen in the present day are treated with a degree of humanity, and intrusted with an amount of freedom, which were formerly quite unknown. It would be impossible to allow this to go on if they were deprived of the protection of the law, by being freed from all responsibility to it. Hanwell and Colney Hatch contain thousands of inmates who associate together freely, enjoy many amusements in common, cultivate considerable pieces of land, and, subject to some necessary restrictions, live much like sane people. Suppose they all knew that any one of them might murder, ravish, or mutilate any other without the fear of punishment, the result would be, that their liberty would have to be greatly restrained, and that they would have to be treated on the footing, not of moral agents to be governed by law, but of animals to be governed by force."

Speaking of the distinction between felony and misdemeanour, Mr. Stephen says (pp. 105, 106)—

"The confusion resulting from it is an admitted defect in the law, nor is it a mere defect in form. It often produce serious inconveniences. Any one may arrest another on reasonable suspicion that he has committed a felony, if a felony has been committed; but with respect to misdemeanours there is, generally speaking, no such power; and this produces absurd results. . . . If the law of forfeiture were ever enforced, which it is not, the distinction between felony and misdemeanour would produce revolting injustice. It would be monstrous that one man should forfeit his property for stealing a shilling, and that another should retain his, though he had obtained ten thousand pounds by conspiracy, false pretences, or perjury. Again: it is equally absurd that, in the case of a trifling theft, the prisoner should have the right of peremptorily challenging twenty jurors, whilst a man accused of perjury might see his bitterest enemy in the jury-box, and be unable to get rid of him as a juror, unless he could give judicial proof of his enmity." And again, p. 119:—

"To kill a man in custody on a charge of felony, who cannot otherwise be restrained from escaping, is justifiable homicide. If the charge is misdemeanour, it is manslaughter. To conspire to commit murder is a misdemeanour; to steal a pennyworth of sweetmeats is felony. It is absurd that a constable might lawfully kill a lad to prevent his escape in the one case, and might be obliged to permit the rescue of a man in the other, though he had loaded arms in his hands."

All this must, however, be understood of the abuse, not the use, of the distinction, for, as Mr. Stephen justly says elsewhere (p. 110), "the division of offences into felonies and misdemeanours must be kept up; and, as regards the power of arrest, it is a substantial distinction."

THE LATE SIR F. W. SLADE, BART., Q. C.

AN inquest has been held on the body of Sir F. W. Slade, Bart., Q. C., one of the leaders of the Western Circuit, whose decease we noticed in our last. Although his demise was sudden, in the sense of his having been found dead in his bed by Lady Slade, about eleven P.M., he had been ailing severely, and was under medical treatment during that day. It seems that he felt exceedingly the death of Sir Creswell Creswell, who is supposed to have died of a diseased heart, and in the course of a conversation said, "no one knew who had a diseased heart, and God only knew who would die from it next." A favourite servant of his had also died of it. The following significant letter was written by the deceased on the day of his death to the bishop of the diocese:—

"Maunsell Grange, 8th August, 1863.

"My Dear Lord Bishop.—I was in Wells on Friday, but so busy in court that I could not pay my respects to Lady Auckland and yourself as I had wished. Business over, I returned here, leaving everything at my lodgings, ready for me to return to-morrow to have the honour of dining at the palace. L'homme propose, mais Dieu dispose. I got up as well as any man this morning, rode out early before breakfast, but was seized with what they call indigestion, but what I call the pains of hell, and have been in all day. Under these circumstances will you and Lady Auckland kindly excuse me, and believe yours very truly,

"F. W. SLADE.

"The Right Honourable the Lord Bishop, Palace, Wells, Somerset."

The coroner said, it appeared to him that the proximate cause of death was similar to that of Sir Creswell Creswell's—fatty degeneration of the heart. Possibly faintness came on, the heart put in increased action, more blood was sent to the brain than was normal, and a blood vessel gave way, producing apoplexy, which, as the surgeon truly stated, was the immediate cause of death.

The jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes."

SHIPPING LAW.

In 8vo., price 20s. cloth, lettered,

THE SHIPPING LAW MANUAL: a concise Treatise on the Law governing the Interests of Shipowners, Merchant, Masters, Seamen, and other Persons connected with British Ships. Together with the Acts of Parliament, Forms, and Precedents relating to the subject. Being especially intended for popular use in Seaport Towns. By W. T. GREENHOW, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"The 'Shipping Law Manual,' by Mr. W. T. Greenhow, brings into a popular shape, and to the latest date, the entire body of legal regulations affecting the shipping trade of the country alike in relation to owners, merchants, masters, and seamen, and is especially adapted for ordinary use by all persons connected with the business of seaport towns."—Times, Jan. 31, 1863.

"The object of the author of this book is to popularise the Law of Merchant Shipping, and to compress within the compass of a single volume all that is necessary to be known by those directly interested in British navigation. It was no easy task to condense and arrange this mass of legislation, so as to make it intelligible to the general reader. But Mr. Greenhow has achieved it, and placed within reach of every one connected with shipping a valuable compendium of the law relating to that branch of industry."—Shipping and Mercantile Gazette.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, AUGUST 29, 1863.

THE Statute-law Revision Bill was among those which passed into law on the last day of the session of Parliament recently expired. We learn, from the speech of the Lord Chancellor on its introduction, that this bill is the first instalment of his system of law reform; and it certainly seems the part of it which is based on the soundest principles. Objectionable as we consider some of his Lordship's proposals, and although questions may be raised even with respect to the statute-law revision, we look on that act as being, on the whole, an immense improvement in our law, and the first step in the solution of the great problem of legal reform, and are quite willing to take chance of the defects, omissions, or inconsistencies that in course of time may be discovered in it.

The Lord Chancellor, it will be remembered, stated, as his opinion, that the formation of a code is the ultimate stage at which the law of every country naturally arrives. We do not concur in this, but it is unnecessary at present to go into the question, for it seems agreed on all hands that, supposing a code desirable, the time for it has not yet come, and that it must be preceded by large reductions in the immense bulk of our statute law and reports; and supposing a code not desirable, still those reductions are requisite as essential elements of legal reform.

Whenever a nation resolves on drawing up a code, or anything analogous to a code, there is one question to be determined in limine, namely, is the code to be in the affirmative only, or should it be negative also. There is no evading this question, and yet no two things can be more different than codes with and codes without negative words. An affirmative code only declares that what is contained in it shall be law; an affirmative and negative code (and this is the species of code advocated by Bentham, see his works by Bowring, vol. 3, p. 205) contains the further provision, that whatever is not found in the code shall not be law. Such a code proscribes all records of the past, all previous decisions, and all treatises, as means of ascertaining what the law is; and it is evident that the lawgiver who draws it up must have unlimited faith in his own knowledge, forethought, and ability.

The compilers of the bill on which the act for the revision of the statute law is founded, acted on the former principle. The object being to reduce the statute-book into a reasonable compass, by expunging defunct, useless, and repealed statutes, the new act contains no negative words. It only says, that all the statutes therein enumerated shall be repealed, but does not go on to affirm, or even imply, that all those which it leaves on the statute-book are unrepealed. Of this we may take as an instance a statute referred to in a former article (ante p. 244), written after the bill was announced, and before it was exhibited in type. We there expressed our curiosity as to what course the commissioners would take with reference to the 13 Car. 2, stat. 1, c. 5, s. 1, which prohibits petitions to the King or Parliament being signed by more than twenty persons (except in certain cases); and in the same section prohibits the delivering any petition by a company of more than ten persons. The commissioners, wisely, took no notice of the statute; so that the question still remains whether that section, or any part of it, is repealed—a question to which we take the true answer to be, for the reasons stated in the above article, that the first part of it is repealed, but that the second part is not. Some apprehension may, perhaps, also be felt (see ante, pp. 251, 252), lest the commissioners should, through inadvertence, have repealed any statute establishing a constitutional principle; a thing that the Lord Chancellor declared they were specially to avoid, and whether they have done it time must determine.

The rest of the Lord Chancellor's plans stand over for the consideration of future Parliaments. Meanwhile the Profession and the public have had ample notice of their nature, and are invited to consider them.

It may well be, that the codification of the Roman law by the Emperor Justinian was an act of necessity; especially when we remember, that the Roman equity had been codified by the "perpetual edict" about the time of the Emperor Hadrian, nearly three centuries before, and also take into consideration the great difficulty and expense of procuring books in ancient times, —a difficulty increased a hundred fold by the change of the seat of government to Constantinople, and the subsequent destruction of the Western empire. In illustration of this, we are informed by Gibbon (Decline and Fall, &c., vol. 8, p. 51), that many of the works on the Roman law could not be procured at any, or almost any, price at Constantinople; and that it was said even that the originals of various books abstracted in the Pandects were never seen by Tribonian and his colleagues, but were quoted at second-hand from more recent authorities; and if this scarcity was felt at head quarters, what must have been the state of private practitioners. So the codification of the French law by the Emperor Napoléon I, may also have been an act of necessity. His five codes, however, are merely affirmative ones, and neither contain, nor profess to contain, the whole law of France, much of which is still uncoded. Be all this, however, as it may, we make no question that any attempt to reform the English law at this time per saltum, will end in disaster; and that its gradual reform is the correct and safe course, whether codification is or is not to be the last link in the chain.

A General View of the Criminal Law of England. By JAMES FITZJAMES STEPHEN, M.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Newark-on-Trent. 1868.

(Concluded from p. 308).

There is a school of legal reformers who test the value of every part of our criminal procedure by its agreement or disagreement with the French system. We strongly advise all such persons, and those liable to be misled by their suggestions, to peruse the fifth chapter of this work, beginning at p. 162, where the French system is described; whence the great superiority of our own, notwithstanding all its faults, will be apparent to the meanest capacity. The following are specimens:—

"After the depositions are completed, the president cross-examines; and after his cross-examination is over, the counsel for the prisoner may put any further questions if he pleases; but he can do so only through the president. This privilege is hardly ever exercised, and this in itself forms a broad distinction between a French and an English trial; for, in the latter, the cross-examination of witnesses is one of the most important and most characteristic parts of the proceedings" (p. 164).

"It is obvious from this short sketch of French procedure, that it has little reference to the litigious view of criminal justice. Hardly any discretion or independent action is allowed to the prisoner from the very first. He cannot manage his defence in his own way; but, on the contrary, the Ministère Public manages it for him, counterchecking it as the proceedings go on, and often concluding in favour of his guilt from any confusion or falsehood on the part of the witnesses favourable to him. The issue of the trial is virtually almost decided before it begins, because it is only the last act of a continuous process; and thus it is hardly an exaggeration to say, that the jury in a French court is an anomalous excrescence. As its introduction into France is no older than the Revolution, and as a great part of the Code Napoleon is a recast of laws which existed long before that time, it may very probably be the case that the whole scheme of French criminal procedure may have been adapted to the ancient system, in which the object was to convince the minds of the court; and it must also be remembered, that the Tribunaux Correctionnels, which can imprison for five years, and deprive men of civil rights, and before which nearly nineteen-twentieths of the French criminal trials take place, try causes without juries.

"In order to place before our minds the character of the French system, we must suppose the attorney for the prosecution, the committing magistrate, and the counsel for the Crown, to stand to each other in the relation of official superiors and inferiors; and we must further suppose the counsel for the Crown to be an assessor to the judge of assise. To complete the system, we must substitute for the fifteen judges a much more numerous body, scattered over the country in threes and fours, each group having under their official authority all the committing magistrates, and all the prosecuting counsel and attorneys within a wide district, and discharging themselves the functions of grand jurymen. We must also suppose the procedure to be secret until the day of trial, and the accused to be liable to close confinement, varied only by as many interrogatories and private confrontations with witnesses as the judge 'instructing the process' might think advisable.

"If a prosecution is to be considered as a public investigation, it is obvious that those who are to conduct it must stand in some relation of this sort to each other. A system in which the prosecuting attorney, who collects the evidence; the committing magistrate, who weighs it; the grand jury, who keep a sort of nominal check upon it; the counsel for the Crown, who exercises an absolute discretion, not only as to the order in which the witnesses are produced, but as to their being called or not, and as to the questions which shall be put to them; and, finally, the judge and jury, who decide the case; are all absolutely independent of each other, is fitted only for the purpose of ascertaining, by a series of successive tests, the weight of the prosecutor's assertion that the prisoner is guilty. The result of the French system, on the contrary, is the gradual elaboration of a theory on the subject of the crime, supported by a mass of evidence which has been collected and arranged by a set of public functionaries intimately connected together, and bound by all the ties of official esprit de corps and personal vanity to maintain the accuracy of the conclusion at which they have arrived" (pp. 164-5, 6).

"The general result may probably be fairly expressed, by saying that an English criminal trial is a public inquiry, having for its object the discovery of truth, but thrown, for the purpose of obtaining that end, into the form of a litigation between the prosecutor and the prisoner" (p. 167).

Mr. Stephen is, however, by no means blindly enamoured of the English system, which he deems faulty in many respects. Thus, although he deprecates the introduction of continental systems in general, he is in favour of establishing public prosecutors under certain limitations:—

"The detection of crimes, which no private person has an interest in prosecuting, ought to be a branch, and a very important one, of the duties of the chief constable of the county or borough police. In the counties especially, these officers are generally men of education, intelligence, and experience, often military officers, and are perfectly competent, with the assistance of a few detectives, to inquire into the circumstances of any crime which may occur" (p. 172). He is, however, opposed to the plan of appointing standing counsel for the purposes of public prosecution, on which he makes the following, we think, most just observations:—

"If standing counsel for the Crown were appointed, there is no reason to suppose that the business would be at all better done than it is at present, and some great advantages would be lost. Under the present state of things, men who prosecute in one case defend in another; and this frequent change of parts has a strong tendency to secure their impartiality and independence. If a man were always to prosecute, he would come to sympathise with those who instruct him, and to think it his official duty to secure as many convictions as possible. If he were always to defend, he would come to look on the prosecutor as his natural rival and antagonist. It is desirable, as pointed out above, that the counsel for the Crown should consider himself as in many respects a judge, bound, not to convict at all events, but to see that the case against the prisoner is presented to the jury just as it is, in all its strength and all its weakness; and that the counsel for the prisoner, though an advocate, and not a judge, should not forget his obligations to the public. Nothing is more likely to favour this frame of mind than the habit of alternately prosecuting and defending prisoners, by which men learn practically what ways of conducting prosecutions and defences are and are not fair to the other side" (pp. 173-4).

On one very important matter in particular Mr. Stephen is at issue with our criminal practice—namely, that, in chap. 6, § 3, he advocates the direct and explicit interrogation of accused persons, both when on trial and when before the committing magistrate:—

"At the trial, I think the counsel for the Crown ought to interrogate the prisoner at the end of his case, and before the prisoner's defence. I would allow him to ask leading questions, and I would allow the counsel for the prisoner to re-examine, and the judge and jury to interpose any questions they pleased. The examination of a bankrupt whose discharge is opposed would furnish a good precedent, and the practice of the Bankruptcy Court shews not only the utility of the process, but the possibility of conducting it with propriety and humanity. The necessity of calling an adverse witness would be a reason for allowing the counsel for the Crown to sum up at the end of the case, if the prisoner was defended by counsel. This would assimilate the course of criminal to that of civil trials. In simple cases this would for the most part be unnecessary" (p. 201).

For his arguments on this we refer our readers to the work itself.

On the other hand, however, Lord Brougham's favourite proposition to render the accused a competent witness if he desires to be sworn, finds small favour with Mr. Stephen, who argues thus upon it:—

"The proposal to make the prisoner a competent witness has an appearance of system about it which, at first sight is extremely plausible. It would, no doubt, harmonise well with what I have called the litigious theory of criminal trials, but there are strong objections to it. In the first place, the prisoner could never be a real witness; it is not in human nature to speak the truth under such a pressure as would be brought to bear on the prisoner, and it is not a light thing to institute a system which would almost enforce perjury on every occasion. It is a mockery to swear a man to speak the truth who is certain to disregard it. It may be objected that this proves that the prisoner ought not to be examined at all; but this objection is not well founded. It is one thing to enable a man to be a witness on his own behalf, to tempt him to come forward and tell such a story as he thinks best for his own interest, and another thing to subject him to questions in the interest of his accuser. In the one case he comes forward to ask credit for his own account of the matter; in the other he is asked to admit or deny or explain particular circumstances, his ability to do so being a proof of innocence, his inability evidence of guilt. In the one case the man is tempted to invent a lie, in the other case he is probed for the purpose of discovering the truth. To leave the discretion of calling the prisoner or not in the hands of his counsel would be carrying the litigious view of a criminal trial to an unwise extent. After all, a trial ought to be inquiry into truth, but it is idle to suppose that the counsel for the prisoner will regard it in that light. He would call or decline to call the prisoner, not with an eye to the interests of truth, but with an eye to the verdict only, under the special circumstances of the case. The exercise of this discretion would introduce all sorts of difficulties into the case. To the counsel for the prisoner it would be a most painful discretion. By not calling the prisoner he might expose himself to the imputation of a tacit confession of guilt; by calling him he might expose an innocent man to a cross-examination which might make him look guilty. To the judge and jury it would be equally unwelcome. How would they know what construction to put on the fact that the prisoner was not called? The construction put upon it by them would be a mere guess. Various subordinate questions of difficulty would arise. It would not be easy to arrange the right of reply, and it would be very difficult to put the cross-examination by the counsel for the Crown under proper restrictions. If he examined the prisoner himself, as an independent part of his own duty, he would probably do so with a good deal of the feeling of a judge, and with an eye to the discovery of truth; but if he had to treat him as a witness, called on the other side, the case would be much altered, and the judge would be merged in the advocate fighting for the verdict. Many delicate questions will arise on such an occasion. For instance, might the counsel for the Crown cross-examine the prisoner to his credit, and ask him whether he had been previously convicted &c., as he might with other witnesses? Regard the prisoner solely as a witness, and there is no reason why he should not; yet this would indirectly put the man upon his trial for the whole of his past life" (pp. 201-3).

Mr. Stephen also condemns the proposal of empowering the Court to refer scientific questions to a subsidiary jury of experts, or to associate such with the jury (p. 209).

The following passage on this subject is forcible :—

"Those who doubt whether juries are competent to deal with scientific evidence should remember that men actually have at times to judge, and that in matters of life and death, upon scientific evidence, without sitting on juries. A man observes a small swelling on his thigh; he goes to a surgeon, who says, 'This is an aneurism, and if you do not allow me to cut down upon the artery, and tie it, you may fall down dead at any moment.' He shews it to another, who says, 'It is no aneurism at all, but a mere tumour, on which I will operate; if I do not, you will be exposed to some dreadful consequence; but if I am wrong, and it is an aneurism, as soon as I make the first cut you are a dead man.' Here a man is judge of life and death in his own case; nor can he escape the necessity of deciding. These illustrations lead to the proposition, that a jury composed as at present is more likely to arrive at a conclusion satisfactory to the public, in the class of cases referred to, than either of a jury of experts, or jury bound by the decision of experts" (p. 214).

Our author upholds, and ably defends, the trial by jury (chap. 6, § 4); and even the rule which requires the verdict to be unanimous. Even those who may not agree with him will, we think, admit that there is considerable force and originality in the following :—

"To put a dozen farmers into a bare room, and say, 'You shall not have your dinners till you have made up your minds,' is a rough and half humorous way of mentally jogging them. It assumes the possibility of a kind of sluggish obstinacy, which requires some slight external stimulus to overpower it; and to view the thing tragically is to misunderstand it. It must, however, be confessed, that the expedient is coarse and rough, and that it belongs to an age of less considerate and polished manners than our own. The mere confinement is quite compulsion enough, and the power of ordering reasonable accommodations in the shape of either food or fire might well be intrusted to the judge. The difficulty has been practically solved by the power which the judges have assumed of discharging a jury if they are unable to agree after a reasonable time, and if they declare that there is no chance of their agreeing. In such cases the prisoner can be tried again, and this is obviously the course of proceeding most consistent with the general character of the institution" (p. 223). To this we will add, that the prohibition against refreshment does not apply until the jury have retired to consider their verdict;—they may, and frequently do, have refreshment during the course of the trial, so as to prevent their feeling the want of it during a consultation of any reasonable length.

In the same chapter the author declares himself adverse to the proposal to grant new trials in criminal cases, unless, he says, "new evidence or new reasons to doubt the truth or accuracy of the evidence actually given had been discovered; or the judge who tried the cause were dissatisfied with the verdict" (p. 231)—a suggestion which appears well worthy of consideration.

The chapter on English Criminal Procedure concludes with the following passage :—

"On the whole, the defects of the criminal law should be remedied with a careful hand, and with the greatest solicitude to preserve unimpaired its essentially free and noble character. No spectacle can be better fitted to satisfy the bulk of the population, to teach them to regard the Government as their friend, and to read them lessons of truth, gentleness, moderation, and respect for the rights of others, especially for the rights of the weak and the wicked, than the manner in which criminal justice is generally administered in this country. No one can fail to be touched when he sees a judge, who has reached the bench by an unusual combination of power, industry, and good fortune, bending the whole force of his mind to understand the confused, bewildered, wearisome, and half-articulate mixture of question and statement which some wretched clown pours out in the agony of his terror and confusion. The extreme latitude which is allowed to a man on his trial is also highly honourable. Hardly anything short of wilful misbehaviour, such as gross insults to the Court, or abuse of a witness, will draw upon him the mildest reproof. This generous and dignified tenderness towards misery, even though it may be the misery of crime, is so noble a quality, that it has, to a great extent, atoned for, and, in the eyes of inaccurate observers, appeared to justify, real defects in the system which it animates. One great reason for observing, and trying to remedy, those defects is, that they mar the beauty of an institution which an English lawyer may be allowed to describe as a great practical school of truth, morality, and compassion" (pp. 232, 233).

Mr. Stephen advises the establishment of a department of justice and legislation (p. 333); and that, with respect to decided cases, that department ought to have in its hands the whole system of reporting (Ib.); that it should have power to question the judges upon points of law raised, but not decided, by particular cases; and should undertake the codification of the reports (p. 335)—a series of proposals the propriety of every one of which is open to much question.

Mr. Stephen has added to his work an Appendix, containing at length the celebrated cases of Donnellan, Palmer, Dove, and Smethurst; and the French cases of the monk Léotade in 1848, the affair of St. Cyr in 1860, and of François Lesnier in 1848. The doubts and disputes relative to Donnellan's conviction are well known. Mr. Stephen declares his approval of the verdict; but, although morally satisfied of the guilt of the accused, we cannot look on the proof of the corpus delicti as complete. The report of Smethurst's case has been compared with the notes of the Lord Chief Baron, who also gave the author a copy of his communication to the Government on the subject. The three French cases are also very instructive. Mr. Stephen dismisses the last of them, that of François Lesnier, with the following sentence, which concludes the work :—

"If it is the true theory of criminal justice that the highest legal authorities ought to be at the head of a retinue of petty tyrants and police spies, such cases as Lesnier's must be expected. By leaving the prosecutor and the accused to fight out their differences before impartial judges, assisted by counsel who are thoroughly independent of all local authorities whatever, and by attorneys who are merely the agents of those who employ them, we, at all events, effectually avoid evils like this; whilst our rules of evidence, which may sometimes shut out the truth, close the door on oceans of malignant gossip, against which innocence is a poor protection, and establish a standard of proof so high as to be in itself a strong protection against perjury and conspiracy" (p. 490).

COMMISSIONERS TO ADMINISTER OATHS IN CHANCERY.—The Lord Chancellor has appointed the following gentlemen to be Commissioners to administer oaths in the High Court of Chancery in England :—David Lloyd, of Lampeter, Cardiganshire; Joseph Bland Walker, of Belper, Derbyshire; and John Jesse Handley, of Mansfield, Nottinghamshire.

The Right Hon. Sir William Erle, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed the following gentlemen to be Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women:—George James Andrews, of Dorchester, in and for the county of Dorset; Edward Walmisley, of No. 25, Abingdon-street, Westminster, in and for the county of Middlesex, also in and for the city and liberties of Westminster, and city of London; Edward Brown Fiske, of Beccles, Suffolk, in and for the county of Suffolk, also in and for the county of Norfolk; and Henry Watson, of Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, in and for the county of Bucks.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 5, 1863.

THE decision in Grant v. Ellis (9 M. & W. 113), that the 2nd section of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) does not extend to rent reserved on an ordinary lease for years, having been generally acquiesced in and followed, and even confirmed by a decision in the House of Lords, we may be thought presumptuous, or at least unpractical, in questioning its soundness. But after the reversal of Solarte v. Palmer and of Upfil's case, the cause of principle against authority can never be pronounced hopeless. The statute, having premised that the word "rent" shall extend "to all heriots, and to all services and suits for which a distress may be made, and to all annuities and periodical sums of money charged upon or payable out of land (except moduses or compositions belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole)," enacts (sect. 2), that "no person shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent, but within twenty years after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action, shall have first accrued," &c.; and in the 42nd section it enacts, "that no arrears of rent or interest, &c., shall be recovered by any distress, action, or suit, but within six years next after the same respectively shall have become due." In Grant v. Ellis, the Court of Exchequer, adopting a suggestion thrown out by the Court of Common Pleas, in Paget v. Foley (3 Scott, 125), held, "that the word 'rent' in the 2nd section of the statute cannot be taken as having any reference to rents reserved on leases for years, by contract between the parties, as the conventional equivalent for the right of occupation, but must be confined to rents existing as an inheritance distinct from the land, and for which before the statute the party entitled might have had an assise, such as ancient rent-service, for farm rents, or the like." It is not clearly to be inferred from the judgment, that the Court intended to go further than this, and to hold, that the 2nd section applies only to cases where the contest is between two persons who both claim title to the rent, and does not apply where the contest, even though it be in respect of a freehold rent, is between the owner of the rent and the person liable to pay it. But in The Dean and Chapter of Ely v. Cash (15 M. & W. 617, on a case sent by the Lord Chancellor, on appeal from the Master of the Rolls, who had decided in favour of the occupier, The Dean of Ely v. Bliss, 5 Beav. 574), the Court put a construction upon its decision in the former case, and held, that the remedy of an ecclesiastical corporation aggregate to recover tithes (which are included in the act under the word "land") was not barred, as between the titheowner and the occupier, by twenty years' discontinuance of receipt of the tithes. Alderson, B., said, "We think this question concluded by the authority of Grant v. Ellis. In that case, we construed the word 'rent,' in sect. 2, as confined to cases where an estate in the rent is claimed, and where the defendant sets up an adverse possession of the rent itself* for twenty years as an answer to the plaintiff's claim. There, as here, the word 'rent' had an ambiguous meaning, being either the estate in the rent, or the rent reserved under a lease; and we held, that in this section it was confined to the former meaning alone, and that a mere non-receipt of rent, under a lease for more than twenty years, did not deprive the lessor of his right to rent under the lease. Here, by the interpretation clause, it is provided, that the word 'land' includes tithes; but 'tithes' is, like 'rent,' ambiguous; it may mean either the estate in the tithes, or it may mean the chattel itself, the fruits of the estate. We find it, however, included under the word 'land,' and no one doubts that the word 'land,' in its proper sense, applies only to cases in which there are two persons, each claiming an estate in the land adverse to the other. We, therefore, think we ought to confine the operation of the section to cases where there are two parties, each claiming an adverse estate in the tithes. Therefore, a person who has received no tithes for twenty years cannot recover the possession of them from another who has for twenty years received those tithes from the terre-tenant. This construction reconciles the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2, with Lord Tenterden's Act for shortening the time of prescription in such cases, and for limiting it, in the case of tithes, to a period of sixty years and three incumbrances; for Lord Tenterden's Act clearly applies to tithes as a chattel, and provides a limitation to protect the terre-tenant in his prescriptive mode of rendering them to the clergyman or titheholder†."

* In James v. Salter (4 Scott, 168; 3 Bing. N. C. 544), however, the mere non-receipt of a rent-charge for twenty years was held a bar, under the 2nd section. (See Searle v. Cott, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 36).

† As to this, see the observations of Lord Langdale, where the case was before him (5 Beav. 582), and Paget v. Foley (3 Scott, 121; 2 Bing. N. C. 688). There is no need to reconcile the acts. Their objects are essentially different. An improprator sues for tithes or for a modus. The terre-tenant answers, that no tithe or modus has been rendered within twenty years. That is an answer, as we contend, by virtue of the Statute of Limitations. If, on the other hand, the terre-tenant proves that a modus or composition has been accepted during sixty years, that is an answer, under Lord Tenterden's Act, establishing a qualified exemption by prescription—not a loss of title on the part of the improprator. Lord Tenterden's Act applied the same rule to claims of total exemption, but that was because such claims were also founded on prescription, which was the matter under regulation. Tithes not belonging to an ecclesiastical or eleemosynary corporation sole are subject to the same considerations as rent and other periodical renders. And it would have been as great an anomaly to except them from the operation of the Statute of Limitations, as it would have been to anticipate that statute with reference to impropriate tithes alone, in the Prescription Act.

We rub our eyes, and refer again to the 2nd section. Still we read, "No person shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action to recover any land or rent, but within" &c. If the land of Z. is charged with a rent of 100*l.* a year, and Z., thinking that the rent belongs to A., pays 100*l.* a year to him, and both deny the title of another claimant, B., how does B. proceed? By action or by distress. If by action, does he sue A.? If by distress, does he distrain upon the land of A.? How is it possible for any question to arise between A. and B. with respect to a rent charged upon the land of Z.? The construction adopted by the Court of Exchequer would wholly deprive the 2nd section of operation upon claims of rents, with the single exception, perhaps, of heriots, for to enact that "a person who has not received his rents within twenty years shall not recover the possession of them from another who has for twenty years received the rent from the terre-tenant," is to beat the air. The person who, without title, receives money in the name of rent, does not thereby become liable to the owner of the rent, whose only remedy is against the person or the land charged with the render, and is founded, not on the wrongful render to a stranger, but on the non-render to himself. This observation does not apply so completely to tithes, for which ejectment will lie against a stranger taking them after they are severed. (32 Hen. 8, c. 37; Baldwin v. Wise, Sir W. Jones, 321; Cumell v. Clavering, Ld. Raym. 789; 11 Rep. 25).

Taking the two cases together, it appears that the Court of Exchequer meant to decide that the 2nd section does not apply where a rent (whether it be a rent-charge, ancient rent-service, heriot, rent-service on a lease for years, or other periodical render, within the 1st section) is claimed from the party liable to render it, and no render has been made to a third person wrongfully claiming title. In Doe d. Angell v. Angell (9 Q. B. 355) the Court of Queen's Bench went further, and, on the authority of Grant v. Ellis, laid it down, without any qualification, that in the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 7th sections, and in the 9th section, where it is used to denote the subject-matter of the enactment, the word "rent" means "rent-charge" only. It is submitted that the doctrine we have attributed to the Court of Exchequer is contrary to authority, and irreconcilable with the terms and spirit of the act. (See James v. Salter, 4 Scott, 168). If it be correct, the Legislature has, on no conceivable ground, and after taking express and particular notice of the different kinds of rent, omitted to limit the period within which a rent-charge in fee may be recovered; for no other section is applicable to the case; sect. 42 merely limits the amount of arrears to be recovered. Accordingly the Court of Exchequer itself has subsequently, in the case of Owen v. De Beauvoir (16 M. & W. 547), held, that the 2nd section (as explained by the 34th, which extinguishes the title at the end of the period of limitation) does extinguish the title of the lord of a manor to an ancient rent payable by a freeholder of the manor after twenty years' discontinuance of receipt, without any wrongful payment made to a third person. In so deciding, the Court seems to have been unconscious that it was overruling

Grant v. Ellis and Ely v. Oak. The decision in Owen v. De Beauvoir (which was confirmed in the Exchequer Chamber (De Beauvoir v. Owen, 5 Exch. 166)) is (so far as it concerns the question under discussion^{*}) clearly correct, and it disposes of the most important of the grounds on which the Court relied in the other two cases.

It remains to notice the reasons given in the judgment in Grant v. Ellis. They were, first, that so far as relates to land, the word "recover" in the 2nd section means the same thing as obtain possession or seisin of, assuming one person to be in wrongful seisin or possession of land to which another has the right, and it must have the same meaning in respect of the other subject—rent. And though there cannot be, strictly, any wrongful adverse seisin or possession of rent by another, yet before the act, "a party seised of rent, whether rent-service, rent-charge, or rent-rack, might, in case the rent was paid to another or withheld from himself, consider himself, if he thought fit, as being disseised of such rent;" and by the judgment he was to recover seisin. "Now, we are of opinion, that it is to this sort of recovery only that the 2nd section has reference, for such is clearly the meaning of the word 'recover' when used with reference to land." A singular argument to use in the construction of an act which abolished the action of assise and all other actions for recovery or assertion of title or seisin, as distinguished from actions for recovery of possession merely! But this part of the judgment contains its own answer, for it admits that an assise would lie upon the rent being merely withheld. The reason that an assise lay for a rent-service reserved upon a lease for life, but not upon a lease for years, was simply that there could be seisin of a rent for life but not of a rent for years, and consequently that writ which gave the remedy for a disseisin had no application in the latter case. But that no assise lay to recover possession of an estate for years, and no seisin could be recovered of such an estate, is scarcely a reason for excluding persons from the operation of the principal enactment of a statute, which included in its policy and effect the abolition of all actions in which seisin is recovered. There is no disseisin of a rent-service by simple denial†, and the owner of a rent-service in fee, which is merely withheld, does not by distraining recover seisin of the rent, for he has never been disseised. But Owen v. De Beauvoir decides, that the 2nd section may be a bar to a distress under such circumstances, and therefore not made to "recover" the rent, within the principle of Grant v. Ellis. Now, putting disseisin out of the question, a landlord "recovers" a rent-service reserved on a lease for years, in precisely the same way as the lord of a manor in respect of his seignory, recovers by distress, a rent-service reserved on a feoffment prior to the statute Quia emptores. And titles are recovered from the occupier in the same sense in which an ancient rent-service is recovered from the tenant.

The second reason was, that when the 3rd section, which is explanatory of the 2nd, speaks of the estate or interest claimed, it cannot refer to a claim by a person entitled on a common lease for years, who "has no estate at all in the rent." (Prescott v. Boucher, 3 B. & Ad. 849). He is entitled to the rent when it from time to time becomes due, as being an incident to his reversion, and not because he has any estate in the rent itself." The reversioner on a lease for life has an estate in the rent reserved, of which he may be disseised. The reversioner on a lease for years has an estate in the rent reserved in the same sense, except that, not being freehold, it is not subject to disseisin. But Owen v. De Beauvoir is a conclusive answer to this argument; for there the 2nd section was held to apply to a proceeding in which it was not sought to recover seisin, because the claimant had never been disseised. All that Prescott v. Boucher decided was, that a tenant in fee who leases for years at a rent, is not "tenant in fee" of the rent, within the words of the 32 Hen. 8, c. 37, which was not deciding much. The Court went out of its way to add, that the reversioner was not tenant at all of the rent. But unless they meant merely that he had no seisin of it, it is impossible to say what they did mean.

Owen v. De Beauvoir also disposes of the argument in Grant v. Ellis, derived from the use of the words "arrears of rent," in the 42nd section; for these words clearly include arrears of rent-service in fee, rent-charge, &c. In Payet v. Foley (3 Scott, 135), Tindal, C. J., suggested that the 42nd section did not apply to rent-service. (See Strachan v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & El. 558^{*}). The distinction between the language used in the 2nd from that in the 42nd section, with respect to rent, was necessary to express the different objects of those sections. The 2nd section bars and (with the aid of the 34th section) extinguishes the right to recover any rent under the circumstances prescribed; the 42nd, limits the amount of rent recovered by a claimant who succeeds in shewing that his title is not barred, to the arrears for six years.

The two other reasons were, that a different construction would enable the tenant, if, after twenty years' non-payment of rent, more than twenty years of the term remained unexpired, to defeat the landlord's right of entry on the expiration of the term, by payment of rent to a stranger wrongfully claiming the reversion, without any possibility of interference by the true owner (sect. 9); and that it would also lead to this incongruity, that the landlord's remedy for rent would be barred, while the remedies of either party under any covenant or condition contained in the lease would remain. This last seems to be a very fanciful and slender objection, and is conclusively answered by Hunter v. Nockolds (1 Mac. & G. 640) and Arnott v. Holden (18 Q. B. 593), &c. The tenant would incur a forfeiture by paying rent to a stranger wrongfully claiming the reversion, though it might be difficult or impossible on the part of the landlord to discover or prove the fact. A like incongruity (if it be one) results from the decision in Owen v. De

* The construction adopted by the Court in that case, that the commencement of the discontinuance of the receipt of rent is always the date of the last payment, seems to be wrong. If at Lady-day I receive the rent due on that day, how can I be said to discontinue the receipt of my rent until another payment becomes due, and is not received?

† An assise lay for rent whenever it was withheld, after seisin had once been had. (Fitz. N. B. 179). A mere denial of a rent-service was no disseisin, because the lord could distrain of common right. "There be three causes of disseisin of rent-service, that is to say, rescous, replevin, and enclosure. Rescous is, &c.; and the cause why such things so done be disseisins made to the lord, is for this—that by such things the lord is disturbed of the means by which he ought to have come to his rent, scil. of the distress." (Litt. s. 237). Coke adds two other disseisins of a rent-service, each of which amounts to a denial on record; and Littleton afterwards mentions a sixth. But denial of a rent-charge was a disseisin. "There be four causes of disseisin of a rent-charge, scil. rescous, replevin, enclosure, and denial, for denial is a disseisin of a rent-charge, as is said before of a rent-seck." (Litt. s. 238).

* Where a rent is secured by covenant, the title to the rent may be barred by the statute, and yet the remedy on the covenant remain, according to the now settled principle of construing the 3rd section of the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, which allows a new period of twenty years for each new breach. (Arnott v. Holden, 18 Q. B. 593; Manning v. Phelps, 10 Exch. 59).

Beauvoir, under which a tenant may be discharged from his quit-rent or heriots, while he remains liable in respect of all other rents and service. The suggested hardship of leaving the title to the reversion unprotected, amounts to this only, that a lessor who neglects for twenty years to recover a rent of substantial value, must take into account that he is endangering his title to a remote reversion as well as to a present rent. No one who is acquainted with the risk and inconvenience arising from the possibility of dormant titles to reversions expectant on long leases (so common in the northern counties), would hesitate to applaud the policy of an enactment having the effect deprecated by the Court of Exchequer. But however the hardship may be estimated, it is submitted that it affords no reason for introducing an exception to a plain enactment which is in terms wholly unqualified. The same hardship might arise upon a lease for life; and it is to be remembered that the wrongful payment of rent may be concurrent with the discontinuance of its receipt by the rightful owner, so that the application of the 2nd section to the case of rent on a lease for years would be merely to add to the risk that the landlord may, after twenty years' non-payment of rent, find that his reversion is then actually transferred to another, this further risk—that if his reversion then happens to remain unbarred, it may possibly be barred by an act to be done at any time while it has still twenty years to wait.

This extended discussion of the cases of Grant v. Ellis and Ely v. Cash seemed to be justified by their importance. It is submitted, that the doctrine of these cases is unsound; and if it would confine the operation of the 2nd section, in respect of rents and tithes, to those cases where the rent or tithe has been wrongfully received by a stranger, is contrary to the authority of James v. Salter, and overruled by De Beauvoir v. Owen; and if it would exclude rents-service of freehold from that section, is overruled by the latter case; and that so much of the reasoning on which it is based as is not contradicted by those authorities, and might, consistently with them, remain applicable to rents reserved on leases for years, is unworthy to be put into competition with the plain words of the act.

We have not noticed the judgment of Lord St. Leonards in The Dean of Ely v. Bliss (2 De G., Mac., & G. 459), where (against the opinion of Maule, J.) he adopted the construction of the Court of Exchequer, because it adds nothing to the arguments we have discussed, and is, indeed, not worthy of the reputation of that distinguished judge. We may add, that the decision in that case was followed in Bunbury v. Fuller (9 Exch. 128).

In Archbold v. Scully (7 Jur., N. S., part 1, 1169; 9 H. L. C. 360), the exact point decided in Grant v. Ellis,—that the 2nd section does not extend to rent reserved on a lease for years—was acted upon without discussion, as established law—but the other questions discussed above still remain to be settled by the Court of ultimate appeal.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE PROMOTION OF SOCIAL SCIENCE.

THE seventh annual meeting of this Society, of which Lord Brougham is President, will be held in Edinburgh, commencing on the 7th and ending on the 24th October in the present year.

The six departments will be as usual, namely:—1. Jurisprudence; 2. Education; 3. Punishment and Reformation; 4. Public Health; 5. Social Economy; 6. Trade and International Law.

In both programmes issued by the Society, we are informed that under the first of these heads, papers are invited on the following subjects, which will have preference over others:—

"I. PRINCIPLES OF JURISPRUDENCE AND LEGISLATION.

"II. METHOD OF LEGISLATION.

"Minister of Justice.—Codification, and how to regulate the Development and Authentication of Case Law.—Revision and Consolidation of the Statute Law of Scotland antecedent to the Union.—Judicial Statistics.

"III. ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

"Organization and Discipline of the Legal Profession.—Scotch Action of Declarator, its Uses and Abuses.—English and Scotch Law of Prescription and Limitation of Actions.—Law of Evidence in Civil Cases.—Law of Evidence in Criminal Cases.—Jury Trial.—Execution in one Division of the Kingdom of Judgments and Decrees pronounced in another.—Public Prosecutors.—Coroners' Inquests, ought they to be introduced into Scotland?—Preliminary Investigation in Criminal Cases, ought they to be Public or Private?—Appeal in Criminal Cases.

"IV. LAWS RELATING TO PROPERTY.

"The 17th Section of the Statute of Frauds.—Succession to Property, and Restrictions on its Disposition.

"V. LAWS RELATING TO PERSONAL RIGHTS.

"Law of Marriage, Legitimation, and Divorce.—Law of Libel and Slander."

And under the latter—

"The Metrical System of Weights and Measures. Acclimatization of Animals and Plants.—Conditions of Agricultural Success.—The Iron Trade and its Statistics.—Scotch Banking.—Trade, Manufactures, and Fisheries of Scotland.—Limited Liability as applicable to Partnerships.—Capture and Destruction of Private Property at Sea by Belligerents.—Laws of Blockade and Contraband."

No paper, it seems, must occupy in reading more than twenty minutes.

It is, of course, with departments 1 and 6 that we are chiefly interested. Few things are more needed at the present day than sound views on jurisprudence in general, and international law in particular. We hope that several valuable papers on both will be read at the approaching meeting; and that the authors will avoid the temptations to which, in treating these subjects, especially the latter, they will almost necessarily be exposed, of straying into the region of politics on the one hand, or of mere practice on the other.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, appointing Sir James Plaistow Wilde, Knt., one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, to be Judge of her Majesty's Court of Probate.

The Right Hon. Sir William Erle, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed Edward Martin Wright, Gent., of Bacup, Lancashire, to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Lancaster.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 12, 1863.

THE speech of the Lord Chancellor, addressed to the House of Lords in June last, contains the most important suggestions for the amendment of the law ever submitted to Parliament.

We do not so much allude to that part of his speech which relates to the revision and expurgation of the statute law, because that measure originated with another noble Lord, but to the proposal of the Lord Chancellor to make a digest of the reports of the decisions of the various courts of law and equity, as contained in upwards of 1200 volumes. His Lordship very fairly admits that he only revives the proposal made to James I by the great Lord Bacon.

If that illustrious man felt the necessity of a digest in his own times, when the reports were contained in about seventy volumes, how much greater must it be now, when the library shelves of a lawyer who possesses them all groans under their number, and there is yearly added to them nearly one-third of the number of the reports in existence at the time of Lord Bacon.

The difficulty which counsel have in giving an opinion, or preparing an argument, on many subjects may well be conceived, when so many volumes are to be searched for precedents, and when, after the most laborious investigation, a decision escapes notice, and lurks hidden in some ancient book of reports, which a judge may consider decisive, when the matter is brought before him.

In the volumes of our reports, moreover, no attempt is made to arrange the decisions there recorded, according to the various subjects under which they naturally fall; they are printed merely in chronological order. Many of them are conflicting; many of them relate to obsolete law; many of them, especially in the reports of recent times, are set forth at too great length, or are precisely similar to cases often reported before, and are, therefore, as precedents, superfluous.

What, therefore, is more reasonable, or more likely to lead to useful results than the proposal of the Lord Chancellor to digest this chaotic mass of recorded decisions; to lop off all redundancies in the report of each case; to arrange the whole of them in clear and logical order, omitting all that are overruled, reversed, or obsolete, or conflict with others, the decisions in which are more reasonable, or more in accordance with the analogies to be derived from the principles laid down in other cases long approved of and acted upon.

Moreover, one very great benefit which will inevitably result from such a complete examination of the law as a digest would involve, is, that all those rules of law which are inconvenient, inequitable, or which lead to litigation, would be discovered, so that a proper remedy could be applied by the interposition of Parliament, not in the loose and irregular manner in which so-called amendments of the law have been effected by bills introduced by amateur or other law reformers (and which often lead to more litigation and uncertainty than the law they were intended to improve), but in a manner so complete and effectual, that those evils, if not altogether eradicated, may be, in a great measure, alleviated and removed.

On the whole, the speech of the Lord Chancellor met with the approval of the law Lords in the House of Lords. All seemed to admit, that the task about to be undertaken by the Lord Chancellor, if possible, would be of the highest utility.

Lord Cranworth, however, was afraid that his Lordship had undertaken "an impossible task." Why an impossible task? Even his Lordship could not but admit, that any one lawyer might make a complete digest of the law upon any particular subject; as, for instance, the contract of sale or mortgage. This is done by the author of every good text-book, who, however, not only digest all the decisions of the Courts, but also all the enactments of Parliament; and if this can be done by an individual, with regard to one subject, there is no reason why the whole system of our law may not be embraced in a digest, undertaken by a sufficient number of individuals, to each of whom one or more subjects, according to their length and importance, may be allotted. The completion of such a task, like the great engineering works of the present day, is a mere question of time and means. The work proposed by the Lord Chancellor may, we doubt not, be as readily accomplished as treatises might be written upon every branch of the law, which every law publisher could inform Lord Cranworth is a mere question of men and money; the former of which the Bar of England can doubtless supply; the latter cannot, with any shew of decency, be withheld by those who have expended millions on the Houses of Parliament, and have paid more, even for the paintings on its walls, than would suffice for the framing of a code, the operation of which would be felt as a blessing wherever the English language is spoken.

Lord Cranworth, moreover, made an assertion which must have astonished every lawyer, viz. that it "was a fallacy to talk about there being any doubt as to what the law was. Except in one or two disputed cases, there was no difficulty in ascertaining what the law was." Now, had not the noble Lord for a long time occupied a seat on the common-law bench as a puisne judge, and afterwards sat in the equity courts successively as Vice-Chancellor, Lord Justice of the Court of Appeal, and Lord Chancellor, we should have thought that his knowledge of the law must be of a somewhat limited character. The number of cases in which there is an actual conflict of judicial decision is, in the whole body of the English law, undoubtedly great; but the number of those cases in which, although judges do not venture openly to differ from other decisions, in effect do so, is enormous. As to there being no difficulty in ascertaining what the law is, the noble Lord must have forgotten his own experience at the bar, when he made such an assertion.

The functions of a barrister and a judge are totally distinct; their labours are totally dissimilar; upon the barristers on each side is thrown the onus of discovering the law applicable to the case he endeavours to set up; to the judge is allotted the far lighter task of deciding which of the advocates is right.

Lord Cranworth's observation must apply only to his experience as a judge, and must be made in total forgetfulness of the difficulties often thrown upon members of the Bar, who have their 1200 volumes of Reports, from which they must eliminate the law to enlighten the judge, who has then, we admit, very rarely any difficulty "in ascertaining what the law is."

The noble Lord (Cranworth) endeavoured to shew that nothing would be gained by a code, because as much uncertainty would exist under a code as under the present state of the English law, as deduced from the decisions of our courts of justice. But what reason does the noble Lord give for this? Why, that upon one occasion, "in a case before the Privy Council, it became of great importance to ascertain what was the law of France; the opinion of twelve of the most eminent lawyers Paris could produce was taken, and six of them decided one way, and six another." The one instance produced by his Lordship is hardly sufficient to prove what he asserts. It may be well admitted, that no code can be sufficiently comprehensive to take in all cases which may arise; and that, consequently, there will be a conflict of opinion as to what the law is under a particular combination of circumstances, not sufficiently provided for by the code; but the real question is, whether, by a code or digest, a very large proportion of those difficulties, and that conflict of law which undoubtedly exists under uncodified and undigested laws, may not be effectually got rid of?

In the instances cited by his Lordship, we must remember that the foreign law had to be pressed, as a matter of fact; that, perhaps, rather more than six opinions may have been taken on each side, and those only produced which suited the purpose of those by whom they were taken, just as when it is wished by the parties to a suit to ascertain the value of land, an equal number of equally respectable valuers are generally to be found to prove the value to that which it is asserted to be by their respective employers.

It is, no doubt, true that no code will ever be perfect; the digest of the Roman law, by Justinian's order, is imperfect, but no one can fairly allege that it was not in the highest degree useful, and that its civilizing influence has been felt in every country where the Roman law has been understood and studied; and even indirectly in other countries, as in our own land, where it has been neglected.

Lord Cranworth, however, although protesting against a code, said, "that he would listen with the greatest satisfaction to any proposal for making the law more clear; and if it could be done by that sort of digest proposed by the Lord Chancellor, he certainly should have nothing to say against it."

That the proposed digest of the Lord Chancellor will be a great boon to the country we have no doubt; and it is equally certain that the time has arrived when it has become an absolute necessity. It will, no doubt, meet with opponents, some of whom may assert that the work is inexpedient, some that it is impracticable; but we believe that its difficulties have been for many years pondered over by the Lord Chancellor, and that he will in due time carry out this great undertaking in a manner which will render his tenure of office memorable in the legal annals of England.

CONCURRENCE OF THE DOWER TRUSTEE.

THE fact that in Collard v. Roe (4 Jur., N.S., part 1, p. 431), a purchaser was held entitled to the concurrence of the vendor's dower trustee, or (as the trustee was in Australia) to a vesting order, by the Court, has induced some practitioners to revive the practice, which had been falling into disuse, of making the dower trustee a conveying party. There can be little doubt that Collard v. Roe ought to have been differently decided, but the actual result of that case does not justify the revival of the old practice. In Collard v. Roe the limitation to the dower trustee was invalid before the passing of the stats. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 76 (repealed) and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, which abolished the then only remaining means or cases of forfeiture of a life estate; and the Vice-Chancellor founded his decision on the possibility of a forfeiture having been committed in the interval; and though he considered the objection most frivolous and vexatious, he thought that it was justified in principle and by the practice of conveyancers; but he gave no costs down to the hearing on either side. An appeal by the purchaser from the decree, on the ground that he should have been allowed his costs, and have been excused from the payment of interest down to the date of the conveyance, was dismissed, with costs, by the full Court of Chancery (Lord Campbell, C., and the Lords Justices), all the judges declaring that the requisition was frivolous and vexatious, and Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, L. J., thinking that it was no objection at all. Thus, even if it should be thought, with the Vice-Chancellor, that there is ground in principle or practice for the requisition, there need be no fear that it will ever again be insisted upon, with the certainty that the objector will have to bear his own costs; and it must be remembered that there is no case in which the non-concurrence of a dower trustee has been held to be an objection to the title on a subsequent sale.

In Collard v. Roe, the limitation to the dower trustee was (as nearly all such limitations were until recently) in the form of a contingent remainder (after the determination of the purchaser's life estate "by any means in his lifetime"), so that the Vice-Chancellor's suggestion of the possibility of a forfeiture was ill-founded. No forfeiture can give a right of entry to a contingent remainderman; and as the owner of the next vested remainder was also the tenant for life, and could not enter upon himself, forfeiture was impossible. And for the same reason, a surrender of the life estate was impossible.

In cases where forfeiture was possible before the statute above referred to, the objection is equally untenable, because the limitation to the dower trustee, being a voluntary limitation, is, under the stat. 27 Eliz. c. 4, void at law as against a purchaser for valuable consideration; and that so clearly, that a purchaser from a voluntary settlor, with notice of the settlement, has a marketable title which will be forced upon an unwilling purchaser. (Butherford v. Heath, 15 Beav. 408).

The practical result of these considerations is, that even in cases where the dower trustee is accessible, he ought not to be made a party, so as to assist in prolonging the existence of a custom that is dying out. The purchaser's solicitor would not be justified in involving his client in litigation, in order to obtain the useless conveyance; and the vendor's solicitor ought not to put his client to the expense of procuring it at the purchaser's request, unless he were under a reasonable apprehension of incurring greater expense in litigation.

REVIEW.

An Essay on Waste, Nuisance, and Trespass, chiefly with Reference to Remedies in Equity; treating of the Law of Timber, Mines, Light, Water, Support, the Construction of Public Works, &c. By GEORGE V. YOOL, M.A., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law, late Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo., pp. 299. [Maxwell.]

MR. YOOL's plan appears to have been to collect and arrange all the decisions in equity relating to the subject of his book, to extract from them such principles as they involve, and to state from the common-law authorities so much of the general law as is necessary to shew the foundation and bearing of the equitable decisions. The result is, that the book treats exclusively of injuries to property. With this clue to its design and scope, the work may be consulted without disappointment, although it omits some of the divisions of the titles "nuisance" and "trespass," as they would be displayed in a complete treatise on the law. The equitable jurisdiction in respect of waste being in every direction more extensive than that of the common-law courts, it follows that the author's plan has led him to make the first chapter of the book a complete treatise on that subject.

The second chapter, on nuisance, is divided into five sections. The first treats of nuisances in general. The author defines them as "injuries to easements, and such injuries to natural rights of [real] property as do not directly interfere with the possession of the soil." But he immediately proceeds to shew, that, even for the purpose of his book, the definition is incomplete, by not including those infringements of rights common to all members of the community which are called public nuisances, in respect of which, as well as of injuries to the enjoyment of private property, courts of equity will interfere. In the other divisions of the chapter, nuisances to dwelling-houses and to rights of support, and nuisances relating to water, are particularly considered.

Trespass, as regards real property, is defined to be "an illegal entry upon, or immediate injury to, real property." The subdivisions of the chapter are—1. Jurisdiction. 2. Taking part of the substance of the inheritance. 3. Lord of the manor and copyholder. 4. Various acts of trespass. 5. Protection of real property during litigation.

The fourth chapter is headed "Construction of Public Works," but it might have been better described as treating of "trespasses and nuisances by corporations and others engaged in the construction of public works," and treats principally of the cases which have occurred under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act.

The work has evidently been prepared with great care, and it is written in a clear and concise style, comprising in small space a large amount of information not to be found elsewhere in a collected form.

The Common-law Procedure Act and other Statutes relating to the Practice of the Superior Courts of Common Law, and the Rules of Court; with Notes. By JOHN C. F. S. DAY, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Second Edition. [Sweet, 1863.]

ONLY those persons who were conversant with the system of pleading and practice as it existed before the passing of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, can adequately estimate the importance and value of the changes and reforms introduced by that and the subsequent acts on the same subject, and carried into effect since that time by the courts of law. The pruning knife of the law reformer never had a greater luxuriance of stragglers to cross, nor was it ever sharpened and used to greater effect. As the trimming of the hedge or the clearing of the weeds produce a temporary effect, but are of little permanent advantage to the farmer or agriculturist without watchfulness and industry on his part to prevent a recurrence of the abuse, so the simplification of prolix procedure, and the abolition of useless forms, would be of no lasting benefit to the jurisprudent or the public unless the judges, who administer the laws, are imbued with the spirit of the reformers, and anxious to maintain the improvements introduced. It therefore is not only a subject of the greatest interest, but also of the last importance to the practitioner of the law and the public, to have the means of ascertaining the decisions of the Courts on the different Procedure Acts passed since 1852. The subject of Mr. Day's book renders it of considerable value to the Profession as a convenient manual of the decisions under the three Procedure Acts, 1852, 1854, and 1860; the Summary Procedure on Bills of Exchange Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 67); and of a portion of the Mercantile-law Amendment Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97). The above enumeration of the statutes coming under Mr. Day's hand in this work, make it apparent that it but partially treats of the subject of procedure or practice, for it is obvious that there are numerous statutes on those subjects necessary to be acquired by the practitioner, which are in no way alluded to in this volume. The title-page leaves the reader in doubt as to what the contents of the volume are, for when Mr. Day speaks of the Common-law Procedure Acts and other statutes relating to the practice of the superior courts of common law, one's expectations are raised only to be disappointed. We think Mr. Day would have been better advised if he had either confined his treatise to the Common-law Procedure Acts which pass under that title, or had made a general treatise on practice and procedure. At present he has produced a medley without design, for it would be difficult to assign a reason why the two extra acts should have alone been selected, for though, no doubt, they are very important acts, and the Bills of Exchange Act especially so, yet there are many acts relating to procedure and practice hardly of less importance. To the statutes are added the General Rules of Hilary Term, 1853, the Pleading Rules of Trinity Term, 1853, of Michaelmas Vacation, 1854, &c. Then, in the Appendix we have a reprint of Sir F. Pollock's Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 97); of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 82, giving the Lord Chancellor power to grant commissions to enable persons to take affidavits in Scotland and Ireland, and for amending the law relating to commissioners for the examination of witnesses; of the Nisi Prius Officers Act; of the Property Act (23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, but no allusion is made either to stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, or stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 34); of the Witnesses Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 34); of the act 24 Vict. c. 11, for the better ascertaining the law of foreign countries; and of the Petition of Right Act. The enumeration of the contents will probably suggest, that Mr. Day might justly term his work, with Juvenal, "Nostris farrago libelli." To separate, however, the plan from its execution, we must give the author credit for the completeness of his collection of cases up to the latest date; we have no omissions to record of any decided case upon the statutes to which he has appended notes. But as in the design, the author has, we think, embraced too much, so we think he has attempted to discuss certain subjects in the notes more widely than the size of his work admitted of, and consequently the treatment is incomplete. Thus, by way of example, on the subject of affidavits (pp. 17-23), a treatise is written, which is good as far as it goes, but a comparison with Chitty's Archbold's Practice, will at once shew that it is not complete. We would apply a similar remark to the observations on the law of evidence (pp. 201-211). Mr. Day is generally correct in his statements of the effect of the decided cases, but occasional inaccuracies are to be found; for instance, at p. 11, in the note to sect. 17 of the act of 1852, it is stated that personal service is absolutely necessary in the case of a lunatic, as he cannot know of the writ and wilfully evade its service. This is not correct; and in the Court of Exchequer, in Trinity Term last, in a case of Kimberley v. Alleyne, the plaintiff had leave to proceed without personal service of the writ on the lunatic defendant. This case has occurred since the publication of Mr. Day's book, but the error was in stating, as a proposition of law, the effect of decisions made upon the contents of the particular affidavits used in each case. He seems also to have thought that the lunatic must both know of the writ and wilfully evade its service. This is not necessary, as the section runs in the disjunctive. It is always satisfactory to know the principle upon which a new statutory enactment is founded, and is sometimes useful in the interpretation of it, and we should, therefore, have not considered a waste of space or labour to have referred to the late Mr. Justice Cresswell's judicial authority for the principle of the 19th section of the act of 1852 at p. 24, which enables proceedings to be taken against foreigners residing out of the jurisdiction of the superior courts, which that learned judge states, in Simoni v. Mallac (29 L. J., P. & M., 100), to be, that the parties, by entering into a contract in England, mutually give to each other the right to have the force and effect of that contract decided by an English tribunal.

In the note to sect. 19 of the act of 1854, which gives a judge power to adjourn a cause for the purposes of justice, at p. 201, Mr. Day says, "Where a party hesitated at the trial to consent to a reference of all matters in difference, Willes, J., intimated, that unless the necessary consent was given, he would adjourn the trial of the cause to the next assizes." (Jones v. Beaumont, 1 Fost. & F. 336). Now, it struck us as very wrong, that when the law entitles the parties to a cause which has come on for trial at Nisi Prius, to have it then tried out, and that a judge sitting there has no right to compel them to refer it (Robson v. Lees, 30 L. J., Exch., 235), that he should, by the means above suggested, deprive them of their rights for the time being, under the pretence that it was for the purposes of justice, within the meaning of that section; and that an author should state and pass over such a proceeding without expressing his dissent; but on referring to the case mentioned, we find the report says, that the reference was not intended by the judge to be of all matters in difference, but only of such as were "relative to the accounts." This, so far, mends the matter, but still, in our opinion, the judge had no right to use the power given to him by the section in question for such a purpose.

Although we have thought it necessary to notice what, in our opinion, are some of the shortcomings of this work, we must not be understood to deny, that, as a full and convenient collection of the cases decided on the acts we have alluded to ranged each under its proper section, it is likely to prove of much advantage to the practitioner.

EXPENDITURE BY FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

In several Friendly Societies the practice prevails of charging, as incidental expenses of management, every expenditure incurred that does not fall on the funds raised for sickness, death, or annuities, and such charges are paid either out of the General Fund, or the Management, or Incidental Expense Fund; for example, in the case of one society, the following items were charged:—

Liquor at monthly meeting . . .	£9 0 0
Band at the anniversary . . .	6 0 0
Dinners to persons carrying banners . . .	0 6 9
Donation to Lancashire Relief Fund . . .	5 0 0
Grant for procession and dinner on the marriage of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales . . .	10 0 0

Charges for feasting, and processions at anniversaries, the purchase or hire of banners, ribbons, aprons, and personal decorations of various kinds, for bell-ringing, &c., also occur in the accounts of some Friendly Societies.

The following opinion has been given by the Attorney-General, as to the legality of such expenditure, on a case submitted by the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England:—

"1. I am of opinion that no part of the funds raised under the authority of the 9th or 25th sections of the act, can be legally applied to any of the items of expenses above mentioned, or to any similar items. They are entirely unconnected either with the insurance and relief, &c. mentioned in the 9th section, or with the expenses of management referred to in the 25th.

"2. I think that no part of any funds raised under the authority of a rule for incidental expenses, can be legally applied to any of the items of expense above mentioned, or to any similar items. The expression 'incidental expenses' must be reasonably understood; and, within those limits, may receive a liberal interpretation; but it is clear that the meaning cannot be stretched beyond matters necessary to, or directly connected with, the main purposes for which the society is established.

"3. Proceedings may be taken against the member or officer paying away the funds for any of these purposes, provided in doing so he is guilty of a 'wilful' misapplication of the funds. In order to put the wilfulness beyond a reasonable doubt, I would advise that the attention of the various officers, &c. charged with the custody and disbursement of the funds, should be pointedly called to the state of the law on this subject, and that they should be apprised that future misapplications will be treated as wilful, and punished accordingly.

"4. I am of opinion that no person, other than the registrar, can commence proceedings under sect. 24, without the consent of the society to his so doing being first obtained; but that, independent of any such consent, proceedings may be taken by the registrar under the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 9.

"Temple, 24th July, 1863."

"WM. ATHERTON.

In consequence of this opinion, the Registrar of Friendly Societies in England has intimated his intention to take proceedings, pursuant to the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 58, s. 9, against any officer, &c., of a friendly society, who shall offend against the provisions of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 24.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 19, 1863.

So much use has been made of the name and authority of the late John Austin in the recent discussion of projects for codifying the English law, and so little notice has been taken of the distinctions laid down, and the difficulties suggested, by him, that it will be worth while to state what is to be gathered, in relation to the subject, from the few and fragmentary writings of that acute thinker.

The opinion of the author of "The Province of Jurisprudence Determined," as regards the existing and the possible forms of the English law, are contained in the 37th, 38th, and 39th of his Lectures on Jurisprudence; in some rough "Notes on Codification," printed by his widow under the injudicious advice of friends—for they are plainly antecedent in date to, and merely formed the materials for, the 39th Lecture; and in a short and separate article on codification and law reform.

In his 37th Lecture*, Mr. Austin explained, in a more didactic and formal manner than had previously been done, the differences between statute law and what he calls judiciary law. The two important differences are—first, that statute law is always a rule prescribed in abstract terms for future conduct, while a judiciary law is a principle established by the decision of a particular case not literally governed by any existing statute or precedent, the business and object of the judge being to decide that case in accordance, or rather in harmony, with the known law, while the effect is to create a precedent to govern or guide in the decision of other cases; and hence the second difference—that a statute, being the expression of his meaning, in terms selected by the legislator for the purpose, must be interpreted and applied according to the strict purport of its language; but a judiciary law is to be inferred from the circumstances of the case, and the effect of the decision on it, and not (otherwise than by way of gloss or guide where the ratio decidendi may be doubtful) from the reasons given by the judge for his decision; so that an inaccuracy in the expression of a statute may involve failure or doubt in its operation, but in the language of a judgment is of little or no importance.

"A law (or rule of law) made by judicial decision exist nowhere in a general or abstract form. Before it can be known, it must be gathered from the grounds or reasons of the specific decision or decisions by which it was virtually established. It therefore is complicated with the peculiarities of the specific case or cases to the adjudication of which it was applied by the tribunals. In order that its import may be correctly ascertained, the peculiar circumstances of the cases to which it was applied, as well as the general propositions which occur in the decisions, must be observed and considered. For these general propositions being thrown out by the tribunal with a view to the decision of a specific case, they must be taken in conjunction with, and must be limited by, the specific or individual peculiarities by which that case was distinguished. Such general propositions occurring in the course of a decision as have not this implication with the specific peculiarities of the case, are commonly styled extra-judicial, and commonly have no authority." [Rather never—the office of the judge is to decide, not to utter abstractions; what he does in the exercise of his office is a binding precedent; what he propounds is merely the opinion of a lawyer.] "In short, though a rule or principle is established by the decision or decisions, and is applicable and actually applied to subsequent and resembling cases, that rule or principle lies in concreto, and must be gotten from the decision by which it was established, through a process of abstraction and deduction." (Lectures, vol. 2, p. 323). This is followed by a sentence which Mr. Austin, on reconsideration, would probably have expunged:—"Before we can find the import of the general principle or rule, we must exclude the peculiarities of the case to which it was applied, and must consider the decision to which the tribunal would have come if its decision had not been modified by those specific differences." It is obvious that such a process would be equivalent to judging a new case—establishing a new principle. In extracting a rule from a decision, we consider merely what the decision is, not what it might have been had the case been different. We discard all the circumstances which did not affect the decision, and obtain our rule, by describing in general terms the material circumstances and the legal consequence. Hence, the perfection of a report of a decision is to state no circumstances but those which conduce to the legal result, no judicial remarks but those which bear upon the facts to which the decision applied; and hence the utility of having reports of several decisions which involve the same principle, in order that by comparison the immaterial circumstances in each may be eliminated.

On the other hand, "by reason of the abstract form which is given to a statute law, the words of the statute law are almost parcel of the statute. The terms through which the Legislature tried to convey its intentions, were probably measured as carefully as the intention which it tried to convey; and the interpreter ought to infer (unless the contrary manifestly appear), that it employed them with the obvious meaning which custom has annexed to them, and not with a sense which is unusual, and therefore recondite and obscure. If the literal meaning of the words were not the primary index (or were not scrupulously regarded by the interpreter), all the advantages (real or supposed) of statute legislation would be lost; for the purpose is to give an index more compendious, compact (or lying together), and therefore less fallible than is that to a judiciary rule. But if the interpreter might ad libitum desert the literal meaning, no such index could be given." [We shall see presently whether, even in the opinion of the lecturer, the index to a judiciary rule is generally less fallible than that to a statute law.]

"In the case, therefore, of a statute, the primary index to the law which the lawgiver intended to establish, is the grammatical sense of the words in which the statute is expressed. But the primary index to a rule created by a judicial decision is not the grammatical sense of the words or terms in which the judicial decision was pronounced by the legislating judge; and, a fortiori, it is not the grammatical sense of the very words or terms in which the legislating judge uttered his general propositions*."

After observing that the rule established by, or followed in, a decision is frequently called the "ratio decidendi," and distinguishing it from what is called the "ratio legis," or inducements to the making of a law, which latter is not a law, the lecturer proceeds to remark on the use and abuse of reference to the ratio legis in interpreting statute law, and then digresses to topics which are foreign to our present purpose.

The subject of the 38th and 39th Lectures is "the advantages and disadvantages of judicial or improper legislation, and the possibility of excluding that prevalent mode of legislation by means of codes or systems of statute law." After disposing of some objections to judiciary law which he considers groundless, the lecturer proceeds to suggest "a few of the numerous evils which, in his opinion, judiciary law really produces." First, it exists nowhere in fixed or determinate expression. It lies in concrete, and must be got at by a process of abstraction and deduction, which "is not uncommonly a delicate and difficult process, its difficulty being proportioned to the number and the intricacy of the cases from which the rule that is sought must be abstracted and induced. Consequently a rule of judiciary law is less accessible and knowable than a statute law, provided (that is to say) that the statute law with which the rule is compared be not only expressed in abstract and brief expressions, but also in such expressions as are apt and unambiguous as may be. For (as I shall shew immediately) the very indeterminateness of its form (or the very indeterminateness of the signs by which it is signified or indicated) renders a judiciary law less uncertain in effect than a statute law unaptly and dubiously worded. But assuming that a statute law is aptly and unambiguously worded (or as aptly and unambiguously worded as the subject and language will permit), it is more accessible and knowable than a rule of judiciary law, which must be obtained through the process to which I have adverted above. And it must be recollected, that whether it be performed by judges applying the rule to subsequent cases, or by private persons in the course of extra-judicial business, this delicate and difficult process is commonly performed in haste, inasmuch that judges in the exercise of their judicial functions, and private persons in their extra-judicial transactions, must often mistake the import of the rule which they are trying to ascertain and apply" (p. 360).

Second objection; judiciary law is generally not only applied, but also made, in haste.

Thirdly; a judiciary law is an ex post facto law, and, in relation to the case to which it is first applied, has commonly, though not universally, the effect of a law of the kind. Not universally, because the decisions of the Court are often anticipated by private practitioners.

Fourthly; though there is more of stability and coherency in judiciary law than might at the first be imagined, it is really vague and inconsistent, because of the enormous bulk of the documents in which it must be sought, and the difficulty of extracting the law from the decisions when they are found. The consequent evils are, that it is nearly unknown to the community, and is known imperfectly to the mass of lawyers, and even to the most experienced. Of the most simple and frequently-applied rules, the laity have some notion; but, so far as knowledge of the law is important, the more complex cases might as well be decided arbitrarily as according to judiciary law. Now, though the law can never be so condensed and simplified, that any considerable portion of the community may know much of it, it may, in the lecturer's opinion, be so condensed and simplified, that lawyers may know it; and it may be so arranged, that each of the different classes of persons may know something of the part with which they are chiefly concerned.

* Nor is it necessary that the general grounds should be expressed by the judge; in which case the only index is the specialities of the decision as construed (or receiving light) from the nature or class of the case—an inference ex rei natura. (See Thibaut & Mühlenthal).

But this evil is not peculiar to judiciary law. Statute law badly expressed, and made bit by bit, may be just as bulky, and just as inaccessible, as law of the opposite kind. But the evil is inherent in judiciary law, and may be avoided in the other kind.

Fifthly; there does not appear to be any test by which the validity of a rule made judicially can be ascertained. Is it the number of concurrent decisions, or the consistency and harmony of the new rule with the bulk of the legal system, or the reputation of the judge? This cause of uncertainty is not necessarily inherent in statute law. [Surely the teaching of experience with respect to the comparative uncertainty of statute and judiciary laws might have been anticipated by theory. Formal legislation always has been, and probably always will be, performed in haste, and more or less by untrained legislators, and upon other than merely scientific considerations. Judicial precedents, on the contrary, are the fruit of careful preparation and free and deliberate discussion by skilful lawyers, before judges at least equally skilful and experienced, and wholly unprejudiced. From such machinery we ought to obtain the most perfect results that human institutions can produce.]

Sixthly; "In consequence of the implication of the ratio decidendi with the peculiarities of the decided case, the rule established by the decision (or the ratio or the general principle of the decision) is never or rarely comprehensive." The meaning here is, not that the decision is necessarily wrong, as being founded on too narrow a view, but that it does not furnish a binding precedent for cases analogous, but containing different circumstances, which, being significant, may involve a different result. In other words, the decision settles the rule for the species, but not for the genus. One answer to this objection is suggested by the lecturer's observation, that the inconvenience is probably of the essence of judiciary law. "So delicate and difficult is the task of legislation, that any comprehensive rule made in haste and under pressure of business, would probably be ill adapted to meet the contemplated purpose." The legislation of the courts is essentially tentative, and therefore it generally harmonises with the existing system. Scarcely any human wisdom (certainly not the wisdom of an English legislative assembly, or of the professional adventurers who make a trade of law reform) can be trusted to devise and foresee the effects of general rules, or to express them in terms consistent with the system of law upon which they are to be grafted. But the suggested inconvenience of the limited application of new precedents is not particularly felt at the present day. The circumstances of a settled society do not change so rapidly as to require the frequent creation of new genera, or even of new species, of laws; and the judiciary law, like the course of nature, adapts itself, perhaps as rapidly as is desirable, to the change of circumstances, by the gradual modification, rather than by the creation, of species.

Seventhly; "Wherever much of the law is judiciary law, the statute law which co-exists with it is imperfect, unsystematic, and bulky. For the judiciary law is, as it were, the nucleus around which the statute law is formed. The judiciary law contains the legal dictionary, or the definitions and expositions (in so far as such exist) of the leading technical terms of the entire legal system. The statute law is not a whole of itself, but is formed or fashioned on the judiciary law, and tacitly refers throughout to those leading terms and principles which are expounded by the judiciary; and hence, as I shall shew immediately, arises the greatest difficulty in the way of codification. For in order to the exclusion of the judiciary law, and to the making of the code a complete body of law, the terms and principles of the judiciary law must not be assumed tacitly, but must be defined and expounded by the code itself—a process which people may think an easy one, until they come to try it. Whenever, therefore, most of the law consists of judiciary law, the statute law is not of itself complete, but is merely a partial and irregular supplement to that judiciary law which is the mass and bulk of the system. The statute law is not of itself an edifice, but is merely a set of irregular or unsystematic patches, stuck from time to time upon the edifice reared by the judges" (p. 369). Whence the lecture concludes, that wherever much of the law consists of judiciary law, the entire legal system is necessarily a monstrous chaos, partly consisting of judiciary law, introduced bit by bit, and embedded in a measureless heap of particular decisions, and partly of legislative law, stuck by patches on the judiciary law, and embedded in a measureless heap of occasional and supplemental statutes. It is strange that the lecturer did not perceive that this condemnation of judiciary law has no practical foundation or value. If a system of laws could be settled once for all, and remain unchanged, the choice between the judiciary and legislative forms would depend upon very different considerations from those which, as society is constituted, must determine the question. Since laws must always be changing, and judicial precedents, if we wish to retain consistency and certainty in the administration of the law, must always be followed, the edifice of the law for the time being, however constituted, must always be undergoing the process of patching; and the patches, considered apart from the edifice, will be incoherent, whether they are in the judiciary or in the legislative form. But the judiciary law is as capable of arrangement without losing its form as is law in the shape of statutes, and patching may be done upon a digest with as much regularity and precision as upon a code.

We must defer until our next number the statement of Mr. Austin's conclusions with regard to codification, and our remarks upon the whole.

A Popular and Practical Introduction to Law Studies, and to every Department of the Legal Profession. By SAMUEL WARREN, Esq., of the Inner Temple, D. C. L., Ozon. F. R. S., one of her Majesty's Counsel, Recorder of Hull, and Master in Lunacy. 2 vols., demy 8vo. [Maxwell.]

THE third edition of this well-known work, "entirely re-written and greatly enlarged," has been recently presented to the public. It has occupied the learned author (as we are informed in the Preface) every moment during the last six years that could be spared from his duties—"professional, parliamentary, and official." Nevertheless, the book remains little altered in tone and character. Careless of the keen criticisms which the former editions provoked, Mr. Warren has put forward this further issue of his book, with all its original demerits, and the additional one, that it now contains nearly twice as many pages as it did before.

"Warren's Law Studies" has always seemed to us to bear somewhat the same relation to the other well-known introductory treatises on law that the historical romance bears to real history. Throughout the book what is strictly useful and authentic is strangely combined with the fanciful and amusing. The reader's attention is perpetually distracted from the labour of learning, by the pleasant but discursive loquacity of the author. There is scarcely a page in which sound advice and valuable information are not blended with disquisitions on subjects of remote relation to the matter in hand, and thoughtless gossip about the author and his friends.

We make these observations reluctantly, for the book is written in a kindly spirit, and contains much matter that could only be gathered together by an able and accomplished man. It possesses great literary merit—is the only book of its kind—and, despite its faults—nay, perhaps, because of its faults, we believe it will preserve its popularity. But we are only concerned with it as a law book intended for law students, and we feel bound to express the opinion that it never has been, and never will be, of much practical use to those for whom it professes to have been written. We have no doubt Mr. Warren would be much disappointed if he thought his labours on behalf of his juvenile brethren were thrown away; but whether consciously or not, we cannot help thinking that the book is addressed to a much larger and less discriminating portion of society. For instance, no student of average observation and intelligence could be expected to read, with any other feeling than amusement, Mr. Warren's enumeration of the mental gifts indispensably necessary for success at the Bar, while general readers, and the admirers of the author, cannot fail to be impressed with the statement, that no man can reasonably hope for distinction in the Profession who does not possess, among other qualifications, "a capacity of sustained attention," "clearness of perception," "a logical turn of mind," "soundness of judgment," "strength of memory," "calmness," "patience," "steadiness," "self-denial," and for superior success in court practice there must be added, "rapidity and flexibility, or" (as the author explains) "versatility of mental action," "an argumentative turn of mind," "force and readiness of expression and illustration," "eloquence," "tact," "general knowledge," "self-command," "sensibility," "veracity," "courage," and "presence," which last a foot-note explains to mean, "port, air, demeanour."

We could give other instances of the author's disposition to talk at the unlearned reader, but, as we have said before, we are only interested in his labours as they affect the Profession. Of the thirty-four chapters, into which the book is divided, about half are taken up with elementary treatises on the different departments of English law. These are written in a popular way, and to these a student, whose energies were dulled by a long vacation, and who was unequal to any but the gentlest mental exercise, might turn his attention with some advantage. The opening chapter on law as it is, and law as it was, are a clever, though not very laborious, sketch of the improvements in procedure since 1830. The rest of the book is devoted, for the most part, to enthusiastic disquisitions on the grandeur of the law, homilies on the high honour which should distinguish those who practice it, and copious counsel, of a description not overprofound, on the formation of what is called "a legal character."

The necessity of acquiring universal information, with a view to obtaining even a moderate success, is impressed with amusing eagerness on the student's mind. A course of preparatory studies is recommended which would occupy, at least, fifty years, and a number of other suggestions of an equally impractical character are offered with an invincible indifference to the shortness of life, and the infirmity of the human mind. Mr. Warren seems to us to have failed in his part of mentor to the student mind, from an inclination to undervalue the capacity and acquisitions of those to whom his suggestions are offered. His leading-strings are far too frail for the vigorous well-disciplined intellects that are every year enlisted in the study of the law.

The truth is, as every man knows who has laboured to obtain a mastery of his profession, the student of English law must teach himself; he must fill from the first the twofold capacity of tutor and pupil, and he may despair of his success in either capacity if he need five hundred pages of advice as to how he should proceed.

The subject of study once indicated to him, the corpus juris civilis once laid open before him, almost any law book placed in his hands will bring him to the very sources of English jurisprudence, viz. reported cases. "Melius est petere fontes quam sectari rivulos," says Lord Coke. It is the one virtue of the English law, that to the attentive reader there is no mystery or difficulty about the administration of justice. If our student cannot learn from the lips of the judges, he may rest assured that the admonitions of Mr. Warren will avail him little.

Although Mr. Warren supported the movement for establishing lectures in the Inns of Court, we gather that he is not altogether satisfied that the system has been attended with success. "The author," he says (p. 1229), "as one of those responsible for the adoption and continuance of that system, feels indisposed to express any dissatisfaction with it, and it would not become him in any way to disparage it. He, on the contrary, cordially wishes it success, and that the readers and students would rival each other in efforts to secure that success."

We fear the learned author must have entertained exorbitant views of what lectures in law can achieve. To the diligent students, about whom alone we need concern ourselves, the lectures afford (we have strong reason for thinking) a most valuable "introduction to law studies," and we believe that one of the three years, which Mr. Warren recommends should be spent in the chambers of the practitioner, would be much better employed in attending the law classes. We think Mr. Warren is too much disposed to stand on the ancient ways as regards the methods of studying the common law. Exclusive and indiscriminate attendance at the chambers of a pleader or a barrister in large practice has been the source of a great part of the narrowness and cowardice which have characterised the legal mind in this country during the last century. We consider the system little suited to our reformed procedure, and the more enlightened modes of administering the law which now prevail. We do not think that Mr. Warren is sufficiently alive to the changes which have taken place within the last few years in the position of the young advocate. In former times, no doubt, the labours of pleader's chambers afforded a fair preparation for the lamentable pursuits of the earlier years of a barrister's life. He was but too often no better than the interpreter between the Court and the pleader, and without an intimacy with the trickery of pleading and practice he could make little way. But now the avenue to success is through the Nisi Prius courts; the barrister must commence where he formerly continued his career. He may be the first man of his year, and the favourite pupil of "a great pleader," but if he cannot examine a witness and address a jury with reasonable skill and perspicacity, he will fail. There are arts, therefore, which must now be acquired, and acquired early, which never were imparted—we may almost say—never known in the regions of gloom and drudgery, where pleaders, and their brethren of a larger growth, the pleading barristers, are to be found.

How these arts are to be acquired, each diligent student will discover for himself. Suffice it for us to point out the necessity for possessing them. We are not to be tempted into giving advice. We are discouraged by the failure of so able and pains-taking a man as Mr. Warren.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the LAWS relating to the CHURCH and the CLERGY. By H. W. CRIPPS, M.A., of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law, Recorder of Lichfield. The Third Edition, revised and enlarged, containing the Statutes and Cases to the present time.

* Since the publication of the first edition, the progress of legislation on the subjects treated of has rendered necessary considerable alterations and additions in this and in the preceding edition, and while much new matter has been introduced, all that has become obsolete has been omitted. In many other matters the law has been materially altered, and doubtful points have been settled by recently-decided cases, all which are now to be found in the present edition.

"It is remarkable for a rare combination of conciseness and clearness in the composition, which have recommended it to magistrates who have not been educated as lawyers, and to whom, therefore, the books written for the use of lawyers are often obscure by reason of their technicalities. The present editors have preserved this characteristic of Mr. Stone's volume in their own abundant additions to it."—Law Times.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to new Insurers EIGHTY PER CENT. of the PROFITS, at Quinquennial Divisions, or a low Rate of Premium without participation of Profits.

Since the establishment of the Company in 1821, the amount of Profits allotted to the Assured has exceeded in Cash value 660,000l., which represents equivalent Reversionary Bonuses of 1,058,000l.

After the Division of Profits at Christmas, 1859, the Life Assurances in force, with existing Bonuses thereon, amounted to upwards of 4,730,000l., the Income from the Life Branch 207,000l. per annum, and the Life Assurance Fund, independent of the Capital, exceeded 1,618,000l.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property at home and abroad at moderate rates.

No expense is incurred in effecting a new Insurance beyond the payment of the Annual Premium and Duty, when the Premium amounts to 5s.

Claims liberally and promptly settled.

Notice is hereby given, that FIRE POLICIES which expire at Michaelmas must be renewed within fifteen days at this office; or with Mr. SAMS, No. 1, St. James's-street, corner of Pall-mall; or with the Company's Agents throughout the Kingdom, otherwise they become void.

Applications for Prospectuses and Agencies to be made to the Secretary.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 26, 1863.

WE resume our notice of Mr. Austin's remarks on case law and codification. Having stated the case against judiciary law, Mr. Austin says, "Since such are the monstrous evils of judicial legislation, it would seem, that the expediency of a code (or of a complete or exclusive body of statute law) will hardly admit of a doubt. Nor would it, provided that the chaos of judiciary law, and of the statute law stuck patchwise on the judiciary, could be superseded by a good code. For when we contrast the chaos with a positive code, we must not contrast it with the best of possible or conceivable codes, but with the code which, under the given circumstances of the given community, would probably be the result of an attempt to codify [e. g. a Cranworth code or a Westbury code.] Whoever has considered the difficulty of making a good statute, will not think lightly of the difficulty of making a code." He proceeds to enlarge on the difficulty of making a statute, and remarks, that unless a statute be well made, it commonly is more uncertain than a rule of judiciary law—for the reason, that the judge is bound by the very words of the statute, but not by the language of a judicial decision. He may collect the ratio decidendi from any indicia which the case or circumstance may afford. "It is hardly necessary to add, that I limit the remark to a badly-constructed statute; for no judicious or candid man will doubt or dispute for a moment, that a well-made statute is incomparably superior [in certainty] to a rule of judiciary law." We are surprised that so accurate a thinker should come to such a conclusion. Surely, no one who has been amused by the battles of the definitions in all sciences (not wholly excepting even geometry) can deny, that the accurate enunciation of an abstract proposition, on any subject out of the mathematics, almost transcends the power of man. Mr. Austin must have known what trouble the attempt to define "murder" gave the Criminal-law Commissioners, and we know how signally it failed. But what language fails to express in the abstract, the mind can easily and accurately recognise in the concrete; and accordingly, as every lawyer knows, the meaning conveyed by a good judicial precedent is conveyed, not with relative but, with absolute certainty and precision.

Mr. Austin therefore concludes, that the question of codification is a question of time and place; but that, speaking without reference to the circumstances of a given community, there can be no doubt that a complete code is better than a body of judiciary law, or of judiciary law supplemented by legislative patches. Taking the question in the concrete, however, a doubt may arise, whether men can be found competent to the difficult task of successful codification.

He then proceeds to answer the objections to codification in the abstract. The current objection is, the necessary incompleteness of a code. It cannot anticipate the infinite variety of cases that may arise in practice. The objection was thus put by Lord Mansfield (when Solicitor-General) in Omychund v. Barker (1 Atk. 33)—“Cases of law depend upon occasions which give rise to them. . . . All occasions do not arise at once. A statute very seldom can take in all cases; therefore, the common law, that works itself pure by rules drawn from the fountain of justice, is superior to an act of Parliament.” Answer—“The objection is equally applicable to all law, and it implies, in the partisans of judiciary law who are pleased to insist upon it, a profound ignorance (or a complete forgetfulness) of the nature of the law which is established by judicial decision. Judiciary law consists of rules,” or it is nothing; and rules of law, whether in the one form or in the other, are equally liable to incompleteness. If law, as reduced into a code, would be incomplete, so is it incomplete as not so reduced; for codification is the re-expression of existing law. If the provisions of a given statute will not apply to any given case, the ratio decidendi of a given judicial decision will not apply to the solution of future cases.

The charge of ignorance or forgetfulness may fairly be retorted upon the lecturer. He did not know, or had forgotten, the essential difference between the mode of interpreting and applying a judicial precedent and that of interpreting and applying a statute. The ratio decidendi of a case may be narrow in its scope, but within that scope it is complete and exhaustive. A statute, or a clause in a code, cannot be applied to any case which does not come within its terms. For example: a few decisions are sufficient to establish the general principle, that (in a court of equity) relief will be given against forfeiture for non-payment of money, the reason (or the ratio legis) being, that compensation for such a default can generally be allowed with sufficient justice. But if that general rule were embodied in a code, it must be applied to all cases without exception—save so far as exceptions are expressed in the code. It must apply, therefore, to a forfeiture of the benefit of a contract to purchase a reversion, on the ground of delay in paying the purchase money. The judiciary rule does not apply to such a case, because the case involves something more than the ordinary inconvenience arising from the non-payment of purchase money. The general rule, as established by decisions, does not, indeed, directly contemplate or formalise the exception (which may not have been thought of), and therefore in codification the exception (if the case involving it had not yet arisen, and been decided) would probably be overlooked; but the judiciary rule does, by the very condition and mode of its growth and application, allow of and let in the exception when the case arises; and thus, while the judiciary law does not more often than the statute law fall into uncertainty, it much more frequently than the statute law avoids incompleteness on the one hand, and injustice on the other; and to the same degree it avoids the uncertainty which arises from the conflict of the letter of the law with the reason or grounds of it. The lecturer's mistake arose from the omission (which constitutes the cardinal defect of his treatment of the subject) to observe, that though the law established by a decision may be said to exist in it from the moment that it is pronounced, and so, on a hasty view, may appear to be immediately capable of complete expression in a statutory form, the case and the decision together in no way express, or even of themselves suggest, the extent and the limits of the rule. Yet, when the crucial case arises to which the principle of the decision, if expressed in abstract terms, would extend, but which is not within the reason of it, there is generally no difficulty in determining that the authority does not apply. Thus the judiciary law, though it may sometimes be defective in cognoscibility, seldom fails in justice. The ratio legis, which can seldom be taken into account in interpreting or applying a statute or code, is commonly and properly regarded in ascertaining and limiting the ratio decidendi; and thus each new case, as it arises, and before it is decided, sheds as much light upon the leading case as it receives from it, so that the best “put case” is the best commentator upon a judicial precedent. But the framer of a code is not supposed to be a put case. His business is to state the law as he finds it—not to anticipate the decision of untried cases. Yet how can he state in the abstract that of which he finds, perhaps, but a single sample in the concrete? How can he define the extent and limits of a rule when they have not yet been discovered by investigation in the courts? He cannot do it otherwise than most imperfectly, because no foresight and consideration can anticipate the infinite combinations of future events. He cannot do it at all, nor take the first step in framing his code, without judging—that is to say, legislating; and this, by the hypothesis (that his task is only to state existing law), he must not do. Nor can a case be properly judged until it has actually arisen, and been argued in earnest by competent counsel. The history of every head of judiciary law is, that first a case arises in which a general principle is established and applied; then cases arise which determine the limitations and exceptions. A principle caught by a codifier in the first stage of its development would be enacted in all the generality of a neat rule, without qualification or exception, and capable of none, save by very rough nursing in the courts. The difficulty was felt in compiling the Roman law; and hence the Pandects.

Hugo's objection, that the provisions of a code would be interminable if it pretended to provide for every possible question, and that a code, in proportion to the minuteness of its provisions, would suggest conflicting analogies for the decision of the omitted cases, appears to us to be profound and just. The lecturer proceeds to make a remark which he considers conclusive:—“Rules of judiciary law are not decided cases, but the general grounds or principles (or the rationes decidendi) whereon the cases are decided. Now, by the practical admission of those who apply those grounds or principles, they may be codified or turned into statute law. For what is the process of induction by which the principle is gathered before it is applied, but this very process of codifying such principles, performed on a particular occasion, and performed on a small scale? If it be possible to extract from a mass, or from a few cases, the ratio decidendi or general principle of decision, it is possible to extract from all decided cases their respective grounds of decision, and to turn them into a body of law, abstract in its form, and, therefore, compact and accessible. Assuming that judiciary law is really law, it clearly may be codified." We deny the inference, and deny the ablest extractor of principles to codify any single branch or subject of judiciary law in such a manner as to anticipate and provide for future cases with a title of the completeness and certainty with which they are anticipated and provided for by the uncodified precedents; and this for the reasons already given—that the precedents are not bound in the fetters of set terms, and that their full import and application are inexhaustible and unknown even to those who make them, and can only be brought out step by step as new cases arise.

The lecture concludes with these words:—"Reverting to the objection, I admit that no code can be complete or perfect. But it may be less incomplete than judge-made law, and (if well constructed) free from the great defects which I have pointed out in the latter. It may be brief, compact, systematic, and therefore knowable as far as it goes."

We have fairly stated Mr. Austin's reasons for preferring a code to a system of judiciary law corrected by statutes. They are—that judiciary law,—1, exists nowhere in terms, but must be got at by induction—a process often hastily performed in the courts, and always difficult for laymen; 2, is often made as well as applied in haste; 3, is ex post facto; 4, is vague and inconsistent on account of the vast bulk of the documents from which the materials for a particular decision are to be selected; 5, is uncertain, because there is no touchstone for good or bad law; 6, is too much limited by particulars; 7, makes the statute law as unsystematic and unwieldy as itself.

We have already endeavoured to refute some of these objections. The answer to the first is, that the process of induction from particulars leads to more certain results than that of applying a rule authoritatively expressed in abstract terms, and is more instructive to the lawyer, who, being compelled in learning his law to discriminate, and to observe how the Courts have discriminated, between the forms and accidents and the substance of a case, is better trained for performing the same task when he applies the law. To complain that the laws of a civilised community are not cast in such a form as to be easily studied by the laity, is idle, because the laity never would or could study them in any form. No code could state the law in a clearer or more attractive form than that into which certain branches of it have been cast in well-known treatises—treatises which are, for all practical purposes, as trustworthy as acts of Parliament; yet no one out of the profession reads any one of them.

2. That the judges both apply and make law in haste is not relatively true, as we have already insisted; and neither in the applying nor in the making of law would a code afford any remedy.

3. That the making, as distinguished from the applying, of judiciary law, is in the nature of ex post facto legislation, is true, but this remark also has no bearing on the question of a code; a code would be the expression of the law existing at the time of its compilation; and we do not understand that any one, whose opinion is worth notice, proposes that the decisions of judges made after the promulgation of a code should not be binding as precedents. But the capacity of judiciary law for ex post facto operation is, in truth, one of its greatest merits. A system of judiciary law, founded on just principles, and fairly administered, establishes a prestige in favour of honesty, and leaves the wrongdoer nothing to hope from the incompleteness of its provisions. In the majority of cases no doubt exists as to the side to which justice leans; and it is better that right should be done by establishing and applying a new rule to a new case, than that wrong should prosper through the defect of a code. But as the masses of the community can never know more of the law than some of its broadest principles and a few well-settled and familiar details, and cannot know either with scientific accuracy, there is practically no difference to them between a decision which introduces and one which merely applies a rule of law.

4. That the documents of a judiciary law must be numerous, and have a tendency to become unwieldy, every English lawyer knows too well; and if no other remedy could be found, the revolutionary one of a code would at distant intervals be inevitable. But it is no valid objection to a system of law that it cannot be mastered without considerable research and industry; and there is no reason to doubt, with regard to the English law at least, that by revising the reports, clearing them of irrelevant matter, expunging cases which have been overruled, have become obsolete, or are mere repetitions of established decisions, by arranging what remains in the form of a digest, by regulating the publication of new reports, and by providing for the periodical revision of the digest, the whole of the English judiciary law might be brought and kept within the reach of lawyers of average capacity and industry.

5. Against the possibility that any precedent may be overruled is to be set the certainty that all erroneous decisions which have not been overruled would reappear in a code as unquestionable law, producing, by their inconsistency with the general system, greater doubts and difficulties than those created by the remediable slips of the judicature.

6. We have already disposed of the remarkable assertion, that a judiciary law is more limited by particulars than a statute law.

7. The object of occasional legislation being to amend or supplement existing laws, the quantity of such legislation must depend on the substance, and not on the form, of the existing laws; and its form must necessarily be fragmentary. But the fragments may be fitted as readily to a systematic digest of decisions as to a code of statutes; and if the objection means, that statutory law and judiciary law cannot be joined into an harmonious system, the answer is, that it can't be helped. Judiciary law is a necessity in a free state, inasmuch as codes and statutes must be interpreted and applied by judges, and the purity and consistency of their administration of the law can only be secured by making their decisions binding as precedents, and so subjecting them to the criticism of contemporary and succeeding lawyers. In short, it is not too much to say, that the law can only be a science in so far as it exists in the judiciary form, and that its scientific character would be destroyed by codification, and could only be restored by a long series of judicial commentaries on the code.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS

Before entering into Articles of Clerkship to Attornies and Solicitors.

PURSUANT to the Judges' Orders, the preliminary examinations in general knowledge will take place on the following days, viz. the 27th and 28th October, 1863, and the 9th and 10th February, 1864, and will comprise—

1. Reading aloud a passage from some English author.
2. Writing from dictation.
3. English grammar.
4. Writing a short English composition.
5. Arithmetic.—A competent knowledge of the first four rules, simple and compound.
6. Geography of Europe and of the British Isles.
7. History.—Questions on English History.
8. Latin.—Elementary knowledge of Latin.
9. 1. Latin. 2. Greek, Modern or Ancient. 3. French. 4. German. 5. Spanish. 6. Italian.

The special examiners have selected the following books in which candidates will be examined in the subjects numbered 9, at the examinations in October, 1863, and February, 1864:—

OCTOBER 27 AND 28, 1863.

In Latin.—Cicero, De Officiis, books i and ii; and Horace, Odes, book iii.

In Greek.—Homer, Iliad, book i.

In Modern Greek.—Βεγκάριον, περί 'Αδικημάτων και Ποινών μεταφρασμένον ἀπὸ τὴν 'Ιταλικὴν Γλῶσσαν, 17–30; or, Βεντορῆς 'Ιστορία τῆς 'Αμερικῆς, βιβλίον η'.

In French.—Guillaume Guizot, Alfred le Grand, ou l'Angleterre sous les Anglo-Saxons; or, Jean Racine, Phèdre.

In German.—Schiller, Jungfrau von Orleans; or, Geschichte des 30-jährigen Krieges, 1 volume.

In Spanish.—Cervantes' Don Quixote, capit. xxxiv; or, Fernandez de Moratin, El Si de las Nenas.

In Italian.—Manzoni's Promessi Sposi, cap. xii–xxii; or, Torquato Tasso's La Gerusalemme, 6, 7, 8, and 9 cantos.

FEBRUARY 9 AND 10, 1864.

In Latin.—Sallust, Jugurtha; and Virgil, Æneid, book vi.

In Greek.—Xenophon, Memorabilia

In Modern Greek.—Βεγκάριον, περί 'Αδικημάτων και Ποινών μεταφρασμένον ἀπὸ τὴν 'Ιταλικὴν Γλῶσσαν, 1–12; or, Βεντορῆς 'Ιστορία τῆς 'Αμερικῆς, βιβλίον ζ'.

In French.—P. Corneille, Cinna; Fénelon, Télémaque (Les aventures de). Liv. i–vii.

In German.—Schiller's Don Carlos; 1st and 2nd Act. Tieck's William Lovel, books i–iv.

In Spanish.—Cervantes' Don Quixote, capit. i–xx; or, Dom Hartzembusch La Coja y el Encogido.

In Italian.—Manzoni's Promessi Sposi, cap. i–x; or, Torquato Tasso's La Gerusalemme, first four cantos.

With reference to the subjects numbered 9, each candidate will be examined in one language only, according to his selection. Candidates who select Latin will be examined in both the works above specified. In Modern Greek, French, German, Spanish, and Italian, candidates will have the choice of either of the above-mentioned works.

Candidates are required by the Judges' Orders to give one calendar month's notice to the Incorporated Law Society, as Registrar of Attornies, of the language in which they propose to be examined, the place at which they wish to be examined, and their age and place of education. All notices and inquiries should be addressed to the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, W.C.

E. W. WILLIAMSON, Secretary.

London, August, 1863.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION

Under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 9.

THE Elementary Works, in addition to Bookkeeping (Mercantile), selected for the intermediate examination of persons under articles of clerkship executed after the 1st January, 1861, for the year 1864, are—

Williams on the Principles of the Law of Real Property. 6th edition. 1862.

Chitty on Contracts, chapters 1 and 2. Any edition published in or after 1850.

The examiners deal with the subject of Mercantile Bookkeeping generally, and do not in their questions confine themselves to any particular system. Candidates are not examined in the method of Bookkeeping by Double Entry.

Candidates are required by the Judges' Orders to give to the Incorporated Law Society one calendar month's notice before the commencement of the term in which they desire to be examined. The notice should contain the name and residence of the candidate, and of the attorney to whom the applicant is articulated. Candidates are also required to leave their articles of clerkship and assignments (if any), duly stamped and registered, seven clear days before the commencement of such term, together with answers to the questions as to due service and conduct up to that time.

The examinations are held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, London, in Hilary, Easter, Trinity, and Michaelmas Terms.

Law Society's Hall, Chancery-lane,
London, July, 1863.

SOCIAL SCIENCE AT EDINBURGH.

PREPARATIONS have been made for securing at the approaching meeting, commencing on the 7th October, the attendance of a considerable number of representatives of the English and Irish Bars, and many of the subjects to be discussed in the jurisprudent department will be of national interest. Among these questions, we find the Transfer of Land will be treated of in several important papers. Mr. R. R. Torrens, Registrar-General of Australia, contributes a paper on "The Torrens' System of Conveyancing by Registration of Titles, as in operation in Australia." Mr. Thomas Hare will lay before the department the draft of a Bill "To facilitate the Acquirement of House Property by the Working Classes in large Towns." Among other subjects are "the Marriage Laws" and "the necessity for a Minister of Justice," and the Laws of Evidence both in civil and criminal cases. This reunion of the Bars of the three kingdoms will be celebrated, we believe, by a public dinner, at which Lord Brougham will preside. The Judges of the Scotch Courts, and many other distinguished members of the Profession, will be present on the occasion.

Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint T. Mildmay Shervington, Esq., to be Attorney-General for the Island of Grenada.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal, appointing the Right Hon. John David Fitzgerald, one of the Judges of the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland; Mountfort Longfield, Esq., LL.D., one of the Judges of the Landed Estates Court in Ireland; Sir William Atherton, Knt., her Majesty's Attorney-General for England; Sir Robert Joseph Phillimore, Knt., her Majesty's Advocate-General for England; Sir Thomas Staples, Bart., her Majesty's Advocate-General for Ireland; the Right Hon. Thomas O'Hagan, her Majesty's Attorney-General for Ireland; Robert Porrett Collier, Esq., one of her Majesty's Counsel; Robert Bayly Follett, Esq.; Henry Cadogan Rothery, Esq.; and John Haslett, Esq., to be her Majesty's Commissioners to inquire into the constitution, establishment, officers, practice, procedure, and fees of the High Court of Admiralty in Ireland.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, OCTOBER 3, 1863.

THE civil war that has so long raged in the American States has been productive of at least one good—it has contributed largely to the understanding and improvement of international law; several most important questions of which have arisen out of it, and others well nigh forgotten by the learned, and wholly beyond the reach of the general community, have been brought forward into light and prominence. The anomalous character of the belligerent parties, the peculiar position of the American States relative to European powers, the part taken in times past by those States when any of those powers were at war with each other, have all contributed to this result. To these causes must be added the revolution which is being gradually effected in the system of naval warfare throughout the world—a revolution caused chiefly by the introduction of steam power into that species of warfare, the construction of ships of iron instead of wood, of ships working guns in cupolas or towers instead of in broadsides, and of vessels armed with beaks to run down their adversaries; reviving, though in a form infinitely more powerful, the weapon used in sea-fights of classical times, especially in the Syracusan war with the Athenians. There is probably not an educated person in the United Kingdom whose acquaintance with international law is not much greater than it was three years ago; although, for many causes, chiefly the absence of good elementary works on the subject, and the spirit of nationality, or political partisanship, in which discussions respecting it are usually carried on, much in this direction still remains to be done.

Most of the questions to which we have alluded arise in this way. The British Government having declared their resolution of maintaining a state of neutrality in the conflict—a resolution which we believe to be alike just and politic, and in which the leaders of both the great political parties among us are agreed—are continually harassed by solicitations, direct and indirect, from each of the contending parties, to do or permit acts in violation of that neutrality; and the question constantly presents itself, what is a violation of the state of neutrality of an independent country between two other countries who are at war with each other? We say contending countries for want of a better expression; for although Great Britain and other Powers of Europe have recognised the Southern Confederacy as belligerents, this is not a recognition of their independence, nor does it prejudice in any way the question whether that Confederacy are to be looked on in the light they themselves allege, as a people contending for liberty, or, as alleged by their adversaries, as rebels who should be put down by the sword.

Such being the present state of things, our attention, and doubtless that of most others, has been attracted by a speech recently delivered by Earl Russell, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to his tenants at Blairgowrie, in Perthshire, when his Lordship largely discussed several questions of foreign policy, into which we, of course, have no design to follow him. But when speaking of the civil war in America, and the duty of the Government of this country with respect to it, Earl Russell laid down the following general principles of international law, which we cannot help thinking sound in the main:—

“We know that the Foreign Enlistment Act, and the whole law respecting the subject, is one of difficult application. The principle is clear enough. If you are asked to sell muskets, you may sell them to one party or the other. Guns, powder, cannons in the same way. If you are asked to sell a ship, you may sell it in the same manner; but if you train and drill a regiment with arms in their hands, and allow that regiment to go out with arms in their hands, and to take part with one of the two belligerents, you violate the neutrality, and commit an offence against the other belligerent. So with regard to ships. If you allow a ship to be armed, and to go out at once and make an attack on a foreign belligerent, you are thus, according to your own law, taking part in the war; and that is an offence which is punished by the law; but these questions will lead, as you will see, to most difficult problems—as, for instance, a thousand persons here may go out as labourers to the Federal States in one ship, there may be a thousand muskets go out in another ship, and when they arrive, those thousand labourers, having had an understanding before, now make a formal engagement with these States, and are armed with these thousand muskets; but if that had been done in the territory of this country it would have been an offence. There are other matters with regard to ships that have lately been prepared within this country, because these ships are not like ships that receive the usual equipment; they are not like vessels you sent in former times of war, but are in themselves, without any further armament, formed for acts of offence and war; they are steam rams, which might be used for purposes of war without ever touching the shore of a Confederate port. Well, gentlemen, to permit ships of this kind knowingly to depart from this country, not to enter into a Confederate port, not to enter the ports of a belligerent, would, as you see, expose our good faith to great suspicion; and I feel certain, that if during our war with France, the Americans had sent out line-of-battle ships to break our blockade at Brest, whatever reasons they might have urged in support, we would have considered it a violation of neutrality."

With respect to this last proposition there cannot be the slightest doubt. The right of a belligerent party to blockade the coast of his adversary, provided the blockade is a bona fide one, and not a mere blockade on paper, is a position so obvious that no person ever disputed it, except, perhaps, the United States of America when England and France were at war, at which period those States put forward claims on behalf of neutral nations which were inconsistent with international law, and rendered themselves and their commerce a general nuisance. Now, not the least advantage from the existing war will be, that the question of the right of blockade will probably be set at rest for ever, seeing that the American Government has itself instituted and upheld a blockade equalling in severity any ever known before. Their right to do so cannot be questioned, but then it is to be expected that for the future they will cheerfully accord the same right to others.

Independent of considerations based on the Foreign Enlistment Act, and looking solely to the general principles of international law, it is admitted on all hands, that if a neutral power aids one of the belligerents in a war, by committing an act of hostility towards the other, it is an infraction of neutrality, and a legitimate casus belli to the power against whom the hostile act is done. But then comes the question, what is an act of hostility?—a question, the general answer to which is obvious enough, although in particular cases it may be one of great difficulty, depending on the special circumstances of the case; and on what is too frequently overlooked, the psychological question of the intention or animus with which acts are done. An act perfectly innocent, if viewed simpliter, may, under peculiar circumstances, become an act of hostility. E. g. viewed in itself, no act can be more simple or pacific than a miller turning the water into his mill; yet, at the battle of Hanau, in 1813, a miller rendered a most essential service to some troops of the allies, who were pursued by the French cavalry, by simply turning the water into his mill, and thus arresting the latter in their pursuit. To purchase contraband of war in a neutral State is, in the abstract, an act allowable by international law, and, upon the whole, it would be unjust to hold otherwise, although it is extending the rights of the neutral to their utmost limit. But see what this may become in the concrete. Suppose a war between nations A. and B. A., for her own convenience, procures her materials of war from nation C.; and B., for her convenience, procures hers from nation D. If D. were to issue a proclamation for encouraging the manufacture of contraband of war with the avowed object of aiding B. in the contest, would not this give A. a casus belli against D.? We are strongly inclined to think it would. So in the case put by Earl Russell—suppose 1000 persons professing to be labourers went out to one of the belligerents in one ship, and 1000 muskets were sent out in another, each of these acts (and the chain might be much longer) is lawful when viewed in itself; but suppose that they were done with the intention of organising an armament to act against the other belligerent, and were done to the knowledge of the authorities of the country from which the men and arms came, this would be a casus belli. And we take it as a principle, that in determining the character of an act, there is no difference between doing a thing directly and doing it indirectly—the doing it ourselves, and encouraging or knowingly permitting it to be done by others over whom we have a control.

When disputes arise between individuals, and an appeal to the law is made in consequence, if there is any dispute between the parties relative to the facts of the case, the tribunal before which the question is brought has the means of authoritatively deciding them. But, in a dispute between nations, there are no such means—each party must determine the facts for himself as he best may, and if the parties should disagree upon them, and refuse to submit the question to the arbitration of a third, there is no remedy, and the matter in dispute must be determined by the sword. And difficult as the decision of facts frequently is, that difficulty is increased one hundred fold when the fact in dispute is merely of a psychological nature. Our readers will remember the case of The Cagliari steamer, which some years ago nearly occasioned a war between the Neapolitan and Sardinian nations. These countries were at peace, and The Cagliari, a Sardinian steamer, piloted between them. On one occasion she deviated from her course and landed a body of armed men on the Neapolitan shore, who immediately proceeded to acts of violence against the Neapolitan Government. The Sardinian Government, on being remonstrated with, said they were innocent in the matter—that a number of brigands had secreted themselves in The Cagliari before she left port, and, while she was at sea, overpowered the master and crew, took possession of the vessel, landed on the Neapolitan territory, where they committed the outrages complained of, and then allowed her to proceed peaceably on her voyage. The Neapolitan Government replied, by denying the fact that this illegal freight of The Cagliari was on board her without the knowledge of the Sardinian Government. This reduced the question, not to a dispute of fact, but to one of animus or intention.

THE REPORTING NUISANCE.

MR. W. T. S. DANIEL, Q. C., who some time ago circulated among the Bar suggestions for the reform of the reports, has taken advantage of the discussion which ensued, and has now matured his plan, and enlarged his remarks, and has presented both in the form of a letter to Sir Roundell Palmer, "on the present system of law reporting, its evils, and a remedy suggested." Mr. Daniel states very clearly and forcibly the nature and the causes of the evils of the existing system, and contrasts the results with those which ought to be aimed at—namely, authenticity, singleness, unity, accuracy, speedy publication, and reasonable cost. He then reviews the various suggestions that have been made for improvement, and concludes with his own.

After observing that law reporting, being in our system of jurisprudence an essential part of the promulgation of the law, is a function of the State, he thus disposes of the objections of those who insist, that reporting, like other occupations, should be open to competition:—"A very slight consideration will also serve to shew, that the term 'monopoly,' as well as the thing it represents, is as misapplied to any proper system of law reporting as free trade. Viewed in its true light, law reporting is a function of the State, and the public are concerned in its proper discharge; and if, for this purpose, it be expedient that persons be appointed exclusively for the office, and their employment be odiously termed a monopoly—as well might the term be applied in an odious sense to the appointment of the registrars, nay, to the judicial office itself! The objection is a mere ad captandum argument, urged by interest as an appeal to prejudice." (p. 51).

Mr. Daniel's observations, introductory to the statement of his proposed remedy, led us to expect that he was about to recommend an establishment by the State, or at least by the judges, who are in authority as part of the State:—"The remedy, to be effectual, must go to the root of the evil. Now, the evils of the present system appear to me to have sprung from the neglect of the State to provide properly for the discharge of a public duty; and thus it has happened, that private enterprise having stepped in to supply those public requirements which the State had neglected, the result has been, what all experience would lead us to expect, that private interests have become so predominant, that the public requirements are no longer duly cared for. The remedy should, therefore, be applied directly to the object of making the public interest paramount, and the private interest subordinate and subservient." (p. 52).

The proposal, however, is, that the preparation and publication of reports should be undertaken "by the bar as an institution of the State;" and this is supported by reasoning which is at least ingenious and plausible. It is the unrestrained exercise of the privilege which a barrister enjoys, of authentically reporting decisions which has been the cause of the evil; and the question is, how that privilege is to be restrained:—"This renders it necessary to inquire into the nature of the privilege. Is it the privilege of the individual, which he has a right to exercise according to his own will and pleasure; or is it a privilege which he enjoys as a member of the institution to which he belongs? If the former, then he can only be restrained in its exercise by the interference of the Legislature. If the latter, then the restraint may be effected by a regulation of the institution to membership with which the privilege is attached. A little consideration will, I think, shew that the latter is the true nature of the privilege. Akin to the privilege of pre-audience and liberty of speech in courts of justice, a barrister, as amicus curiæ, has the privilege of informing the Court from his own knowledge and experience of any case in point; this he may do in person when present. What is reporting but doing the same thing in substance when absent." (p. 53). It follows, that the majority who are injured by the inconsiderate use of this privilege are justified in restraining it if they can.

"The steps to be taken for this purpose I suggest should be as follows:—

"First, that a meeting of the Bar be called by the Attorney-General, as the head of the profession, for the purpose of passing resolutions condemnatory of the present system,—insisting upon the expediency for a change, and approving the principle of the change proposed. As a precedent for a meeting to be held under such auspices for an object of general interest and importance to the profession, it may be sufficient to refer to a meeting which was held some few years back in Lincoln's-inn-hall, at the instance of the Parliamentary Bar, to settle a disputed point of general professional interest. The only question in this case would be, whether the present system of reporting could be considered a subject of sufficient importance to the interests of the Bar to justify the resort to a proceeding of such gravity. I shall greatly have mistaken the views and feelings of my professional brethren, and the interest they take in the matter, if I felt any doubt upon this point.

"To make such a meeting effective for the purpose for which I suggest it, it would, of course, be essential that it should have the sympathy and support of the leaders of the bar. This would be requisite to give the proper weight to numbers. If resolutions to the effect above suggested were passed at a meeting, so attended and supported as to deserve the respect of the profession, I should then suggest that the benchers of the four Inns of Court be memorialised by the meeting, represented by the president, to concur in the necessary measures for the appointment of a joint committee of the four inns (after the manner of the joint council of education), to be called 'The Council of Reporting,' and to consist of fifteen members, of whom the Attorney-General, the Solicitor-General, and the Queen's Advocate for the time being should be members, ex officio. The other twelve members to be elected and appointed, three by the benchers of each inn,—for the period of three years, and to be fairly selected from practising members of each department of the bar, without reference to standing, so as to form a body, who, from their position in the profession, would themselves be interested, and would also fairly represent the interests of the rest of the profession, in establishing and maintaining the constant efficiency of the reports. Vacancies in the body during the triennial period to be filled up by the remaining members, regard being had to the branch of practice in which the vacancy occurred; any of the three ex officio members vacating his office during the three years (otherwise than by elevation to the bench), to continue a member for the remainder of the triennial period. I propose that this body should act gratuitously, and that five should be a quorum. That they should have the appointment and removal of all the editors and reporters, and the management and direction of all the affairs, financial and otherwise, relating to the printing and sale of the reports, with power, for the latter purpose, to delegate any part of their authority to a committee of their own body, and to appoint one or more paid agent or agents. The editors and reporters to be subject, as to the Courts of Equity, to the approval of the Lord Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, the Lords Justices, and the Vice-Chancellors, or any three of them (the Lord Chancellor and the presiding judge of the respective courts being of the quorum); as to the Courts of Common Law, to the approval of the Lord Chancellor, the two Chief Justices, the Chief Baron, the Judge Ordinary of the Divorce and Probate Courts, and the Judge of the Admiralty Court, or any three of them (the Lord Chancellor and the chief or presiding judge of the respective courts being of the quorum); and as to the Appellate Courts, to the approval of the Lord Chancellor, and two members of the Judicial Committee as to the Privy Council, and two Law Lords as to the House of Lords. That the reporters so to be appointed and approved be recognised as officers of the respective courts, have a place assigned to them at the bar, and have access to and possession, for the purpose of reporting, of all copies of pleadings, evidence, papers, and documents connected with cases to be reported, which it is in the power of the Court to authorise or afford.

"The staff of editors and reporters, and their particular duties, would of course be determined upon and prescribed by the council; but it should be sufficient for the purposes of insuring the attendance in each court of one reporter every day the Court sits—the attendance to be as regular and continuous as that of a registrar—and for the preparation and publication in weekly numbers of reports and notes of cases, for the use of the profession and the public, and for citation in court until the more complete reports shall have been published. I propose, that full and complete reports of cases shall be prepared and submitted to the judge, and published once in every three months, or oftener if convenient, after the manner of the existing regular reports, so as to form separate volumes, as at present. These reports should be published under the joint responsibility of the respective editors and reporters, and the series should be called 'The Bar Reports,' and, from the time of their publication, should be the only reports citable as authority. This last object will be effectuated without the necessity of resorting to the exercise of any power inherent in the judges, if the Bar resolve, that the privilege of appending the barrister's name to a report, for the purpose of citation as authority, be exercised in subordination to the authority of the council. It is only by permission of the judges, granted in the exercise of a judicial discretion as to what is for the public good, that the present system of citation has grown up; and the same discretion, having regard to the same object, may, I conceive, withdraw or limit the permission:—

so that the Judges and the Bar together would have full power to accomplish the object of making the Bar Reports the only authority to be cited.

"The complete reports should contain a copy or sufficient abstract of the decree or order, and be accompanied with proper headings, indexes, and digests, and, where necessary, with notes and commentaries elucidating the point decided. The object should be to render these reports a work which will not only be a safe guide in the future administration of justice, but also, by preventing the accumulation of useless and mischievous matter for the future, help to promote the study of law as a science. In my view, it would be desirable that the editors and reporters should be expected to devote their whole time and attention to the discharge of their duties; or, at all events, that the distraction of private business should not be permitted, to any extent, to interfere with the regular and efficient discharge of their duties; and that the salaries should be of an amount sufficient to secure the continued services of men duly qualified by learning and experience. And I should hope that the arrangements would be of such a nature, as regards salary and prospect of professional advancement, as to insure the services of all such of the existing regular reporters as might be able and willing to undertake the discharge of the more responsible duties which would be involved in the new system, and also of as many of the other gentlemen having experience in reporting who might be willing to offer their services, in preference (where qualifications were equal) to barristers who had not been so employed. The number of reporters required would, I conceive, very greatly exceed the present number of the regular reporters; and, in addition, the services of at least three responsible working editors would be required:—and as their qualifications and position would be higher, and their responsibility greater, their salaries should be higher also." (p. 56).

Mr. Daniel then proceeds to suggest, that the reports might be sold for an annual subscription of ten guineas, and yield an ample remuneration for the reporters and editors. The fact (stated by Mr. Sweet in his paper on digesting and regulating the publication of the reports), that at one period the publishers of the King's Bench Reports paid the reporters nearly three guineas for every page, justifies this suggestion.

The whole of Mr. Daniel's pamphlet is well worthy of attention. The plan, if not practicable in its present form, is so suggestive, that we are unwilling to anticipate difficulties. If a large and influential meeting of the Bar resolve to act, the most important step will have been taken, and there will then be time to consider the details.

According to the Government papers, Serjeant Pigott, of the Oxford Circuit, having a patent of precedence, and M.P. for Reading, will succeed to the office of puisne Baron of the Exchequer, vacant by the transfer of Sir James Plaistead Wilde to the office of judge of the Court of Probate.

We take the following from the Globe:—"We have reason to believe that Sir William Atherton has resigned the office of Attorney-General. The cause, we regret to say, is continued ill-health. Sir William Atherton was offered the puisne judgeship vacant by the appointment of Baron Wilde to succeed the late Sir Cresswell Cresswell; but his state of health compelled him to relinquish all official work, and he has, therefore, deemed it his duty to resign the Attorney-Generalship, to the regret of all those officially associated with him. Sir William Atherton is succeeded by Sir Roundell Palmer, the Solicitor-General."

SHIPPING LAW.

In 8vo., price 20s. cloth, lettered,

THE SHIPPING LAW MANUAL: a concise Treatise on the Law governing the Interests of Shipowners, Merchants, Masters, Seamen, and other Persons connected with British Ships. Together with the Acts of Parliament, Forms, and Precedents relating to the subject. Being especially intended for popular use in Seaport Towns. By W. T. GREENHOW, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"The 'Shipping Law Manual,' by Mr. W. T. Greenhow, brings into a popular shape, and to the latest date, the entire body of legal regulations affecting the shipping trade of the country alike in relation to owners, merchants, masters, and seamen, and is especially adapted for ordinary use by all persons connected with the business of seaport towns."—Times, Jan. 31, 1863.

"The object of the author of this book is to popularise the Law of Merchant Shipping, and to compress within the compass of a single volume all that is necessary to be known by those directly interested in British navigation. It was no easy task to condense and arrange this mass of legislation, so as to make it intelligible to the general reader. But Mr. Greenhow has achieved it, and placed within reach of every one connected with shipping a valuable compendium of the law relating to that branch of industry."—Shipping and Mercantile Gazette.

"It is remarkable for a rare combination of conciseness and clearness in the composition, which have recommended it to magistrates who have not been educated as lawyers, and to whom, therefore, the books written for the use of lawyers are often obscure by reason of their technicalities. The present editors have preserved this characteristic of Mr. Stone's volume in their own abundant additions to it."—Law Times.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, OCTOBER 10, 1863.

ALTHOUGH the last session of Parliament was productive of no very great measure, and its proceedings were, with one or two exceptions, remarkable for the quiet manner in which they were conducted, nevertheless a great many statutes on a variety of subjects, shew, in an unmistakable manner, the general desire of all parties in Parliament to do what was in their power to ameliorate the condition, and accede to the just wishes, of the people. This will be seen from a slight sketch of the measures of last session.

Undoubtedly the most important act relative to the amendment of the law is the Statute-law Revision Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 125), prepared by Messrs. Wood and Reilly, under the superintendence of the Lord Chancellor, which relieves the statute-book, by the express repeal of an enormous mass of enactments which have ceased to be in force otherwise than by express and specific repeal, or have by lapse of time and change of circumstances become unnecessary, and which revises the statutes from the reign of Henry III down to, and inclusive of, the reign of James II. This is one of the important steps which, since the abolition of the Statute-law Commission, have been made towards the consolidation of the statute law.

Next, as to the enactments having relation to the administration of justice. It has long been felt that local magistrates in large towns are very inefficient, not only from their want of a competent knowledge of the law, but from the inability which such persons, frequently employed in some trades or professions, have of giving up sufficient time for the performance of their magisterial duties. This will in some measure be remedied by the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 97, which enables cities, towns, and boroughs of twenty-five thousand inhabitants and upwards to appoint stipendiary magistrates; or rather the local board of such city or place, if they think it expedient that a stipendiary magistrate should be appointed, may first make a by-law fixing the amount of his salary, subject to the approval of one of the Principal Secretaries of State, and then the Crown has power to appoint as magistrate a fit person, being a barrister-at-law of not less than five years' standing.

Another act (26 & 27 Vict. c. 122) enables her Majesty in Council to make alterations in the circuits of the judges, by taking away from any circuit any county or counties, or any part or parts of any county or counties, and to annex the same to any other circuit or circuits (sect. 1); power is also given to alter the salaries of the clerks of assize on the alteration of circuits (sect. 2); and there is also power to alter the number of revising barristers to be appointed in their circuits affected by alterations (sect. 4).

An act has also passed to amend the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851, and the Petty Sessions Clerks (Ireland) Act, 1858 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 96). Persons, moreover, refusing, from conscientious motives, to be sworn in criminal proceedings in Scotland, are to be permitted to make a solemn affirmation or declaration (26 & 27 Vict. c. 85).

The criminal law has been altered by two acts of Parliament, in the first by increasing, in the second by diminishing, the punishment for certain offences. The first act, intended to break up the system of garotting, is intitled "An Act for the further Security of the Persons of her Majesty's Subjects from Personal Violence" (26 & 27 Vict. c. 44), gives power to the Court to award the punishment of whipping, in the cases of personal violence there named, in addition to the other punishment awarded under previous acts.

It will in all probability be found, that the success of this measure will render it advisable to extend the same punishment to persons guilty of arson, who do not seem to be sufficiently deterred from committing that offence by the dread of penal servitude.

Until last session, the offence of taking corn or other food by a servant from the possession of his master, contrary to his orders, for the purpose of giving the same, or having the same given, to the horses or other animals of such master, was a felony. The law was doubtless too severe, and has often been animadverted upon by legal writers as a disgrace to English jurisprudence. By the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 103, this offence has been declared not to be felony; but the offender, on conviction before two justices of the peace, is liable to imprisonment, not exceeding three months, or to a fine, not exceeding 5*l.*; and the justices have power to dismiss the case, if they deem it too trifling.

With regard to prisons, an act has been passed to amend the law relating to them in Ireland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 66); and there is an act for remedying certain defects in the law relating to the removal of prisoners in Scotland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 109).

By the Prisons Ministers Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 79), power is given to the persons having the appointment of chaplains in prisons, where the number of prisoners confined in any prison in England or Scotland belong to some church or persuasion differing from the churches of those two countries respectively, to appoint ministers of the same church or persuasion as such prisoners; and they may, if they think fit, award to such ministers a reasonable recompense for their services.

With regard to the poor law, the board is continued until the 23rd July, 1864, and the end of the then next session of Parliament (26 & 27 Vict. c. 55); the provisions of the Union Relief Aid Acts are extended for a further period (26 & 27 Vict. c. 4, c. 91); and the relating to the removal of poor persons, natives of Ireland, is further amended, in particular by the imposition of penalties for the wilful desertion of the pauper while on the journey (26 & 27 Vict. c. 89).

An act has also been passed to amend the Lunacy Acts, in relation to the building of asylums for pauper lunatics (26 & 27 Vict. c. 90).

Parliament has attempted to alleviate the distress of persons thrown out of employment by the closing of the mills and manufactories, by passing an act to facilitate the execution of public works in certain manufacturing districts, and to authorise for that purpose advances of public money to a limited amount upon the security of local rates (26 & 27 Vict. c. 76).

The interference of Parliament between employers and the employed has, on the ground of humanity, and of the duty of the Legislature to protect those who cannot adequately protect themselves, been often invoked, and, notwithstanding the dry and harsh rules of political economists, with great advantage to all parties. This last session produced a most useful act of this character, for limiting the hours of labour of young persons employed in bakehouses, making also various regulations with respect to cleanliness and ventilation in bakehouses (26 & 27 Vict. c. 40). By another act (26 & 27 Vict. c. 88), women, young persons, and children employed in calendering works and finishing works, are placed under the regulation of the Factory Acts.

Next, with regard to ecclesiastical and religious affairs. The Lord Chancellor's Act (26 & 27 Vict. c. 120) is not only important in itself, but it is likely to lead to very great results by the principle upon which it proceeds. By this act the Lord Chancellor is empowered to sell a large number of advowsons, of which he is the patron, in order that the purchase money or consideration may be applied in the augmentation of the income of such benefices, or in augmentation of other poor benefices remaining unsold in his gift.

By the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 82, power is given to bishops of Welsh dioceses to license chapels for the performance of Divine service in English; the minister to be nominated by the incumbent of the parish, or, on his failure or refusal to nominate, by the bishop.

The law relating to district parochial churches in Ireland is amended by the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 123, which enables the churchwardens of such churches to levy pew rents, and makes regulations as to free sittings, and as to the applications of the pew rents.

The law relating to marriages in Ireland has been amended by the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 27, and provisions are elsewhere made for the registration of marriages (26 & 27 Vict. c. 90), and of births and deaths (26 & 27 Vict. c. 11), in that country.

The Metropolis has not been neglected by Parliament. A very useful act (26 & 27 Vict. c. 78) was passed relating to turnpike-roads in the neighbourhood of the metropolis north of the river Thames, under which it is to be hoped that many toll-houses will disappear.

Provisions have been made for the erection of a new street in connexion with the embankment on the north side of the river Thames (26 & 27 Vict. c. 45); and an act has been passed for the embankment of the south side of that river (26 & 27 Vict. c. 75); and another to extend the powers of the act relating to the main drainage of the metropolis (26 & 27 Vict. c. 68).

With regard to the Colonies, acts have been passed to alter the boundaries of New Zealand (26 & 27 Vict. c. 23) and British Columbia (26 & 27 Vict. c. 83), and for the government of the Cayman Islands (26 & 27 Vict. c. 31); to determine the time at which letters-patent shall take effect in the Colonies (26 & 27 Vict. c. 76); to facilitate the appointment of vice-admirals and of officers in Vice-Admiralty Courts of her Majesty's possessions abroad (26 & 27 Vict. c. 24); and certain acts of Colonial Legislatures have been confirmed (26 & 27 Vict. c. 84).

A variety of measures interesting to individuals or particular classes have also been passed.

Amongst acts interesting to the mercantile and monetary classes, may be mentioned "The Sydney Branch Mint Act, 1863" (26 & 27 Vict. c. 74), enabling her Majesty to declare gold coins to be issued from her Majesty's Branch Mint at Sydney, New South Wales, a legal tender in the United Kingdom. By the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 105, the restrictions placed by the 17 Geo. 3, c. 30, and the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 38, on the negotiation of promissory notes and bills of exchange under a limited sum, are removed.

A very useful act (26 & 27 Vict. c. 28) has also been passed to give further facilities to the holders of public stocks, by which every person, with certain exceptions, who is proprietor of English or Irish public stocks, may obtain a certificate of title to his shares, or any part thereof, not exceeding 1000*l.*, having annexed coupons, entitling the bearer to the dividends payable in respect of that part or share (sect. 3). A similar act has been passed for the benefit of the holders of India Stock (26 & 27 Vict. c. 73).

Nor have the poorer classes having money to invest been neglected, for an act has been passed to amend the law relative to the Post-office Savings Banks (26 & 27 Vict. c. 14); another to consolidate and amend the laws relating to Savings Banks (26 & 27 Vict. c. 87); a third to provide for the investment of monies received from the trustees of Savings Banks established under the enactments of the 9 Geo. 4, c. 92 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 25); and a fourth act to amend the laws relating to loan societies (26 & 27 Vict. c. 56).

It may be here mentioned, that an act has been passed to prevent false representations as to grants of medals or certificates by the Commissioners for the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 119).

The law as to elections of members of the House of Commons has been altered by the act to further limit and define the time for proceeding to election during the recess (26 & 27 Vict. c. 20); and the anxiety of Parliament to insure greater purity in elections, is testified by an act to amend and continue the law relating to corrupt practices at elections of members (26 & 27 Vict. c. 29).

The Railways Clauses Consolidation Acts, at the time when they were passed in the year 1845, comprised all the clauses which were then generally introduced into acts of Parliament authorising the construction of railways, other provisions have since that time been frequently introduced into acts of Parliament relating to railways. These have now been comprised in one general act, applicable to England, Ireland, or Scotland, not only for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of repeating such provisions in special acts relating to railways, but also for the purpose of insuring greater uniformity in the provisions thereunder. The new Railways Clauses Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 92), is divided into five parts, as follows:—Part 1, relating to construction of a railway; part 2, relating to extension of time; part 3, relating to working of agreements; part 4, relating to steam vessels; and part 5, relating to amalgamation.

Another act of the same kind has been passed for consolidating in one act certain provisions frequently inserted in acts relating to waterworks (26 & 27 Vict. c. 93). This act, and a former one having the same object, may be cited as the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847 and 1863.

Another act, of a similar character, which may be cited as the Companies Clauses Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 118), has been passed as supplemental to the Companies Clauses Consolidation Acts, 1845, in which are consolidated into one act certain provisions frequently inserted in acts relating to the constitution and management of companies incorporated for carrying on undertakings of a public nature. It is divided into four parts, as follows:—Part 1, relating to cancellation and surrender of shares; part 2, relating to additional capital; part 3, relating to debenture stock; and part 4, relating to change of name.

The public health was not disregarded by Parliament, for the practice of vaccination has been further extended and made compulsory in Ireland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 52), and has also been extended and made compulsory in Scotland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 108).

Moreover, the 26th section of the Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855, with regard to the seizure of diseased and unwholesome meat, being found defective, has been repealed by the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 117, which gives power to the medical officer of health, or inspector of nuisances, to inspect any animal, carcass, meat, poultry, game, flesh, fish, fruit, vegetables, corn, bread, or flour exposed for sale, and intended for the food of man; and if it be unfit for such purpose, to seize it, in order that it may be dealt with by a justice, who may order it to be destroyed, and fine or imprison the offender.

Another act provides for the more effectual condensation of muriatic acid gas in alkali works (26 & 27 Vict. c. 124).

With regard to enactments interesting to agriculturists, it will be seen, that an act has been passed to enable landed proprietors to construct works for the drainage and improvement of lands in Ireland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 88); and another act, to facilitate the drainage of lands in Ireland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 26).

An act has also been passed prohibiting the sale and use of poisoned grain or seed (26 & 27 Vict. c. 113); and by the act to amend the law relating to seizure of growing crops in Ireland, they are not to be seized under civil bill, decrees, or justice's orders (26 & 27 Vict. c. 62).

Not much has been done with regard to the game laws, an act only having been passed to regulate the sale of hares in Ireland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 19); but the fisheries, both in Ireland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 114) and Scotland (26 & 27 Vict. c. 50), have met with the attention of Parliament; and, in particular, an act has been passed prohibiting the exportation of salmon at certain times (26 & 27 Vict. c. 10).

An act to amend the law relative to the conveyance of land for charitable uses (so badly have the acts upon this subject been drawn) must, we suppose, be looked for annually (see the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 106), until their utter confusion renders consolidation unavoidable.

The liabilities of individuals have, in certain cases, been beneficially altered. Thus, by the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 41, no innkeeper is liable for any loss of, or injury to, the goods or property of his guest, beyond 30*l.*, except in certain cases. On the other hand, the owners of dogs in Scotland are rendered liable for injuries done by their dogs to sheep and cattle, without the necessity of any proof of the vicious propensity of such dogs (26 & 27 Vict. c. 100).

The defence of the country has not been overlooked, for, in addition to the annual acts having that object, the law relating to the royal naval coast volunteers has been amended (26 & 27 Vict. c. 5); the acts relating to the volunteer force has been consolidated and amended (26 & 27 Vict. c. 65); and an act has been passed for providing a further sum towards defraying the expenses of constructing fortifications for the protection of the royal arsenals and dockyards, and the ports of Dover and Portland, and of creating a central arsenal (26 & 27 Vict. c. 80).

As regards international law, with a view to the suppression of the slave trade, the Government entered into an important treaty with the United States of America, by which the contracting parties agree to a reciprocal right of search and detention within certain limits; and an act was accordingly passed last session to give effect to this treaty (26 & 27 Vict. c. 34).

This outline of the legislation of last session shews that the labours of Parliament were both varied and useful, and such as ought to be satisfactory to the country.

VULGAR LEGAL ERRORS.

We take the following from the Upper Canada Law Journal for September, 1863:—

"In 1838 the vulgar error that an innkeeper might detain the person of his guest until payment of his bill, was exploded by the case of Sunbolf v. Alford (3 M. & W. 248).

"In England it is a vulgar error, that a surgeon or butcher, from the barbarity of their business, may be challenged as jurors. By a statute of the 5th Hen. 8, surgeons are exempted from attendance upon juries. Perhaps this exemption is the foundation of the error. An instance of this error may be found in a note to Rousseau's 'Emile,' p. 137. Rousseau had in that work adduced it as evidence of the humanity of the English laws, that butchers are not received as witnesses in matters of life and death; but, in a note to the later editions, he adds, that the English translators of his work had corrected his mistake, and had mentioned the cause of it, viz. that butchers were not admitted as jurors in criminal cases!—Retrospective Review, vol. ix, p. 262.

"There seems to have been, for a long time, a vulgar error, in supposing that a creditor has the power of preventing the burial of a corpse by arresting the body for debt. Such a proceeding is not only revolting to the feelings of humanity, but is contrary to every principle of law; so much so, indeed, that any promise extorted by fear of it from any one of the surviving relatives, is considered wholly invalid. For in the forcible language of Lord Ellenborough, C. J., 'It might as well be said that a promise, in consideration that one would withdraw a pistol from another's breast, could be enforced against the party acting under such unlawful terror.'—(Jones v. Ashburnham, 4 East, 465).

"A prosecution at common law, for this offence, was sustained in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, before Chief Justice Parsons, at Nisi Prius, in which there was a conviction, and the parties punished by a fine. (Commonwealth v. Snow, in the County of Barnstable, cited in D. Davis's Justice (Heard's ed.), p. 712). The body of a man was arrested by a civil process on its way to the burying place, the party proceeding on a mistaken notion that he was entitled to the body of his debtor after death. By the General Statutes of Massachusetts it is enacted, that 'if a sheriff, deputy sheriff, coroner, or constable takes the body of any deceased in person on mesne process or execution, he shall be punished by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the gaol not exceeding six months.'—Gen. Stats. c. 165, s. 36.

"The following account of the outrage upon Sheridan's remains will be read with interest (Sheridaniana, p. 244):—

"The remains of Sheridan were removed from Saville-row, to the residence of his kinsman in Great George-street, Westminster. There they lay in state, to indulge the longing grief of the few friends who clung to his bleak and shattered fortunes. On the forenoon of the day fixed for their interment, a gentleman dressed in deep mourning entered the house, and requested of the attendant, who watched in the chamber of death, to allow him a last look of his departed friend. He professed to have known the deceased early in life, and to have undertaken a long journey in order to seize a parting glance of his pale features. The agony and earnestness with which the application was urged, lulled the suspicions of the serving-man—if any had arisen in his mind—and, after a slight hesitation, it was assented to. The lid of the coffin was removed, the body was unshrouded, and the death-chilled frame revealed to view. The gentleman gazed for some minutes upon it, and then fumbling in his waistcoat pocket, produced a bailiff's "wand," with which he touched the face, and instantly declared, to the horror and alarm of the servant, that he had arrested the corpse in the King's name for a debt of 500*l*. Before the requisite explanations had been gone through, the funeral group had assembled. The circumstance was instantly made known to Mr. Canning, who took Lord Sidmouth aside, and begged his advice and assistance. Lest the delay might mar the progress of the sorrowful train, they generously agreed to discharge the debt, and two cheques for 250*l*. each were given over to the bailiff, and accepted by him. Without their timely interference, the procession might have been detained for some hours; and, even in spite of their prompt sympathy and kindness, the multitudes who had congregated in the palace yard could not help murmuring when the stated hour was allowed to elapse so long without any apparent reason."

"In Barrington's 'Observations on the more Ancient Statutes,' p. 474, there is the following amusing enumeration of vulgar legal errors:—

"It is difficult," says that very learned judge, 'to account for many of the prevailing vulgar errors with regard to what is supposed to be law. Such are, that the body of a debtor may be taken in execution after his death; which, however, was practised in Prussia before this present king abolished it by the Code Fréderique. Other vulgar errors are, that the old statutes have prohibited the planting of vineyards, or the use of sawing-mills; which last notion I should conceive to have been occasioned by 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 22, forbidding what are called "gig-mills," as they were supposed to be prejudicial to the woollen manufacture. There is likewise an act of 23 Eliz. c. 5, which prohibits any iron-mills within two-and-twenty miles of London, to prevent the increasing dearthness of wood for fuel. As for sawing-mills, I cannot find any statute which relates to them; they are, however, established in Scotland, to the very great advantage both of the proprietors and the country.'

"It is supposed, likewise, to be penal to open a coal-mine, or to kill a crow, within five miles of London; as also to shoot with a wind-gun, or to carry a dark-lantern. The first of these I take to arise from a statute of Henry VII, prohibiting the use of a cross-bow, and the other from Guy Fawkes's dark-lantern in the powder-plot. To these vulgar errors may be added, the supposing that the king signs the death-warrant (as it is called) for the execution of a criminal; as also, that there is a statute which obliges the owners of asses to crop their ears, lest the length of them should frighten the horses which they meet on the road.

"To these vulgar errors may be perhaps added the notion, that a woman's marrying a man under the gallows will save him from the execution. This probably arose from a wife having brought an appeal against the murderer of her husband, who, afterwards, repenting the prosecution of her lover, not only forgave the offence, but was willing to marry the appellee. It is also a very prevailing error, that those who are born at sea belong to Stepney parish. I may likewise add to these, that any one may be put into the Crown Office, for no cause whatsoever, or the most trifling injury. An ingenious correspondent suggests two additional vulgar errors—"When a man designs to marry a woman who is in debt, if he take her from the hands of the priest clothed only in her shift, it is supposed that he will not be liable to her engagements." The second is—"that there was no land-tax before the reign of William III."

"A writer in The Retrospective Review (vol. ix, p. 263) has collected the following list of vulgar errors:—That if a criminal has hung an hour and survives, he cannot afterwards be executed; that a funeral passing over any place makes a public highway; that a husband has the power of divorcing his wife, by selling her in open market with a halter round her neck; that second cousins may not marry, though first cousins may; that it is necessary, in some species of legal process against the king, to go through the fiction of arresting him, which is done by placing a ribbon across the road as if to impede his carriage; that the lord of a manor may shoot over all the lands within his manor; that pounds of butter may be of any number of ounces; that bull beef shall not be sold unless the bull has been baited previously to being killed; that leases are made for the term of 999 years, because a lease of 1000 years would create a freehold; that deeds executed on Sunday are void; that in order to disinherit an heir-at-law, it is necessary to give him a shilling by the will, for that otherwise he would be entitled to the whole property."

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, giving and granting the office of one of the Barons of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer to Gillery Pigott, Serjeant-at-Law. Also, for constituting and appointing Sir Roundell Palmer, Knt., to be her Majesty's Attorney-General in all her Majesty's Courts of Record in England; and Robert Parrett Collier, Esq., her Majesty's Solicitor-General.

JURISPRUDENCE.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—

Professor SHARPE, LL.D., Barrister at Law, Reader of Jurisprudence and Civil Law to the Hon. Society of the Middle Temple, will COMMENCE his COURSE on MONDAY, the 2nd November, at 7.5 o'clock P.M. The Professor will deliver

TWO COURSES OF LECTURES.—The first Course, of about Six Lectures, on the Development of Law, as illustrated by the History of the Roman Law, and the Influence of the latter upon the English and Continental Systems of Jurisprudence. The second Course, about Eight Lectures, commencing the 25th January, 1864, on the Doctrines of Jurisprudence, and the Principles of Legislation with respect to Obligations arising ex contractu (including those arising from Contracts of Sale), quasi ex contractu ex delicto, and quasi ex delicto; and in such Course the English, French, and Roman Law upon Contract and Tort will be compared.

The Lectures will be on Mondays from 7.5 to 8.5 P.M.
Fee, 4l. 4s. On payment of 5s. College fee in addition, the Course is open to Gentlemen who are not attending other Classes in the College.

The following College Scholarships, Prizes, and Distinctions are conferred on the subjects of this Course:—

1. A Joseph Hume Scholarship in Jurisprudence of 20l. a year, tenable for three years, will be awarded in December, 1864. This Scholarship is awarded every third year. (The Regulations should be consulted).

2. A Prize of Books and Certificates of Honour at the Examination of the Members of this Class at the close of the Session.

3. A Scholarship of 50l. per annum, tenable for three years, is given by the University of London at the Annual Examination for the Degree of LL.B. to the Candidate who distinguishes himself the most in the Principles of Legislation.

In the "further Examination" of selected Candidates for the Civil Service of India, Jurisprudence is one of the subjects; 1000 marks are assigned for it in combination with Hindu and Mahomedan Law. Special Classes will be formed for such Candidates.

Application to be made at the office of the College.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, OCTOBER 17, 1863.

SINGULAR questions sometimes arise upon the liability of the owners of animals for injuries done by them, and the reasons given by the judges for their decisions in these cases are often still more singular, and savour more of sophistry than common sense.

With regard to wild animals, such as lions or bears, the owner is liable to any injury done by them while in his keeping, without any proof of their ferocity, because he must be taken to have known it. (Rex v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Raym. 1583).

According to the Roman law, if a wild beast escaped, the person who kept him would not be liable for any damage he might do after his escape, because such person had ceased to be the owner. "Si ursus fugit et sic nocuit, non potest quondam dominus conveniri: quia desinit dominus esse, ubi fera evasit." (Dig., lib. 9, tit. 1, s. 10). By the English law, however, according to Lord Hale, the owner of such wild beast would be liable for any injury done by it, "as was adjudged in Andrew Baker's case, whose child was bit by a monkey that broke his chain, and got loose." (1 Hale's P. C. 430, part 1, c. 33).

There is, however, a marked distinction between wild beasts, and animals which are domesticated—mansuetæ naturæ. In the case of a dog, bull, ox, ram, and such like animals, if they do an injury to any one, the owner will not be answerable for it in an action for damages, unless it be shewn that he was aware of their vicious propensities. Thus, if a bull passing along a highway gores a man, the onus of shewing that the owner knew the dangerous character of the animal lies on the injured party; and if he does not prove such knowledge, he will be unable to recover any damages. (Hudson v. Roberts, 6 Exch. 697). So, if a dog injures a man or sheep by biting them, the owner will not be liable, unless it be shewn that he knew the dog's propensity for biting. (Mason v. Keeling, 1 Ld. Raym. 606). Where, however, it is proved that the owner was aware of the savage disposition of the animal he kept, it cannot be objected, that it escaped and went at large without any default on the part of the owner, because he is bound to keep it secure at all events. (May v. Burdett, 9 Q. B. 113; Smith v. Pelah, 2 Str. 1264).

The law with regard to horses appears to be the same. In the recent case of Cox v. Burbidge (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 970), a horse strayed on the high road, where he kicked a child who was lawfully upon the highway; it was held by the Court of Common Pleas, that even assuming the horse was a trespasser, no action would lie against the owner, even although the horse strayed through his negligence, unless it were proved that the horse was likely to commit such act. The principle upon which the judgment proceeds is, that the owner of the horse was liable only for such acts as a straying horse was likely to commit. Hence, the learned Chief Justice in giving judgment, says, "The owner of a horse is bound to know, and must in all cases be taken to know, that a horse is by nature likely to stray, if not carefully confined, and to walk into a pasture and consume the grass. For this, therefore, the owner is held liable." "But," adds his Lordship, "if a horse does an act, which it is not in the ordinary nature of a horse to do, and which no owner would, therefore, without knowing his peculiarly vicious nature, have any reason to calculate on his doing, then he has the same protection as the owner of a dog. It is not in the ordinary course of the nature of a horse to kick a child, and, therefore, the owner is not liable, unless he is proved to be aware of the tendency of the horse to commit acts of that kind."

Now, we should have thought, before reading his Lordship's judgment, that the reason why the owner of a horse is liable for the damage occasioned by its consuming the grass of his neighbour, is, that such owner is liable for the acts of the horse by which he derives a benefit.

With respect to the point actually decided by the Court, we can readily conceive, that if the child had been a trespasser, and had gone into the field where the horse was kept, the owner ought not, according to previous decisions, to have been liable for the injury occasioned to the child. But we think that his Lordship goes rather too far when he assumes that a horse that strays on a public road is not likely to commit acts endangering the public safety.

The case does not appear materially to differ from Lynch v. Nurdin (1 Q. B. 29; 5 Jur. 797) and Illidge v. Goodwin (5 Car. & P. 190), in each of which cases the owner of a horse and cart, who negligently left them unattended in the street, was held liable for the injury done thereby. In those cases, indeed, negligence was proved; in the case now under discussion no such proof was given, but the learned judge in his judgment assumed it to be capable of proof, or proved. Now, if we assume that a horse and cart, left in a road negligently, are likely to be dangerous, and that therefore the owner is liable for the injury that may be occasioned by such cart and horse, why are we not to arrive at the same conclusion with regard to a horse unattached to a cart allowed negligently to stray upon a public road?

Whether the necessity of proving the mischievous propensity of domesticated animals, as a condition precedent to obtaining damages for acts done by them, proceeds upon a correct principle, may well be doubted. The proof in most cases is difficult, in some cases almost impossible, even where the owner may have been himself well aware of the vicious character of the animal.

Notwithstanding, therefore, the decisions upon this subject have laid down the distinction so clearly between the liability of the owner of wild and domesticated animals for any injury done by them, we think the rule would be much more just if in the case of all animals, without distinction as to their character, and without the necessity in the case of domesticated animals of any proof that their ferocity was known, that the owner should be liable for all injuries caused by their acts, provided that they were not occasioned by any fault on the part of the person injured.

Legislation seems to be tending this way; for, by an act of last session, the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 700 (which, however, extends to Scotland only), it is enacted, that in any action brought against the owner of a dog for damages, in consequence of injury done by such dog to any sheep or cattle, it shall not be necessary for the pursuer to prove a previous propensity in such dog to injure sheep or cattle.

If this act is right in principle (and we conceive that it is so), there is no reason why it should be limited to dogs, or that its operation should be confined to Scotland.

Make the owner of all domesticated animals liable for the consequences of their vicious acts, without its being necessary to prove that he was aware of their propensity to commit them, and we shall soon find that the number of accidents caused by such animals will be considerably diminished; and when they do occur, the injured party will receive that compensation to which he is justly entitled.

An Elementary View of the Proceedings in a Suit in Equity. With an Appendix of Forms. By SYLVESTER JOSEPH HUNTER, B.A., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law. Second Edition. By GEORGE WOODFORD LAWRENCE, M.A., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law. [London: Butterworths.]

NOTHING is more discouraging to a student of the law than the endeavour to gain a clear notion of the proceedings of our courts of law or equity, by reading those books of practice which go into all the minute details of the pleadings and procedure incident to a suit in law or in equity. For instance, although Morgan's Chancery Acts and Orders and Sidney Smith's Chancery Practice are invaluable to practitioners in the Court of Chancery, yet if any student should attempt to read them with the object of gaining a knowledge of the procedure of our courts of equity, he would soon throw them down in disgust, or arise from their perusal more confused than enlightened. Mr. Hunter, in his elementary view of the proceedings in a suit in equity, has supplied what was palpably wanting, in order to give a student, on commencing his preparation for practice in the Court of Chancery, a short view of the nature of the business which will come before him in a solicitor's office, or in the chambers of an equity draftsman. When the student has mastered the very able outline of Chancery practice sketched out for him in Mr. Hunter's book, he will then be able, without being lost in multitudinous details, to master and profit by the other books of practice to which we have before alluded. The second edition of this work appears to have been very carefully prepared by Mr. Lawrence, who has altered some portions of it, so far as was necessary, for the purpose of including the recent changes in the law; and he has also much enhanced its value, by references to the statutes, decided cases, and the Consolidated Orders, in support of the text.

The Right Hon. Sir William Erie, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed Edward Brydges Hardisty, Gent., of No. 43, Great Marlborough-street, to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Middlesex, also in and for the city and liberties of Westminster, and the city of London.

DEATH OF LORD LYNDBURST.

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY, Baron Lyndhurst, of Lyndhurst, Hants., has departed this life at the very advanced age of ninety-one. With his political character we have nothing to do, but he is also well known to the world in his professional and judicial capacities. In the former he served the offices both of Attorney and Solicitor-General, and in the latter those of Chief Justice of Chester, Master of the Rolls, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and, no less than three times, Lord High Chancellor.

Of Lord Lyndhurst's great abilities there can be but one opinion, but there is little particular to record of him as a judge. The case with which his name as such is most connected, is that of Small v. Atwood, in 1831-2, when he was Lord Chief Baron, a case perhaps without parallel for voluminousness and intricacy. Lord Lyndhurst, after taking a long time for consideration, delivered a judgment which was afterwards reversed by the House of Lords, three law peers voting against the decision, which was, however, supported by Lord Lyndhurst himself and Lord Wynford.

Every lawyer is said to owe a debt to his profession, and we accordingly find the name of Lord Lyndhurst mentioned as having brought in some acts of Parliament for amending the law. Among these may be enumerated the statute allowing persons accused of felony to make their defence by counsel, the act rendering void marriages within the prohibited degrees, &c.

The popular notion that the study and practice of the law have a tendency to shorten human life, derives small support from the perusal of the career of Lord Lyndhurst, or of Lord Brougham, his great rival, still happily among us. Both attained ages considerably exceeding the average term of man's existence, and yet few have worked harder when at the bar, or been exposed to greater peril, from the late hours and tainted atmosphere of Parliament. Perhaps the theories on this subject require revision.

Almost contemporaneous with Lord Lyndhurst has died Richard Whateley, Archbishop of Dublin, whose bold sketch, entitled "Historic Doubts relative to the Existence of Napoleon Buonaparte," is worthy the attention of all desirous to master the philosophy of evidence.

CASE LAW REVISION.

THE following pertinent observations on this subject are taken from an article upon it in The Law Times of the 10th inst. :—

"The report of a barrister, be it 'authorised,' as the conventional phrase is, or be it not authorised, is only secondary evidence of the law. Sometimes it happens that the Court distrusts, or is not fully satisfied with, the completeness, or even correctness, of the authorised report in its statement of the pleadings or the decree. In such an event the Court refers to the record, and supplies the deficiency, or corrects the error of the report. It is true, that, practically, the Court, in deciding cases, contents itself with the written reports of precedents, because generally these reports bear internal evidence of correctness; and if there is incorrectness, counsel should suggest it, rather than leave the Court to find it out.

"Therefore, if a digest of the case law is to be made; if, as the Lord Chancellor meditates, a commission is to weed out decisions, and to settle which of opposing decisions ought to remain, the first thing which the nation has a right to demand is the ascertainment beyond all question, by a comparison and verification of the reports with the records of the courts, what those decisions have been. No digest worthy of the country, for the purpose of shaping the unwritten law, can be made upon the secondary evidence to which the Lord Chancellor has proposed to apply the process. The magnitude of this task of verification alone is repelling. It brings home to the mind the difference between a forced settlement of the body of the unwritten law through a commission, and the gradual settlement of it, point by point, through the ordinary labours of the Profession and the Bench.

"But this is not all, nor nearly all. The printed reports, 1200 volumes though they are, give but a very imperfect idea of the materials to be taken in hand. Let us recur to the Year-books. Prior to them are the Rotuli Curie Regis, from the 6 Rich. 1 to the 1 John; and the State Trials, principally in the Queen's Bench, from the 9 Hen. 2. The printed volumes of the Year-books themselves reach from the 1 Edw. 2 to the 28 Hen. 8. Vol. 1 embraces 1 Edw. 2 to 1 Edw. 3; vol. 2, 1 Edw. 3 to 11 Edw. 3; vol. 3, 11 Edw. 3 to 40 Edw. 3; vol. 4, from 40 Edw. 3 and 1 Edw. 3 to 1 Rich. 2; vol. 5, 1 Hen. 4 to 1 Hen. 6; vols. 6 and 7, 1 Hen. 6 to 1 Edw. 4; vols. 8 and 9, 1 Edw. 4 to 1 Edw. 5; vol. 10, 1 Edw. 5 to 28 Hen. 8. In the ten volumes there are many chasms and interruptions in the series of years. These breaks must, in any digest, be filled in from the manuscripts in Lincoln's-inn, the Harleian, Lansdowne, and Hargrave collections, in the British Museum and other known places. The defects to be thus supplied are considerable; in the printed editions there are wanting the reign of Edward I, except some short memoranda in the Exchequer; fifteen years of the reign of Edward III; the whole of Richard II; three years of Henry V; and three of Henry VII. Of the Year-book manuscripts, Lord Hale's, in Lincoln's-inn Library, are the most valuable. He says, that 'the reason of the law, upon which the Court proceeded, is many times expressly delivered upon the record itself.' These he selected and copied. But a curious obstruction to making Lord Hale's manuscripts of service for a printed digest arises from the terms of his bequest to the Inn. The will, after stating that these manuscripts were 'fit to be bound in leather, and chained and kept in archives,' and directing that only his posterity, if members of the Inn, should be allowed to make use of them out of the library, and then of no more than one volume at a time, concludes the bequest in the words—'I would have nothing of these books printed, but entirely preserved together for the use of the industrious learned members of that worthy society.' The restriction has, however, in some instances been broken through under the direction of the House of Lords. In addition to the manuscripts which we have mentioned for completing the reports of the decisions in the time covered by the Year-books are the manuscripts of Bishop Moris, said to be in the public library at Cambridge, and some important Year-books in the Middle Temple Library. It would be wearisome and unnecessary further to particularise the manuscript reports and works to be added to the printed Year-books as the materials of a digest up to the 28 Hen. 8. For the present purpose it will be sufficient to note, that there are about ninety of these documents, on which, in addition to the rolls, the commission must begin the exercise of its faculty of digestion.

"To continue these inquiries to the subsequent reigns, the eight printed reports of Edward the Sixth's time must be collated and supplemented with eleven MSS.; the thirteen reports for Philip and Mary's reign, with sixteen MSS.; the twenty-five for Elizabeth, with seventy-two MSS.; the twenty-eight for James I, with seventy-seven MSS. Charles the First's reign, the cases in which furnish twenty printed reports, must be perfected with fifty-eight MSS.; Charles II, thirty-one reports and thirty-three MSS.; James II, fourteen reports and seven MSS. For the cases of the reign of William III, there are twenty-six printed reports, while the MSS. are nineteen in number; for the reign of Queen Anne there are twenty-seven reports, with twenty-three MSS.; for George I, twenty reports and eighteen MSS.; and for George II, thirty-eight reports and twenty-four MSS. The manuscripts, as well as the reports, are many of them in numerous volumes. These manuscripts are chiefly, if not all, in the British Museum and libraries of the Inns. For manuscript reports of cases subsequent to the reign of George II, we propose that the commission, under the usual power to call for books and papers, shall call upon all barristers to deliver up from their 'pocket-books' or other receptacles, all manuscript and unknown cases, to the end that opinions be no longer suddenly subverted, nor judges forced to yield to new discoveries."

THE NEW BARON OF THE EXCHEQUER.—It will be seen from our last number that Serjeant Pigott has been definitively appointed to the office of Baron of the Exchequer, vacant by the transfer of Sir James P. Wilde to the post of Judge of the Court of Probate. Considered merely with reference to professional position, there are many gentlemen at the bar whose claims to this high honour were much stronger, and, as usual on such occasions, the names of several of them have been freely put forward by the press and rumour. But experience has, on more occasions than one, shewn how fallible is this standard. Several of the ablest judges who adorned the bench have been, comparatively speaking, little known at the bar; and we sincerely hope that Baron Pigott will so conduct himself as to justify the Government in his promotion. And here we cannot help reverting to the proposal brought forward in Parliament by the Lord Chancellor to establish an annual revision of the decisions of our courts of justice, and expunging from them all the bad law, or all that the revisors, or by whatever other name the exalted persons chosen for this purpose may be designated, deem bad law. Under such a system it would matter little who the persons composing the judicial bench might be, for those annual revisors would then be the real judicial power of the land. But, as the law has ever stood in this country—or, at least, ever since the Revolution of 1688, when judges were rendered independent of the Crown—the appointment to the judicial bench is a matter of the greatest importance, and involving the deepest responsibility on the part of the Government —a responsibility which, we make no doubt, has been duly weighed on the present occasion.

A LADY REFUSING TO BE SWORN.—At the sitting of the St. Alban's County Court, last week, a person named Crisp brought an action against a Mrs. Sarah Pitkin for the recovery of 15*l*. As the defendant was in the service of Lady Glamis, the plaintiff's solicitor proposed to call that lady, who was seated on the bench to the left of the judge, to give evidence as to the amount she paid the defendant. When Mr. Earle, the solicitor, mentioned the name of Lady Glamis, she said—"What Mrs. Pitkin has said as to what I have paid her is quite correct." Mr. Earle required her ladyship to be sworn to give evidence on the point. Lady Glamis—"I decline to take an oath; what I have said is right." His Honor—"The law prescribes a certain form in giving evidence, and all ranks of society, from the Queen upon the throne to her most humble subject, are expected to conform to the law. There is a provision made to meet the case of the people called Quakers and others who object to oaths on religious grounds. Do you belong to the Quakers?" Lady Glamis (smiling).—"Oh, no, I am not a Quaker, and I do not object on any religious grounds; but I shall not take an oath on such a frivolous matter." His Honor—"My lady, now be advised by me, and be sworn. If you know nothing more on the matter than has been said, you can be sworn, and then say so." Lady Glamis—"I am very firm; I shall take no oath; my word is as good as my oath. I think it would be a desecration, and taking God's name in vain in such a case." His Honor—"Certainly, the word of every good man ought to be as sacred as his oath; but the law requires that evidence should be given on oath, and I cannot take it otherwise." Mr. Earle—"I certainly require that Lady Glamis should be examined in the way the law prescribes, and I am greatly surprised that she refuses." His Honor—"I am not only surprised but grieved that your ladyship refuses to do what the law requires of you. You set a sad example to those in more humble stations in society, and I must beg of you to leave this court." Her ladyship immediately left the court.

BY AUTHORITY.In royal 8vo., price 7*s.* 6*d.* cloth.

THE CONSOLIDATED GENERAL ORDERS of the HIGH COURT OF CHANCERY; with Regulations as to certain Fees and Charges.

"The new arrangement of the Orders leaves nothing to be wished for: it is clear, convenient, and admirably adapted for the purposes of practice. Although the language of the old Orders has been adhered to as far as possible, it has been altered whenever it was found necessary for the purpose of adapting them to the present practice, and also for the purpose of removing those doubts and difficulties which so frequently arose under the old Orders."—Jurist, Jan. 21, 1860.

V. & R. Stevens, Sons, & Haynes, 26, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-inn.

MORGAN'S CHANCERY ACTS AND ORDERS.Price 2*s.* cloth.

THE STATUTES, GENERAL ORDERS, and REGULATIONS relating to the PRACTICE, PLEADING, and JURISDICTION of the COURT OF CHANCERY. With copious Notes, containing a Summary of every reported Decision thereon. By GEORGE OSBORNE MORGAN, M.A., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister at Law, late Stowell Fellow of University College, and Eeldon Law Scholar in the University of Oxford. Third Edition, considerably enlarged.

"Mr. Morgan's work merits the highest commendation for its usefulness, simplicity, and completeness. . . . The practitioner will find in the pages of this book ample, and at the same time terse and business-like, information upon almost all the questions that arise in the ordinary proceedings in Chancery."—Law Magazine, November, 1862.

"No labour has been spared to make the work as complete and accurate as possible. With its elaborate index and marginal references, it is impossible to over-estimate its value as a manual of general practice."—Law Magazine, May, 1862.

PETTY SESSIONS PRACTICE.In thick 12mo., price 18*s.* cloth, lettered.

STONE'S PRACTICE of PETTY SESSIONS. With the Statutes, a List of Summary Convictions, and an Appendix of Forms. Seventh Edition. By THOMAS BELL and LEWIS W. CAVE, Esqrs., Barristers at Law. With a Supplement, bringing the Statutes and Cases up to 1863. 12mo., price 18*s.* cloth.

"It is remarkable for a rare combination of conciseness and clearness in the composition, which have recommended it to magistrates who have not been educated as lawyers, and to whom, therefore, the books written for the use of lawyers are often obscure by reason of their technicalities. The present editors have preserved this characteristic of Mr. Stone's volume in their own abundant additions to it."—Law Times.

PHILLIPS'S LAW OF COPYRIGHT.

This day is published, in 8vo., price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT IN WORKS OF LITERATURE AND ART, and in the Application of Designs. With the Statutes relating thereto. By CHARLES PALMER PHILLIPS, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

The object of the author has been to write a book of moderate bulk, which would present a concise and connected statement of the whole law of copyright in this country.

This volume contains separate chapters on copyright before and after publication in literary and musical works—in the representation and performance of dramas and musical compositions—on the copyright of the Crown, and of certain Universities and Colleges—on copyright in lectures after public delivery—in published engravings—in paintings, drawings, and photographs—in sculpture—in designs (ornamental and useful)—lastly, on international copyright.

All the important judicial decisions and dicta, at law and in equity, upon the subject will, the author hopes, be found in the work, and in the Appendix are the statutes to which it may be necessary to refer.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, OCTOBER 24, 1863.

THE humanitarians in this country are utterly incorrigible. In the face of the miserable failure of their plans for the reformation of criminals, the practical consequences of which have been to render our criminal code the scandal and laughter of the world—to render the streets of the metropolis, as well as other places, unsafe to the passers by, and the home of every man liable each night to the visit of the burglar; and despite the declaration of the Home Secretary, that all life punishment is to be condemned, because its effect is to make men desperate; these soi-disant philanthropists want to push their theories still farther, by renewing the agitation against all capital punishment, and consequently sending back to society the traitor, the assassin, and the wilful murderer, after undergoing a few years of the fashionable punishment of penal servitude, if not to enter upon a new career of bloodshed, or at all events to demonstrate to the world how little interest the law takes in punishing those who deprive its citizens of life. We do not, however, propose on the present occasion to revert further to the question of the propriety of capital punishment. Another class of theorists—a shade less infatuated than the former—admits the necessity of retaining that punishment for heinous offences, but insists that, instead of being inflicted in public, as has ever been the practice in this country, every execution should take place within the walls of a prison, in the presence of official, and perhaps other selected witnesses.

This question has been much mooted in modern times. In 1856, in particular, a select committee of the House of Lords, appointed on the motion of the Bishop of Oxford, sat upon it, and reported against public executions, on the ground, that their effect was injurious to the spectators, the population of the place, and had a bad influence on other criminals, and on the criminal himself—an expression which, we presume, must be understood to mean, during the period between his conviction and execution. This report was, however, so one-sided in its views and language, and based on evidence of such a character, that it made but little impression, and the old practice has remained undisturbed. Still the agitation of the question has gone on, and the present year has presented us with it in a third phase. At some of the executions which took place after the last assizes, the local authorities took upon themselves, not, indeed, to inflict capital punishment in private, but to shear it of some portion of its publicity. Thus at Maidstone, where two murderers were executed, we are told by the local paper, i. e. The South-eastern Gazette, of the 25th August, 1863—"There was one circumstance connected with the exhibition last Thursday which will henceforth distinguish it. The executions, compared with others which have gone before, were comparatively private, and, therefore, more solemn and impressive than usual. The lower part of the scaffold, for about five or six feet deep, was surrounded by black cloth, which in a great measure screened the awful performance decreed for enactment there from the spectators, attracted in large numbers by the hope of a sensation."—"One of the reporters says, 'The usual opportunity of gratifying the morbid tastes of the crowd was denied, as the scaffold was surrounded with black cloth, so that not more than the top of each white cap could be seen after the drop had fallen.'" And a somewhat similar course was adopted at Liverpool.

The first observation that here presents itself is, that in thus acting the local authorities of Maidstone and Liverpool have taken too much upon them. Their duty was to carry out the law, not to sit in judgment on its propriety. If the law, acting in obedience to a practice of at least seven centuries standing, requires, however erroneously, executions to be public, it is not for any local officer to start up and say, "in my opinion they ought to be private, and, so far as my power extends, I will neutralise the administration of the law to bring it into accordance with my views." The duty of such an officer is to carry out the law; which is so strict, and most righteously so, on this subject, that if a criminal is sentenced to die by one mode of death, and the officer executes him by another mode, the officer is guilty of murder.

But with respect to the general question, whether executions ought to be public. In the article from the Maidstone paper, to which we have referred, we are informed that the system of public executions is an "old barbarism—a thing scarcely less demoralising in its very nature and concomitants than would be the commission of a murder in public, with all the neighbourhood invited to witness the performance."

The theory that a public execution is only murder in public is by no means new, but those who hold it, overlook the distinction between lawful slaying and murder. If all slaying is murder, what must become of a man, who, in self defence, slays an assassin, footpad, or a burglar; and a multo fortiori, what must be said of war or battles under any circumstances? Unlawful slaying is, indeed, a fearful sight, and murder is the most aggravated form of it, being a slaying, not only unlawful but malicious, and has been truly styled "The ne plus ultra of human wickedness."

The usual argument against public executions, however, is, that they tend to harden instead of improve the lookers on. The Committee of the House of Lords thus express themselves on this subject:—

"First, on spectators—

"That the sight of them is by no means generally deterring.

"Secondly, on the population of the place where the execution takes place—

"It was stated in evidence—'That the whole town for the day was a seat of riot and drunkenness, and debauchery of every kind'—'that the roads approaching it were, towards evening, filled with disorderly and drunken persons'—'that the country people flock in as to a bull-baiting or a cock-fight'—and that, 'after the solemn scene is over, the day is invariably one of drunkenness, oaths, and disorder.' 'The disgraceful state of the town,' says a witness of the highest character, 'on the day of execution, exceeded anything I had before witnessed, or could have credited.'"

The scenes that take place at some executions are no doubt deplorable, and the writers of romance have exhausted the powers of their art by the most graphic and highly painted descriptions of the scenes of theft, blasphemy, and violence which take place under the very gallows. From all this is drawn the inference that the public execution of the sentence of the law, if not the cause of all this, is at least impotent to restrain crime. And it is urged, perhaps with truth, that many persons who have ultimately reached the scaffold themselves, have witnessed executions.

This reasoning is, however, founded on the fallacy of assuming, that the publicity of executions is meant solely, or even principally, for the benefit of those present at it. Supposing, for the sake of argument (for we by no means admit the fact, and believe it will not stand the test of investigation), that the sight of an execution never made a deterrent impression on the mind of any one, its effect on the minds of others remains to be considered. The knowledge, that a criminal has been publicly or privately put to death, or undergone some other punishment for his crime at the hands of the law, is calculated to deter others from copying his example—to deny this is to deny the efficacy of punishment altogether;—but that he was put to death in an ignominious manner is still more strongly calculated to have this effect. Among murderers of the better class, taking away the publicity of the punishment would be to deprive it of the greatest part of its terror. This is well depicted in the old play, where a virtuous young lady is introduced lamenting the fate of her lover, who lies under sentence of death for murder; who gives utterance to the sentiment, that she has not merely to regret his death, but that it should be under such circumstances as to afford "a holiday to suburban savages." The polished murderer, the man of highly cultivated mind, whose feelings would be shocked by coarse manners, or his ear by a false note in music; the household friend of the better class, who, like Madame Laffarge, administers a poisoned medicine to her husband while smiling in his face, have usually an instinctive terror of being made a public spectacle to a mob; either from a misdirected feeling as regards themselves, or out of regard for the reputation of their families. And the same principle will be found acting, though in a minor degree, on murderers in much lower grades of society. The cause of their apparently inconsistent conduct metaphysicians may explain—we merely state the fact.

But it may be said, that although the general publicity of the execution be retained, the authorities of Maidstone and of Liverpool acted judiciously in intercepting a portion of the spectacle from the crowd. Most emphatically do we deny their right to do anything of the sort—if such a change is to be made, it should be made by the Legislature. And we are by no means satisfied that it ought to be made. We have read somewhere, that in olden times, when, unhappily, capital punishment was very frequent for minor offences, and the criminal was hanged without the modern invention of a drop, the authorities in certain places used to connive at the friends of the criminal coming under the gallows after he had been turned off, and supporting him on their shoulders so that he scarcely felt the pressure of the cord, and after the usual time of hanging was cut down, having sustained but little injury, so that many persons supposed to have been executed returned to society. We have no wish to see this revived, or any similar mockery of justice palmed off on the nation.

But independent of the value of the impression produced by example, and the evident superiority of an example that speaks to the senses, the deprivation of human life is an act of so solemn and responsible a character that every Government is bound to discharge it openly in the sight of God and man; if afraid to do this, it had better refrain from it, and let murder stalk abroad unpunished. If capital punishment were inflicted in private, the means of evading it would be greatly increased: by connivance, either the ceremony would be omitted altogether, or gone through in dumb show, either on a corpse, a mannekin, or a statue, while the criminal would be permitted to escape, to laugh at the imbecility of the law, and prepare himself for fresh crimes. Under a corrupt regime this would certainly be the case; and even under a good one would occasionally happen, so long as there are officials to be bought, and money ready to buy, or influence to overawe them.

Nor is even this the worst. Supposing the sentence duly carried out in private, the fact would not be credited by the community. In every age the creed of Captain Macheath, in the Beggars Opera, has had numerous votaries:—

"If laws were made for every degree,
To curb vice in others as well as in me,
Methinks we should have better company
Under Tyburn Tree.
But gold from law can take out the sting,
For if great rogues like me were to swing," &c.

In a word. Suppose the sentence were executed, the fact would not be believed. Nor can we altogether blame this disbelief. The system of indiscriminate condonation that has let loose on the world, in the shape of ticket-of-leave men, so many ruffians to infest society, and which, within three years after his conviction, not only liberated the notorious convict Redpath, but made him a constable, cannot complain if it finds its honesty or its capacity an object of suspicion.

MEMBERS RETURNED TO SERVE IN PARLIAMENT.—

Sir Roundell Palmer, Knt., her Majesty's Attorney-General, for the borough of Richmond; Robert Forrett Collier, Esq., her Majesty's Solicitor-General, for the borough of Plymouth; and George John Shaw Lefevre, Esq., for the borough of Reading, in the room of Gillery Pigott, Serjeant-at-Law, now one of the Barons of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—The able letter of Mr. Daniel to the present Attorney-General, on the subject of law reporting, referred to in your number of the 3rd instant, has drawn my attention to the evils of the present system, which are, indeed, many and great, and to the proposed remedy. The evils are, chiefly, the want of an authentic record of the verbal proceedings which take place in court; the multiplication of reports, arising from the fact that the mere status of a barrister entitles any person to set up as a reporter; the expense of taking in all the reports; the chance of missing some important point of law reported by one barrister but not by another, if all the reports be not taken in; and the possibility, that after all some important point may have been decided, unreported by anybody, but yet binding as law, though known, perhaps, only to the counsel engaged in the cause. These are evils sufficient, and quite enough, in my humble opinion, to warrant the preliminary course suggested by Mr. Daniel, that a meeting of the bar should be called to consider the subject.

It appears to me, however, that the true remedies for the evils in question are beyond the reach of the bar, and require the aid of the judges, and I think, also, the authority of Parliament.

With regard to the want of an authentic record of what is spoken in court by the bar and by the bench, it appears to me that the public, in its official capacity, would do well to take a lesson from what is done by the public as private individuals. In all important cases it is usual for one or both of the parties engaged in litigation to secure the assistance of a short-hand writer, by whom, as far as is possible, every word uttered in the course of the proceedings is taken down. This plan is so frequent, that I presume it is found to answer. At any rate, it is, I believe, the best means known for securing what is wanted—an authentic record of words actually spoken. Why, then, should not an official short-hand writer be attached to every court, whose duty it should be to take down every word uttered in the court during its sitting? If any person has a more effectual method of securing an authentic report of what goes on, by all means let him make it known.

If an official short-hand writer were appointed, the great expense incurred by individual suitors in employing such persons would at once be put an end to. In addition to this, the reports of short-hand writers, though now often received as evidence by consent of parties, are not, I apprehend, strictly speaking, legal evidence of what has been spoken. The best evidence is not legal evidence. I would make the report of the official short-hand writer primary evidence as between the parties and those claiming under them, of what actually took place in court in the progress of any suit.

But legal decisions are not only of consequence to the parties concerned, they affect the whole of the profession of the law, and the whole of the public, whenever they involve any point of law. Many decisions, however, involve no point of law at all, or points so simple that everybody knows them, or points which, from the peculiar circumstances of the case, ought not to be drawn into a precedent. These decisions are of no use to the profession, for they leave the law as it stood; and the question is, by what process ought these decisions to be eliminated. How shall the chaff be winnowed from the wheat? At present this process is left to the judgment of the individual reporters, who may chance to be employed by the law publishers in furnishing reports. For the right exercise of this judgment the only guarantee possessed by the public is the fact, that the gentleman in question is a barrister-at-law. Any remark made by a judge which he thinks pertinent is preserved in print; whatever in his judgment is irrelevant is omitted from his report, but perhaps appears in the contemporary report of one of his brethren, in whose judgment the matter in question may appear important. Is this a reasonable or right state of things? According to our law, the decision of a judge operates as an ex post facto enactment, and confirms, illustrates, modifies, or repeals some portion of the existing law. It is of the highest importance, therefore, that every decision which has such an effect should be known as promptly, accurately, and extensively as possible. It appears to me, therefore, that unless by some superior authority the decisions of the judges be divided into those which are to affect, and those which are not to affect, the law for the future, there is no course left than that of causing to be published, as cheaply and as speedily as possible, every word that is uttered, either by counsel or judge, in any court of justice. I do not see, however, why the division between relevant and irrelevant to future law, now practically left to the judgment of individual reporters, should not be left to the judges by whom the law is made. At present it is not unfrequent for a judge, under peculiar circumstances, to make a decision, adding, "This case must not be drawn into a precedent." I should suggest, that instead of assistance to the reporter now being looked upon as a matter of favour, it should be the duty of every judge to superintend the reports of the cases decided in his own court, and to decide what cases should be officially reported as being a part of the future law, and what should be officially unreported, as affecting no legal principle. This would, of course, involve an official reporter, as well as an official short-hand writer. I think that the reporter should be appointed by the judge, and be under his control. An official reporter, with absolute power to print or to suppress, as he pleased, would be an imperium in imperio, which I think would be intolerable. It may be said, that the plan now suggested would involve a temptation for the judges to modify in print what they may have stated verbally in court, and to touch up their decisions after reconsideration. But why not? What is it that the public require? Do they want the well considered opinion of a thoughtful man? Or do they insist on stamping with judicial authority words spoken on the spur of the moment, or in the process of thinking aloud, without which some able men seem to find it difficult to come to a right conclusion? The existence of a written record of what was actually spoken would, I think, prevent too great liberties in this respect. To my mind, it would be a great gain to the public, and it would certainly save to the profession the perusal of a vast amount of trash, if such cases only were allowed to be cited as authority in legal arguments as the judge had decided to be proper to be published for that purpose, and as were contained in official reports put forth from time to time, as speedily as might be, under the judge's superintendence.

For purposes of convenience, for the purpose of bringing public opinion to bear on the conduct of the judge, and for the purpose of information until the official reports were published, I would allow reporting to go on as at present.

I am Sir, your obedient servant,

JOSHUA WILLIAMS.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

It appears from the following proceedings of the Social Science Association, that there is at least one member of the Government, although not of the Cabinet, namely, the Lord Advocate of Scotland, who dissents from the plan brought forward by the Lord Chancellor and others to establish a Department of Justice.

"SOCIAL SCIENCE CONGRESS.—A paper 'On the Curiosities of Legislation,' was read by Dr. Barclay, sheriff substitute of Perth. He stated many curious blunders that had passed into the Statute-book; as, for instance, the substitution, in one case, of transportation for a pecuniary penalty, while the clause was retained, 'one-half thereof to the informer and the other half to the King;' the provision in one clause of a bill that the prisoners should occupy the old gaol till the new one was built, and in another that the stones of the old should be used to build the new; the Irish statute providing that the King's officers might travel by sea from one place to another within the land of Ireland; the provision in one statute for the possibility of Good Friday falling on a Sunday, and many other instances of error. He concluded by urging—First, that there be a Minister of Justice, under whose superintendence all legislation should be carried through. This functionary should have a competent staff of legal assistants as experts, and to whom would be entrusted the preparation and progress of all bills intended to result in statutes. All suggestions adopted by either House of Parliament, and ordered to be incorporated into the statutes, would be introduced by this body, who would see that they are not merely in harmony with the whole code of law, but consistent with itself and existent statutes. Secondly, that when any amendment of a statute is rendered necessary, the statute should be repealed and renewed in an amended form, and thus the law for every specific object should be found in one statute, without reference to others of prior date.

"The Lord Advocate complimented Dr. Barclay's paper, but thought he had a little underrated the amount of care and attention which was generally given to these bills. The real truth was, that this was part of the price we paid for our constitutional government. A poem or a novel written by the two Houses of Parliament would be a very strange production; and he was not sure that it was not just as difficult to make an act of Parliament which, in phraseology and in composition, and in consistency, should be perfect, by means of a popular assembly like the House of Commons, or by the House of Lords. If we had an arbitrary Legislature—if we had a Minister of Justice responsible for drawing up acts of Parliament with his own hand, and having his whole mind zealously to apply to it—we might then expect that unity of construction and composition which would be desirable; but, instead of that, we had the subject of an act of Parliament thrown broadcast in the great popular assembly of the nation, where every man was entitled to express his own opinion, and endeavour to give effect to it. There might be a different opinion in the House of Commons from the House of Lords, so that it was a very difficult matter, indeed, to produce an act of Parliament. His honourable friend had proposed two remedies—first, that there should be a Minister of Justice, who should draw up bills and be responsible for them. But that could not supersede the province of the Legislature, in which all the leading provisions of the bill were discussed. You must have the forms of the House gone through. And if, in committee late in the session, a member proposed a measure, there might not be time for the Minister of Justice to prepare the draught of the bill before Parliament was prorogued. That happened, he was sorry to say, in Scotch legislation only too frequently. The hurry at the end of the session was very great. He thought it probable that to some extent the remedy might be applied. Then Dr. Barclay proposed that no act should be amended, but that the act shall be repealed and re-enacted. He quite agreed with the desirableness of that procedure; but Dr. Barclay did not take into account one great difficulty. Suppose an act of Parliament, in which there was great difference of opinion, had been fought through the House, and carried by narrow majorities with great difficulty, and it was found that one of the clauses did not work in consequence of some clerical error, next session were they to go through the whole of that again, and repeal the whole legislation after the measure had been discussed before on account of one clause? He thought Dr. Barclay would see that there was great difficulty in that. Although it would be exceedingly desirable to have the whole law in one statute, there were difficulties owing to the constitutional government under which we live, and these rules, although they were cumbersome, were yet in the main one of the safeguards for the stability of this great nation.

"Sir C. Rawlinson said, he thought if Dr. Barclay would look to the legislation of the last thirty years he would find that the system had not worked so badly after all. He thought they might say, notwithstanding the very amusing paper, that we should not at once alter the system, although by having a Minister of Justice much might be done to correct these small mistakes which were found in the legislation."

PHILLIPS'S LAW OF COPYRIGHT.

This day is published, in 8vo., price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT IN WORKS OF LITERATURE AND ART, and in the Application of Designs. With the Statutes relating thereto. By CHARLES PALMER PHILLIPS, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

The object of the author has been to write a book of moderate bulk, which would present a concise and connected statement of the whole law of copyright in this country.

This volume contains separate chapters on copyright before and after publication in literary and musical works—in the representation and performance of dramas and musical compositions—on the copyright of the Crown, and of certain Universities and Colleges—on copyright in lectures after public delivery—in published engravings—in paintings, drawings, and photographs—in sculpture—in designs (ornamental and useful)—lastly, on international copyright.

All the important judicial decisions and dicta, at law and in equity, upon the subject will, the author hopes, be found in the work, and in the Appendix are the statutes to which it may be necessary to refer.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, OCTOBER 31, 1863.

WE have recently had occasion (ante, p. 302) to review Mr. J. Fitzjames Stephen's work, entitled "A General View of the Criminal Law of England," a book written in a more philosophical spirit than legal treatises in general; in which he liberally praises the strong points of our criminal law, and exposes with much freedom several of its defects. This shews that the author has an opinion of his own, which, although we do not agree in all his strictures, renders his voice worthy of being heard on any proposed alteration in our system.

In one place, ch. 4, p. 105 et seq., Mr. Stephen points attention to the distinction which runs through the whole criminal law between offences which amount to felony and offences which are only misdemeanours, a subject, the rationale of which is not always understood, and which, if a reform of the criminal law should ever be undertaken, will require the well considered attention of the Legislature.

Considering the question in its broadest sense, and apart from nomenclature, we shall find that the laws of almost every country have divided offences into two great genera, the one comprising offences of the greater, and the other offences of the lesser nature. Thus, the civilians had their crimina and delicta (Matth. de Crim. Prolegom. cap. 1), expressions whence are evidently taken the crimes and délits of the French law, which are thus defined:—"L'infraction que les lois punissent des peines de police est une contravention. L'infraction que les lois punissent de peines correctionnelles est un délit. L'infraction que les lois punissent d'une peine afflictive et infamante est un crime." (Code Pénal, "Dispositions Préliminaires.") Death and hard labour for life stand at the head of the list of "peines afflictives and infamantes." (Id., liv. 1, § 6). And Mr. Livingston's celebrated Code of Louisiana, Book of Definitions, defines crime, "An offence the punishment of which, in the whole or in part, may be the forfeiture of any civil or political right, or hard labour, or for which hard labour is an alternative, to be inflicted at the discretion of the Court." Misdemeanour is defined, "Any offence less in degree than a crime." The law of England, as already stated, has its classification of offences into felonies and misdemeanours, and in this the law of Scotland agrees. (Paterson's Comp. of English and Scotch Law, § 950).

The common-law notion of felony seems to have been an offence which rendered the criminal no longer fit to exist among his fellow-men, and accordingly prescribed for it the punishment of death (with the exception of petit larceny—i. e. stealing a sum not exceeding 12*d.*—an offence abolished by the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, and the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), and added a forfeiture, which has been more or less extensive at the different periods of our law. Other offences were called misdemeanours. We have not thought it necessary to mention treason, for it may, for the present purpose, be looked on as an aggravated species of felony. And between felony and misdemeanour there are many other important distinctions. Thus, it is lawful to compound a misdemeanour, but not a felony. If at the common law a party was charged with misdemeanour, and the evidence disclosed that his conduct amounted to felony, he must have been acquitted, and a fresh indictment preferred for the felony; a principle which has been considerably modified, but not altogether abolished, by the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12.

Another very important distinction between treason and felony, and which Mr. Stephen (p. 110) most justly designates "a substantial distinction," remains to be mentioned—namely, that where a felony has been committed, any person may arrest the perpetrator, without waiting for the intervention of the officers of justice. A few moments' reflection will convince any person, that while in general private individuals ought not to be intrusted with the right of arresting other private individuals for infractions of the law, some offences are of such a character, either so heinous in themselves or so dangerous to society, that the necessity for the instantaneous arrest of the criminal overbears all other considerations.

In the course of time sundry acts which were not offences at the common law, such as sodomy, with-craft, &c., and others which were only misdemeanours by that law, such as various species of forgery, &c., were made felonies. And since the punishment of death has been removed from almost every felony, transportation, penal servitude, or imprisonment with hard labour, have been substituted for it. But as all these latter may, by force of various modern statutes, be inflicted for many misdemeanours, the punishment for an offence at the present day affords a very imperfect index to the class under which it ranges itself. Indeed, our legislators seem doing their utmost to confound all ideas on the subject; which we consider a great evil, as unsettling the minds of men relative to the quality of offences.

The consequence of this confusion is to introduce flagrant inconsistencies into the law. Thus, it seems a most incongruous thing, that a man may arrest a person whom he sees committing larceny to any amount, however small, because that is a felony, though punishable at most by penal servitude for three years (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 4), but may not do so for an overt act of conspiring to murder, because it is only a misdemeanour, although punishable with ten years' penal servitude (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4). "If," remarks Mr. Stephen, ch. 4, p. 106, "the law of forfeiture were ever enforced, which it is not, the distinction between felony and misdemeanour would produce revolting injustice. It would be monstrous that one man should forfeit his property for stealing 1s., and that another should retain his, though he had obtained 10,000*l.* by conspiracy, false pretences, or perjury. Again: it is equally absurd, that in the case of a trifling theft, the prisoner should have the right of peremptorily challenging twenty jurors, whilst a man accused of perjury might see his bitterest enemy in the jury box, and be unable to get rid of him as a juror, unless he could give judicial proof of his enmity."

The laws of France and of Louisiana, as we have seen, make the character of the crime dependent on the nature of the punishment inflicted. The idea is a good one, and yet it might be difficult to carry it out in all cases. Suppose the infliction of penal servitude were constituted the test of felony, as a "peine afflictive et infamante;" it would be hard to deny that perjury and attempts to commit unnatural offences were infamous crimes, and yet it is a grave question whether they ought to be ranked as felonies. But whatever the true solution of the difficulty, it is impossible to doubt that the present state of things calls for remedy.

CORRIGENDA.—In the leading article of last week, p. 371, col. 1, line 6 from bottom, erase "or;" p. 372, col. 2, line 25 from top, for "it" read "them;" Id., line 14 from bottom, for "friend" read "fiend."

THE JURIST.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 7, 1863.

LORD ST. LEONARDS, in the preface to one of his able works, by which he has done so much to collect together and systematise various important branches of the law, points out, we think, very clearly, the mode by which a digest or code of our law is eventually to be attained; although, perhaps, he had not a code or digest of an authoritative kind, promulgated by legislative enactment, in his mind.

After stating that he had endeavoured to correct and clear up whatever his own observation or the sagacity of others had pointed out as erroneous, or even ambiguous, in the first edition of his work, he observes, that "he believes that a series of treatises, written with this object, would, with such correction as the Legislature only can make, and which can seldom be well directed unless a comprehensive view can be readily taken of the whole subject, tend to place the law . . . upon a better footing than at present. The authorities are not likely to harmonise unless they are collected, and the entire subject examined. It is then that discrepancies and departures from principle are for the first time observed."

No doubt, what Lord St. Leonards seems to contemplate is the possibility of a series of text-books being written upon every subject, and the great advantage which would accrue to the law, as a science, from such a complete examination of the cases, and the principles upon which they proceed, as would be the necessary consequence of such an examination. But unfortunately, however useful it might be to have a text-book upon every branch of the law, it is not likely that authors will be found to write, or book-sellers to publish, works upon any subject, save upon those which are likely to have a large sale, and to pay them for any risk, actual or imaginary, of the publication. If, in fact, there was a well-written text-book upon every legal subject, we should have a digest and code of the whole law; for a well-written text-book is, in reality, a code and digest, the propositions or rules of law forming the code, the cases cited as illustrations, or in support of them, being the digest.

The text-books, however, that have been written upon the law of England, although not forming a complete code or digest, have been of the greatest benefit both to our legislators and practitioners. To our legislators, because they have from time to time pointed out the defects in our law; and to practitioners, because without them they would never have been able, save at the expense of great loss of time, to sift out the law from the numerous reports and statutes amongst which it is scattered.

Of course, if proper encouragement had ever been given to the writers of text-books—if those rewards were conferred upon them which are given so profusely to mere political adventurers and others, hanging loosely on to the skirts of the law, but attached to other pursuits, which enable them to make themselves in some manner or other useful to those in power, we might have, as the French had before the compilation of their code, a complete series of treatises which would have served as a substantial basis for a code or digest of the whole body of the English law.

There are many persons who doubtless think that matters may go on as well now as they have done heretofore; that the legal profession may trust to text-writers collecting into treatises the whole law upon every subject of any great utility, and that consequently the digest or code proposed by the Lord Chancellor is at any rate not a work of necessity. Such persons, however, do not sufficiently bear in mind the enormous accumulation that has taken place in the materials for a digest during the last fifty years, which is still increasing, and will increase, until some official steps are taken to systematise and simplify the whole body of the law. This, we conceive, can best be done by an authoritative digest of every branch of the law, according to the scheme shadowed forth, rather than fully enunciated, by the Lord Chancellor in his speech of last session.

If this great work were well done, everything that is valuable might be extracted from the reports of decided cases; and whenever they were in any respect found to be ambiguous or conflicting, the Legislature, as observed by Lord St. Leonards, might make the proper corrections. So, whenever the authorities, although harmonious, laid down a rule of law, either inconvenient or oppressive, it might be altered by express enactment.

We entirely agree with Lord St. Leonards, that until the whole law is examined in this manner, Parliament will always be apt to do more harm than good by most of its alterations, because it so often proceeds upon an imperfect knowledge of the subject.

One objection raised to the Lord Chancellor's plan of a digest is, that it cannot be complete; unless not only the most antiquated reports are all comprehended within it, but also all manuscript cases lying hidden in our public libraries, or in the hands of private individuals, and even the records of the various courts, containing the decrees or orders made in cases which are not comprised either in printed or manuscript reports.

It seems to us, however, that such an objection is quite idle; for if a digest or code can be formed out of the materials pointed out by the Lord Chancellor, or perhaps by the inclusion of some few more which he may, at first sight, appear inclined to omit (and we believe that it may), all others are merely superfluous. The objectors to the digest on this ground might as well wish to ransack the papers of the late Lord Campbell for the Nisi Prius cases which he had carefully put by in a separate drawer, marked as "bad law."

What we want is, not a digest of all the cases ever decided, for many cases, doubtless, though never appealed from, have been badly decided, but of all the cases worthy of being considered as precedents. Of course it may be said, that the choice of precedents ought not to be left to any body of commissioners. In answer to this, we may observe, that the choice of cases to form the subject of reports, which, practically speaking, have been the only precedents for the guidance of our courts (few manuscript cases being now ever cited) has been left to a few individual reporters, so that it cannot well be objected that the same liberty of selection should not, to a certain extent, be delegated to the persons chosen to digest the laws of England. The result, moreover, of whose labour may, and doubtless will, be kept under the control of Parliament.

When the digest of the Roman Law was framed during the reign, and by the order, of Justinian, it is clear that the jurists employed by him did not use all the materials to which they had access; they evidently made use only of such selections from them as they considered sufficient for the purpose of framing that great body of jurisprudence upon which the laws of the civilised world may be fairly said to be almost universally founded.

By resorting to somewhat the same plan, but with an improved arrangement, by avoiding the haste with which the Roman Digest was composed, and the effects of which are but too apparent, there is no reason why the digest of the English law, as proposed by the Lord Chancellor, may not be in every respect superior to that of Justinian; and from the extent of those countries where the English tongue is spoken, or the British empire extends, its influence may be not only more extensive, but more permanent.

CORRIGENDUM.—In the leading article of last week there is an error, apparent, indeed, from the context. In the first line of p. 384, for "treason and felony," read "felony and misdemeanour."

MR. DANIEL, Q. C., AND THE REPORTING SYSTEM.

MR. W. T. S. DANIEL, Q. C., whose project for reform of the reporting system we noticed in a former number (ante, p. 349), has drawn up the following requisition to the Attorney-General on the subject, which will be presented when a sufficient number of signatures shall be affixed to it:—

"To Sir Roundell Palmer, Knight, Her Majesty's Attorney-General.

"We, the undersigned members of the English Bar, request that you will be pleased to call a meeting of the Bar, at such time and place as you shall think proper, for the purpose of ascertaining the opinion of the Bar as to the existing system of law reporting, with a view to an amendment thereof.

ENGLISH AND IRISH LAW AND CHANCERY COMMISSION.

A ROYAL COMMISSION was issued on the 13th December, 1861, directed to the Master of the Rolls in England (Sir J. Romilly); the Lord Justice of Appeal in Chancery in Ireland (the Right Hon. Francis Blackburne); the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas in Ireland (the Right Hon. James Henry Monahan); the Right Hon. Abraham Brewster; the Right Hon. Joseph Napier; Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood; Mr. Justice Willes; Baron Hughes (Ireland); the late Attorney-General for England (Sir W. Atherton); the Attorney-General for Ireland (the Right Hon. Thomas O'Hagan); Sir Roundell Palmer, Knt. (the Solicitor, now the Attorney-General for England); the Solicitor-General for Ireland (James Anthony Lawson, Esq.); Sir Hugh McCairns; G. M. Giffard, Esq., Q. C.; E. B. Follett, Esq.; and R. J. T. Orpen, Esq., to make: "A diligent and full inquiry into and to report upon the following matters, with a view to reduce costs to suitors and the expenditure of the public money, and to assimilate, so far as may be practicable, the administration of justice in England and Ireland—

"1. The constitution, establishment, practice, procedure, and fees of the superior courts of common law in Ireland.

"2. The differences between the constitution and the forms of practice, procedure, and fees of the Courts of Chancery of England and of Ireland."

Six to be a quorum. By a subsequent commission, dated the 8th July, 1862, the number of the quorum was reduced to three.

The Commissioners have made their First Report, bearing date the 27th July, 1863, which is accompanied by a number of statements and appendices forming a blue book of some size. This Report contains much valuable information relative to the differences between the laws of England and Ireland; and the Commissioners state—

"We have come to a unanimous resolution, that the system of practice and procedure of the courts of common law of England and Ireland should as far as practicable be assimilated.

"In adopting this resolution, we feel that we are only in effect restoring that substantial uniformity which existed in the course and practice of the superior courts of common law in both countries from the reign of King John to that of King William the Fourth."

We propose to state the recommendations of the Commissioners in this Report, referring such of our readers as are desirous to know the reasons on which those recommendations are founded to the Report itself.

Under the head—

I.—COMMON LAW.—PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

iii.—English Common-law Procedure Acts, 1852, 1854, and 1860.

We are of opinion—

1. That pleas of payment and set-off, and other pleadings capable of being construed distributively, should be taken distributively in Ireland as they are in England, pursuant to sect. 75 of the English Common-law Procedure Act, 1852.

2. That the English practice of not staying execution in ejectment, under the English Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, sect. 215, without security by recognisance against waste, should be adopted in Ireland.

3. That the provisions of the English Common-law Procedure Acts, 1852, sects. 42–45, and 1854, sect. 32, by which questions of fact may, after writ issued and before judgment, by consent and leave of a judge, be raised without pleadings, and may be entered and tried as any issue joined in an ordinary action, should be extended to Ireland.

4. That sect. 60 of the Common-law Procedure Acts, 1854, should be extended to Ireland, providing that a judgment creditor may apply to examine orally the judgment debtor, as to any debts owing to him, before a Master or other person appointed by the court or judge.

The Act of 1860 should, we think, be amended in the matters hereinafter noticed, but subject to such amendments.

We are of opinion—

5. That it is desirable to extend to Ireland the provisions of the English Common-law Procedure Act of 1860.

iv.—Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853.—Provisions proposed to be repealed.

We are of opinion—

1. That the English system of writ and declaration should be adopted in Ireland, instead of the summons and plaint.

2. That the right of a party to plead and demur by leave of the Court should be extended to all pleadings, as in England.

3. That the abolition of the general issue by the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 69, should be repealed, and the general issue, as regulated by pleading rules 6, 15, 16, 20, Trin. T., 1853, in England, should be adopted in Ireland.

4. That the mode of raising the issues in fact in Ireland should be assimilated to the mode of raising such issues in England.

5. That the provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, enabling replevin to be joined with other personal actions should be repealed, and the law assimilated to that of England.

6. That no benefit has arisen from the provision for allowing equitable defences to be pleaded in ejectment in Ireland, and that such provision should be repealed.

7. That the Irish statute, giving treble damages, in case of over-marking an execution (Common-law Procedure Act, I., 1853, sect. 129), should be repealed, and the law assimilated to that of England.

8. That the provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 139, providing that payment by an execution debtor to the sheriff or gaoler should entitle the debtor to be discharged from custody, should be repealed, and the law assimilated to that of England.

9. That the provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 33, requiring notice of issuing writs against corporations to be inserted in "The Dublin Gazette," and in a local newspaper, should be repealed, and the law assimilated to that of England.

10. That the English practice, by which notice of misjoinder of plaintiffs is not required, and an amendment may be made at the trial, is to be preferred to the Irish practice.

11. That the English practice, by which neither the leave of the Court for a plea in abatement of non-joinder of defendants or plaintiffs, nor any order to amend is required, and non-joinder of defendants can only be taken advantage of by plea in abatement, is to be preferred to the Irish practice, as established by the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sects. 84, 87–89.

12. That the English practice under Rule 21, Hil. T., 1853, by which a defendant has the same time for pleading after the delivery of particulars under a judge's order, as he had at the date of the order, unless the order should otherwise provide, should be extended to Ireland (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 46).

By the Irish Common-law Procedure Act of 1853, the venue in all personal actions, which includes many which would be local in England, is made transitory in Ireland; on the other hand, actions by and against assignees of lessees have long been by express enactment transitory in Ireland, whilst they are local in England. These actions might advantageously be made transitory in England, and the venue in all other classes of actions which are now local in England ought to be local in Ireland.

We are of opinion—

13. That in all actions (except actions by and against assignees of lessees) which are now local in England, the venue should be local in Ireland.

v.—Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853.—Provisions proposed to be extended to England.

We are of opinion that the following provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, should be extended to England:—

1. That a renewed writ should not be available to prevent the operation of the Statutes of Limitation, unless the renewal shall be had by leave of the court or a judge, on an affidavit to satisfy the court or a judge that reasonable diligence was used to effect service of the writ (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 28–30).

2. That debts accruing after the commencement of an action may be pleaded in bar of the further maintenance of the action (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 40).

3. That a husband may add claims in his own right in any action brought by husband and wife, for any cause of action accruing to the wife, and in respect of which she is necessarily joined as a co-plaintiff (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 55).

4. That a judgment should not be arrested, stayed, or reversed, by reason that the plaintiff or defendant, being twenty-one years, sued or defended by attorney (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 122).

5. That a memorandum may be entered of part payment and satisfaction on the record of judgments (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sects. 143, 144).

6. That an heir, or personal representative of any party, plaintiff or defendant, may (for the purpose of bringing error) enter a suggestion of the death of such party, and that he is such legal representative (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 167).

7. That the plaintiff may have the amount of mesne rates ascertained at the trial of an ejectment (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 202).

We are also of opinion—

8. That the Irish practice of more speedy execution after judgment is to be preferred (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 127).

9. That the Irish rule, that if the defendant is resident out of the jurisdiction, and has some agent or manager resident in Ireland, the Court may authorise service to be substituted on such agent (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 34), should be extended (mutatis mutandis) to the case of a defendant having an agent or manager resident in England.

10. That a defendant applying for security for costs against an Irish plaintiff suing in England, should be required to make an affidavit of merits (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 52).

In the case of suggestions of facts upon motion for arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, it is the practice in England to require the party insisting on the objection to satisfy the Court that there has been an omission of some substantial matter of fact, whereby he may have been prejudiced in the merits of his case, but there is no express enactment to that effect. In Ireland this practice was provided for by the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 16. It will be proper, therefore, for sake of uniformity, to pass a declaratory enactment on the subject, applicable to both parts of the United Kingdom.

We are, therefore, of opinion—

That the following provision of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, should be extended to England.

11. That in motions to arrest judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, the party insisting on the objection must satisfy the Court that there has been an omission of some substantial matter of fact, whereby he may have been prejudiced in the merits of his case (Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 163).

vi.—Provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1856, and other Statutes proposed to be extended to England.

We are of opinion—

1. That the provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, extended by the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1856, sects. 25 to 30, to criminal cases, should be so extended to courts exercising criminal jurisdiction in England.

2. That it is desirable that the power peculiar to Ireland to make an order directing temporary bars in ejectment to be removed in any case in which it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Court that an order to the same effect would be pronounced by the Court of Chancery, upon an application made to it for that purpose (Common-law Procedure Act, 1856, sect. 89), should be extended to England.

3. That the landlord in replevin should have judgment against the plaintiff for the arrears of rent ascertained on the inquiry, whether the value of the goods and chattels distrained shall amount to so much or not. This should be accompanied by a provision, that nothing therein contained should alter or affect the liability of the sureties in the replevin bond (Common-law Procedure Act, 1856, sect. 101).

4. That the statutable provisions in Ireland by which the venue in actions by and against assignees of lessees is transitory should be extended to England.

vii.—English Practice and Procedure proposed to be extended to Ireland.

We recommend—

1. That the English rule, that several counts on the same cause of action should not be allowed unless a judge shall think them proper for determining the real question in controversy between the parties on its merits (Rules 1, 2, 3, Trinity Term, 1853), should be extended to Ireland.

2. That the consequences of taking a body under a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum should be the same in Ireland as in England, and that the provisions of the Irish statutes, 33 Geo. 3, c. 42, and 35 Geo. 3, c. 30, which render the law on this subject in Ireland different from that in England, should be repealed.

3. That the practice in England of the Court of Error, giving interest for delay of execution, whether the judgment is or is not affirmed, should be extended to Ireland.

4. That the judges in Ireland should be authorised to settle a schedule regulating the expenses and remuneration to be allowed to witnesses.

5. That in all cases of arrest under a judge's fiat or order, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, a copy of the affidavit or affidavits upon which such fiat was granted should be lodged with the sheriff with the writ, and should by him be served on the defendant on his arrest, and that the plaintiff should be required to serve his writ at the time, or within three days after the arrest, and proceed to trial on the first opportunity.

6. That the powers given to courts of law in England in ejectment by mortgagee against mortgagor, to compel mortgagee to reconvey the mortgaged premises, and deliver up the title deeds, in case the mortgagor should pay or bring into court the mortgage money, interest, and costs, be extended to Ireland.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 14, 1863.

THE case of The Alexandra (The Attorney-General v. Sillim and Others) has been brought before the Court of Exchequer, the Attorney-General having abandoned the bill of exceptions tendered at the trial by his predecessor in office, and obtained a rule nisi for a new trial on the ground of misdirection, and the verdict being against the evidence; it being understood that should the decision be against him, he will take the case by appeal to a superior tribunal.

It is not our intention to discuss the important legal question raised in this case; but we propose to direct attention to one which it incidentally suggests, namely, the correctness of the existing practice relative to the mode of evidencing to a court in banc what has taken place at a trial, including the points raised by counsel, and the summing up of the judge. In the present instance, as in many others, a discrepancy exists between the counsel and the judge—between the Lord Chief Baron, by whom the cause was tried, and the Attorney-General, as counsel for the Crown,—with respect to the manner in which the jury were directed; and the Court has already intimated its intention to follow the usual course, by taking the judge's report as conclusive.

The principle that, whether the decision of a tribunal be well or ill founded as regards the law or the merits of the cases that come before it, its authority is conclusive on the question as to what it did in point of fact decide, seems of universal jurisprudence. For this reason it is that the law does not allow any averment against a record; and a good illustration may be seen in the ancient laws of Wales, which, although they in general required two witnesses for the proof of a fact, contained this provision, "If one of two parties, between whom a lawsuit has taken place, deny the judgment, and the other acknowledge it, the statement of the judge is in that case final respecting his judgment." (Venedotian Code, book 2, ch. 4, § 4; Dime-tian Code, book 2, ch. 5, § 4).

It is probably in furtherance of this principle that our law, or practice at least, will receive no evidence to contradict the statement of the judge by whom a cause has been tried as to what took place at the trial. This we conceive is more correct than saying, as is sometimes said, that the Court will not receive evidence of anything which is not on the judge's notes; for if a judge, while declaring that he did not make any note of a supposed fact, admits, nevertheless, that it may have occurred, the Court will listen to other evidence of it, such as the notes on the briefs of counsel, &c., and sometimes even the notes of a short-hand writer. Indeed, in practice, judges rarely take down the whole of the evidence in the cases before them, especially when it is voluminous, or consisting chiefly of written documents; nor is it desirable, were it even possible, that they should do so—such a duty would distract their attention from the far more important ones of watching the demeanour, and judging the credibility, of the witnesses, and directing the jury. A defence of the existing practice will be found in the case of Gibbs v. Pike (9 M. & W. 351, 360; 6 Jur., O.S., part 1, pp. 465, 467). There a rule nisi for a new trial had been granted on the ground of the improper rejection of certain evidence, as to the tendering of which the note of Lord Abinger, C. B., by whom the cause was tried, was silent. On argument, the rule was discharged, and Lord Abinger, in delivering his judgment, said—"I cannot agree to the principle of taking the statements of counsel on such a point as that. What record can you properly appeal to for what took place at the trial except the judge's notes? It is always in the power of counsel, who is dissatisfied at the rejection of a piece of evidence, to tender a bill of exceptions; or he may first ask the judge to make a note of the tender, and if the request is denied, then tender his bill of exceptions. But in the course of a trial, many points of evidence are suggested, on which the judge gives a hasty opinion; and if counsel do not press the point, or ask the judge to make a note of it, what is the Court in banc to do, when the question of the admissibility of the evidence is brought before them? If they depart from the judge's note as the record of what took place at the trial, what a wide field of discussion would be opened! They would have to take, in the first instance, whatever the objecting counsel might suggest, whose representation of the facts would, in all probability, be denied by the counsel on the other side, and the Court would be plunged into a sea of difficulty. Is it not better to take the judge's note as an authority? and when a particular fact is not found there, counsel ought not afterwards to raise a question upon it." Alderson, B., added—"I quite agree with my Lord Chief Baron on the main point in this case, and also as to the necessity of counsel distinctly making a formal tender to the judge at Nisi Prius of evidence which he has declared inadmissible. Such a course puts the fact beyond all dispute at a subsequent period, and saves all the difficulties which might arise from a contest between the opposite counsel as to what took place at the trial."

While the arguments used in this case are unanswerable as shewing the inconvenience that would result from Courts relying on the statements of counsel as the proper evidence of what has taken place at a trial, it may still be made a question, and this case of The Alexandra may, perhaps, be relied on as an illustration, whether the practice on the subject is altogether satisfactory. Many persons have suggested the appointment of an officer, under the name of a notary, registrar, greffier, &c., to make a verbatim report of all that takes place at a trial. The expense would, no doubt, be considerable, but that should not be weighed for a moment, if the proposed plan could be shewn an improvement in the administration of justice. That it would be so is, however, a debateable point, and it may be remembered, that the bill on which the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86, for regulating the practice in lunacy was founded, contained a provision, afterwards struck out by the House of Commons, that a shorthand writer should attend every commission of lunacy, the transcript of whose notes should be admissible as evidence. Without, however, discussing this question in its general form, and confining ourselves to that portion of it which relates to the charges of judges to juries, we observe, that before instituting such an officer, it would be necessary to determine in the first instance, whether his notes should be taken as conclusive evidence of what took place at the trial. If not, the difficulty is only shifted, not got rid of; and it may fairly be urged, that if infallibility in the narration of those facts is to be attached to any quarter, the judge is the most fitting depository of it. Still, we cannot shut our eyes to this, that the notes of judges differ amazingly in fullness and clearness; and must express our opinion, that more frequent recourse to the notes of a short-hand writer to establish what the judge did say to the jury, so long as those notes are not used to contradict what he, ex cathedra, reports himself to have said, would be desirable. This is particularly the case where the direction of a judge is attacked, not on the ground that he finally put the wrong points to the jury, but that, in the course of his summing up, he made observations limiting or qualifying those points in such a manner as to amount to misdirection; for there is no principle better established, or more in accordance with the obvious dictates of justice, than that in order to decide on the legal soundness of a judge's charge, it must be taken all together. The judge who remembers perfectly well, or even writes down in his notes, the questions he put to the jury, may have altogether overlooked expressions limiting or qualifying them. Suppose, in an action for trespass to land, to which the defendant pleads leave and license, which is traversed, the judge were to tell the jury, that the question for them to determine was whether, on the occasion in question, the defendant entered the land by leave and license of the plaintiff. Taken simpliciter, it would be impossible to complain of this, or to say that the judge had not put the proper question to the jury; but suppose it further appeared, that in the course of his summing up he had told them that the leave and license, in order to be effectual, must be by deed, the introduction of this erroneous position would render his charge a misdirection. Many similar cases can be imagined.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—The Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, seems to affect a change in the law as hitherto administered by the Court of Admiralty, in cases of collision arising through the default of both vessels, to which it is important that the attention of the public should be immediately called.

In such cases, where there were cross suits, the ancient rule of the Admiralty Court was to apportion the damage equally between the parties. More recently, when powers were given by statute to frame regulations for the purpose of promoting the safety of navigation, such statutes contained what may be termed a disabling clause, providing, that in case it should appear that a collision was occasioned by the non-observance on the part of any vessel of any of the regulations framed in pursuance of the provisions of the particular act, the owner of the vessel guilty of such non-observance should be debarred from recovering any compensation in respect of the damage so sustained, unless it appeared that a departure from the rule was necessary under the circumstances.

The modification thus engrafted by the statutes upon the ancient rule, has hitherto been strictly acted upon in the Court of Admiralty. Thus, where one of the colliding vessels had been guilty of a breach of the statutory regulations, and the other, though negligent, had violated a rule of seamanship only, as distinguished from a statutory rule, the former was, by the operation of the statute, prevented from recovering at all, while the latter was entitled to recover half her damages in accordance with the ancient rule. (See The Hansfell, 1 Spinks, 269; The Aurora, 1 Lush. 327).

So, where both vessels had been guilty of a breach of statutory regulations, it was held, by the Privy Council, that by operation of the statute, neither could maintain a suit against the other. (The James, Swab. 60; The Unity, Id. 101).

The act of 1862 repeals, amongst others, the disabling section (298) of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, and merely provides, that when there has been such a breach of the statutory rule, as under that and the former acts would have debarred a vessel from recovering at all, it shall be made a presumption of law that such vessel was in fault for the collision. This seems to abolish the distinction hitherto so strictly maintained between the consequences of a violation of a statutory and a mere ordinary rule of navigation, and to call into operation the ancient practice of apportioning the damage in all cases alike.

WILLIAM POTTER.

4, Paper-buildings, Nov. 5, 1863.

OKANE v. OKANE AND VISCOUNT PALMERSTON.

A PERSON of the name of Okane, and not Duncane, as at first supposed, has commenced proceedings in the Divorce Court against his wife, praying for a dissolution of their marriage on the ground of her adultery, in which the Prime Minister, Viscount Palmerston, appears as the co-respondent, the damages being laid, we believe, as high as 30,000*l*. We understand that one of the defences to be relied on by the respondent will be a denial of the validity of her marriage with the petitioner.

It having been suggested in some of the newspapers that this matter was likely to be compromised, the following letter was addressed to The Star by the solicitor for the petitioner:—

"Sir,—I beg to inform you that there is no foundation whatever for the statement made in your paper of the 31st ult., viz.—'that an arrangement had been entered into between the petitioner and the respondent in a certain important suit now instituted in the Divorce Court, and that the terms of such arrangement had been agreed to.'

"I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

"THOS. WELLS,

"Solicitor for the Petitioner.

"47, Moorgate-street, London, E. C., Nov. 2."

Two days later, another letter from the attorney of the respondent appeared in The Standard, addressed to the editor of that paper:—

"Sir,—Having just read the 'sensation' leaders in your evening edition of to-day, and in The Evening Star of yesterday, under the above heading, I am compelled to break silence, by declaring, as the solicitor for the respondent, that I believe the whole of the statements in the petition to be untrue, as my client solemnly declares them to be. As to the noble co-respondent, he is in highly respectable hands, who are quite able to take care of their client's honour; and I should not have thought it necessary to say a word on behalf of the respondent, but for the manner in which the case has been most unjustifiably canvassed on the faith of the mere filing of a petition, of which not one word has been or (as I believe) can be proved to be true. I have been always taught, that common justice demanded an absence of comment on a case until after the trial. How has it been observed in this instance?

"Now, Sir, in reference to your leader of to-day, I would beg to ask you whether you can in any way justify your reference to the co-respondent as 'the hoary defendant?' The very words seem to assume guilt on his part.

"Then you say, 'a respectable firm of solicitors vouch that the pending suit in the Divorce Court will, under no circumstances, be compromised.' Now, first, who are the respectable firm of solicitors? Are you aware, Sir, that the 'firm,' otherwise the attorney to the petitioner, is the Mr. Wells who daily advertises relief 'To the embarrassed,' by means of the court, in connexion with a Mr. Weston, who, I believe, is an accountant at the same address? Mr. Wells advertises that he will obtain 'protection from 5*l*., payable by instalments, and 'without publicity.' Also, that 'divorce cases are confidentially conducted.' The present case seems 'confidentially' known to the whole world, as Mr. Wells at once rushed into print to inform the public that no compromise had been made in the case.

"Now, I should be glad to know who set the report of a compromise afloat at all? Most assuredly not the respondent nor her solicitor! She emphatically denies all the allegations in the petition; and Mr. Wells, in his letter of denial, might and ought to have added, that no compromise, or suggestion of a compromise, had come to him from the respondent or her advisers; she will quietly await the petitioner's exposure of himself when the case comes into court.

"I have only to state, in conclusion, that the petitioner neither is a clergyman, as stated, nor (to use your words) does he wear the robes 'of the Christian ministry;' but, if I am not misinformed, he is now in the service of the Weston alluded to in Mr. Wells's daily advertising programme.

"I am Sir, your very obedient servant,

"CHARLES HORSLEY,

"Solicitor to the Respondent.

"2, Staple-inn, Nov. 4."

While the the practice of writing sensation articles upon matters which are sub judice is most deeply reprehensible in any case, and especially in such a case as the present, the solicitors of the petitioner and respondent seem to us in the above letters to have given themselves needless trouble. Far the more decorous and dignified course would have been that, which we observe has been adopted by the solicitor of the co-respondent, of ignoring all gossip, and allowing the reputations of themselves and their clients to be judged by the event of the suit.

THE WEEKLY REPORTER.

MESSRS. H. F. BRUTON & A. EDGAR, the editors of the first volume of The Weekly Reporter, having complained of certain passages in the recent pamphlet by Mr. W. T. S. Daniel on Law Reporting, Mr. Daniel has, on explanation and further reflection, expressed himself satisfied that the language used by him was (unintentionally) unjust to those gentlemen, and has declared that nothing was further from his meaning than to impute to them any contravention of honour and truthfulness.

NEW RULES.

In pursuance of the provisions contained in the 16th section of stat. 22 & 23 Vict. c. 21, intituled "An Act to regulate the Office of Queen's Remembrancer, and to amend the Practice and Procedure on the Revenue Side of the Court of Exchequer," it is ordered that the following provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, be extended, applied, and adapted to the revenue side of the Court of Exchequer, and also that the following rules as to giving bail in cases of appeal shall be in force on the revenue side of the Court of Exchequer:—The sections referred to are the 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48 of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854.

Notice of appeal shall be a stay of execution, provided that within eight days after the decision complained of, or before execution delivered to the sheriff, bail to pay the sum recovered and costs, and to pay costs, when adjudged to be given, in like manner and to the same amount as bail in error, is required to be given under the rules of this court, made on the 22nd day of June, 1860, or as near thereto as may be applicable; provided that such bail shall not be necessary to stay execution in cases where the appellant is the Crown, the Attorney-General, on behalf of the Crown, or the Prince of Wales, or the Duke of Cornwall for the time being.

The foregoing rules shall come into operation and take effect forthwith, and apply to every matter and proceeding now pending.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to new Insurers EIGHTY PER CENT. of the Profits, at Quinquennial Divisions, or a low Rate of Premium without participation of Profits.

Since the establishment of the Company in 1821, the amount of Profits allotted to the Assured has exceeded in Cash value 660,000l., which represents equivalent Reversionary Bonuses of 1,058,000l.

After the Division of Profits at Christmas, 1859, the Life Assurances in force, with existing Bonuses thereon, amounted to upwards of 4,730,000l., the Income from the Life Branch 207,000l. per annum, and the Life Assurance Fund, independent of the Capital, exceeded 1,618,000l.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property at home and abroad at moderate rates.

No expense is incurred in effecting a new Insurance beyond the payment of the Annual Premium and Duty, when the Premium amounts to 5s.

Claims liberally and promptly settled.

Applications for Prospectuses and Agencies to be made to the Secretary.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 21, 1863.

THE Law Amendment Society and the Juridical Society have each held their first meetings for the season 1863-4. On the 9th inst. the former appointed a special committee, "to consider what action should be taken with reference to the proposal of bringing together into one place or neighbourhood all the superior courts of judicature, with the offices attached thereto;" and on the 16th inst. the latter occupied itself with the discussion of a paper on "the law relating to nuisances to air and water;" the law respecting the former of which is in a state, to say the least, anything but satisfactory.

It was formerly thought—and the law is so laid down in 2 Bl. Com. 402—that if a man comes to a place where there is a nuisance, it must be looked on as of his own seeking, and he has no right of action against those who cause the nuisance; but this doctrine is now exploded, as appears from several cases, both ancient and modern, which will be found collected in Gale on Easements, 389 et seq., 3rd ed., by Willes. Still we cannot help doubting whether those authorities have not carried too far the principle involved in them. It seems a strong thing to say, that a stranger may purchase a dwelling-house in Birmingham or Wolverhampton, and suppress, as nuisances to his comfortable habitation of it, every neighbouring manufacture for which a user of full twenty years cannot be shewn.

It is, however, to the case of Hole v. Barlow (4 C. B., N. S., 334; 27 L. J., C. P., 207; 4 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 1019), and some consequent upon it, that we must look for the chief cause of the existing confusion in the law on this subject. That was an action for nuisance, in burning bricks on the defendant's land, near the dwelling-house of the plaintiff; and Byles, J., before whom it was tried, in addressing the jury, said—"I apprehend the law to be this, that no action lies for the use, the reasonable use, of a lawful trade in a convenient and proper place, even though some one may suffer annoyance from its being so carried on." This ruling was upheld by the Court in banc. After Crowder, J., had delivered his judgment, Willes, J., said—"The common-law right which every proprietor of a dwelling-house has to have the air uncontaminated and unpolluted, is subject to this qualification, that necessities may arise for an interference with that right pro bono publico, to this extent, that such interference be in respect of a matter essential to the business of life, and be conducted in a reasonable and proper manner, and in a reasonable and proper place. And this is not without analogy. Every man has a right to enjoy his character untainted and uncontaminated by the breath of slander: but that right is subject to the rule as to privileged communications, which justifies and permits a reasonable publication of defamatory matter, even though it should amount to a charge of felony. So, every man has a right to the enjoyment of his land: but, in the event of a foreign invasion, the Queen may take the land for the purpose of setting up defences thereon for the general good of the nation. In these and such like cases, private convenience must yield to public necessity. It seems to me that we shall be only acting upon that principle in discharging this rule." The report in the Law Journal agrees with the above; but in The Jurist the judgment of Willes, J., is given thus:—"I am of the same opinion, and on the same grounds. The rule laid down by Comyns, C. B., that every man has a right to have air unpolluted is qualified by this limitation, that the interference is not done in the ordinary business of life, and in a reasonable and proper manner, and a reasonable and proper place, or of necessity pro bono publico. That is not without analogy, as in the case of a man's right not to have his character assailed, or to have his liberty, which rights are limited by public convenience and necessity, and they are liable to be invaded pro bono publico—the former in the case of a privileged communication, and the latter for the service of the country. This shews that a man has no right to his property except to the extent which the law gives it him. So far it is necessary that we should support the rule laid down, and we do."

According to the report in the Common Bench Reports, Byles, J., said nothing; but according to those in the Law Journal and The Jurist, he concurred in the judgment; and all agree in attributing to him, during the argument, the following observation, which throws much light on the whole subject:—"What I meant to say, was, that the circumstance of the thing being done in a convenient and proper place would justify some degree of annoyance. I had the passage in Comyns' Digest in my mind at the time."

After this arose the important case of Bamford v. Turnley (8 B. & S. 62; 31 L. J., Q. B., 286; 9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 377), which was an action for a nuisance arising from the burning of bricks on the defendant's land near to the plaintiff's house. It appeared that the defendant's land and the land on which the plaintiff's house stood were portions of an estate which had been sold in lots as building land; and in the particulars it was stated that there was abundance of brick earth and gravel, which, with other advantages, presented an advantageous opportunity of carrying out safe and profitable building operations; and it also appeared that bricks had previously been made on the spot where the plaintiff's house stood. Perhaps these special circumstances distinguish this case from the former, for it might be contended, that whatever the general law of nuisance, both parties took their several portions of this land with the understanding that they might be used for the purpose of burning bricks. Cockburn, C. J., before whom the cause was tried, intimated that the case came within the principle laid down in Hole v. Barlow, and directed the jury accordingly; upon which a verdict was by arrangement entered for the defendant, with leave to move to set it aside. The Court in banc having upheld this ruling, the plaintiff appealed to the Exchequer Chamber; the majority of which, consisting of Erle, C. J., Williams and Keating, JJ., and Bramwell and Wilde, BB. (Pollock, C. B., dissenting), reversed the judgment, on the ground that Hole v. Barlow was not rightly decided, and that the jury could not properly be asked whether the causing of the nuisance was a reasonable use by the defendant of his own land.

The following extract from the judgment of the majority of the judges, delivered by Williams, J., will shew the reasons on which it proceeded:—

"That decision" (i. e. the decision in Hole v. Barlow) "was plainly founded on a passage in Comyns' Digest, 'Action upon the Case for a Nuisance' (C.), which is in the following words:—'So an action does not lie for a reasonable use of my right, though it be to the annoyance of another; as, if a butcher, brewer, &c. use his trade in a convenient place, though it be to the annoyance of his neighbour.' It may be observed that, in the language of this dictum (for which no authority is cited by Comyns), there is a want of precision, especially in the words 'reasonable' and 'convenient,' which render its meaning by no means clear. And it may be doubted whether the Court, in Hole v. Barlow, did not misunderstand it. What is a 'convenient place?' Does this expression mean, as the Court understood it in that case, that the place is proper and convenient for the purpose of carrying on the trade, or does it mean, that it is a place where a nuisance will not be caused to another? . . . It should seem, therefore, that just as the use of an offensive trade will be indictable as a public nuisance if it be carried on in an inconvenient place, i. e. a place where it greatly incommodes a multitude of persons, so it will be actionable as a private nuisance if it be carried on in an inconvenient place, i. e. a place where it greatly incommodes an individual. If this be the true construction of the expression 'convenient,' in the passage from Comyns' Digest, the doctrine contained in it amounts to no more than what has long been settled law, viz. that a man may, without being liable to an action, exercise a lawful trade, as that of a butcher or brewer and the like, notwithstanding it be carried on so near the house of another as to be an annoyance to him, in rendering his residence there less delectable or agreeable, provided the trade be so conducted that it does not cause what amounts, in point of law, to a nuisance to the neighbouring house."

In the subsequent case of Covey v. Ladbetter (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 798), Erle, C. J., said, "I would add, that the judgment of Willes, J., in Hole v. Barlow, appears to me sound, although the question left by Byles, J., has been decided to be wrong." And in The Wandsworth Board of Health, Apprs., Hill, Resp. (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 972; 13 C. B. 479), Willes, J., himself said, "The case of Hole v. Barlow has been misunderstood. The judgment of at least one of the judges in that case proceeded on the ground that a man's enjoyment of his own property is necessarily, in some degree, subservient to the general good of the public. It is still an open question, which must one day be determined by the highest tribunal, whether one who carries on a business under reasonable circumstances of place, time, and otherwise, can be said to be guilty of an actionable nuisance. According to Chief Baron Comyns, &c., and Hole v. Barlow, he may: according to some of the judges in the Exchequer Chamber, he may not. I do not pretend to offer an opinion upon a subject which such superior intellects have considered doubtful."

Finally, during the present term, a case of Kipling v. The St. Helen's Smelting Company, which involved the present question, came before the Court of Queen's Bench. The Court declared themselves bound by the decision of the majority of the judges in Bamford v. Turnley, but gave the defeated party leave to appeal. On Hole v. Barlow being cited, Mellor, J., stated that he was once counsel in a case before Willes, J., at Leicester, when that learned judge said that some expressions were attributed to him in Hole v. Barlow to which he did not give utterance.

ENGLISH AND IRISH LAW AND CHANCERY COMMISSION.

7. That instead of the 64th section of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, it should be declared and enacted, that the power which exists in England of obtaining inspection and copies of documents in the possession or power of the opposite party, both as regards those relied on in the pleadings, and also as regards those not so relied on, but relating to the matter in dispute, shall be the same in Ireland as in England.

In England, under the 17th section of stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, the court or a judge was empowered to order any actions for a liquidated demand depending in the superior courts to be tried before the proper local court of record. This power was extended by sect. 26 of the County Courts Act, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, to sums not exceeding 50*l*. The principal of these enactments should, in our opinion, be extended to Ireland, but we think that 20*l*. would in Ireland be a more proper limit than 50*l*.

We are of opinion—

8. That the court or a judge in Ireland should be empowered to order any actions for a liquidated demand depending in the superior courts, when the sum sought to be recovered does not exceed 20*l*., to be tried before any chairman of a county or recorder of a borough in Ireland as the court or a judge shall direct.

viii.—Practice and Procedure peculiar to Ireland proposed to be retained in Ireland.

We are of opinion—

1. That the Irish practice of the process-server swearing to acquaintance with the person of the defendant should be continued.

2. That in transitory actions the provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 62, by which the right of changing the venue on the common affidavit is taken away, and power given to the Court to change it on a special affidavit, be retained in Ireland.

3. That speeding writs of inquiry before a Master instead of the sheriff in Dublin, under the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 101, and the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1856, sect. 99, should be retained in Ireland.

4. That the Writ Office in Ireland, and its system as constituted by the stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 18, ss. 38 and 39, and by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 15, should be continued in Ireland.

5. That the Consolidated Nisi Prius Court in Ireland should be continued as at present constituted.

6. That the statutable provision in Ireland under which a bill of exceptions is argued in the court below before the case is brought into the court of error should be retained.

ix.—General Improvements in the Law in England and Ireland.

Under this branch of our inquiry we have to submit to your Majesty the following recommendations:—

We are of opinion—

1. That a provision should be made to annul the writ in personal actions and in ejectment, unless the same be prosecuted with effect within a time to be fixed.

2. That the 29th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, as to paying duty at a trial on an unstamped document, and the analogous section of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act of 1856, should be amended, so as to enable parties to pay the duty and penalty when the unstamped document is lost or destroyed, and secondary evidence given of its contents.

3. That the court or a judge should be enabled, in making orders for changing the venue from one place to another, to provide for a view out of the county, or county of the city, in which the action is to be tried.

4. That, in addition to the cases where payment of money into court is now permitted, the court or a judge should in all other cases be at liberty to permit it to be done, subject to such terms as the court or a judge may think right.

5. That in actions brought in Ireland by persons resident in England, and actions brought in England by persons resident in Ireland, where security for costs is ordered, the Court should have power to order such security to be by bond, recognisance, warrant, or cognovit to enter judgment at the defendant's suit in one of the superior courts of the country where the plaintiff resides, or by deposit, or by sureties, as the Court shall think fit.

6. That in actions brought by persons resident elsewhere than in England or Ireland, it shall be in the discretion of the court or judge to determine whether, on an application for security for costs, an affidavit of merits shall be required.

7. That a provision to the following effect, viz. "In proceedings to obtain an attachment of debts under the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, the judge may in his discretion refuse to interfere, or may impose such terms and conditions as to the time and mode of payment or otherwise, as he shall think fit," should be substituted for sect. 28 of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1860, and should be applied both to Ireland and to England.

8. That, subject to the amendments hereinbefore recommended, the statutable provisions as to inspection, discovery, appeal, and otherwise, should apply to interpleader as well as to ordinary actions.

9. That the statutable provisions and rules of England and of Ireland, as to costs, should, as far as possible, be assimilated and simplified.

T. Phinn, Esq., Q. C., has been re-appointed Counsel to the Admiralty and Judge Advocate of the Fleet, vacant by the promotion of R. P. Collier, Esq., Q. C., to the post of Solicitor-General. Mr. Phinn formerly held the office, but resigned it on being appointed one of the secretaries to the Admiralty some years ago.

PHILLIPS'S LAW OF COPYRIGHT.

Just published, in 8vo., price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT IN WORKS OF LITERATURE and ART, and in the Application of Designs. With the Statutes relating thereto. By CHARLES PALMER PHILLIPS, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"Mr. Phillips has shown, not only great diligence in collecting cases bearing upon the various topics which he has treated, but considerable judgment in the manner in which he has dealt with them. He has spared no pains to make his work reliable as a legal text-book, and at the same time equally useful to publishers, authors, artists, and other persons who are interested in works of literature, art, or design. In a word, such a book has long been wanted, and Mr. Phillips has given abundant proof of his ability to meet the desideratum."—Solicitors' Journal, Nov. 14, 1863.

THE JURIST.

By a long series of decisions, the rights of riparian proprietors to the use of water flowing in definite channels above ground have been well settled. Each proprietor of the land has a right to the stream flowing in a natural course over his land, to use the same as he pleases, in a manner not inconsistent with a similar right in the proprietors of the land below; so that, in the absence of prescription or grant, neither proprietor can diminish the quantity, or injure the quality, of the water which would otherwise naturally descend. (Mason v. Hill, 5 B. & Ad. 17).

It seems, moreover, that if the course of a subterranean stream were well known, as is the case with many which sink underground, pursue for a short time a subterraneous course, and then emerge again, the owner of the soil under which the stream flowed could maintain an action for the diversion of it, if it took place under such circumstances as would have enabled him to recover had the stream been wholly above ground. (Dickenson v. The Grand Junction Canal Company, 7 Exch. 300, 301; Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 374).

The principles, however, which regulate the rights of owners of land in respect of water flowing in known and well-defined channels, whether upon or below the surface of the ground, do not apply to underground water, which merely percolates through the strata in unknown channels; for any person may sink a well or carry on mining operations on his own land, although the effect may be to divert water percolating through his land to the land of his neighbour. See Acton v.

Blundell (12 M. & W. 324) and Chasemore v. Richards (2 H. & Norm. 168; 7 H. L. C. 349). These cases, in fact, followed the principles laid down in the Roman law (Dig. 229, lib. 39, tit. 3, s. 12). A different conclusion would have led to much litigation, and would often have prevented proprietors from dealing with their own lands in such a manner as to make them the most beneficial to themselves; for instance, suppose a person, with the intention of ameliorating his land, were to drain it, he might thereby intercept springs which percolated from his own land to that of his neighbour. If an action lay against him for so doing, it is obvious that agricultural improvements, by way of drainage, would throughout all the country receive a most injurious check. Moreover, it would be a most difficult thing to determine how far a person, by sinking a well on his own ground, affected water percolating underground. And of this a very singular instance was given by Lord Brougham, in the case of Chasemore v. Richards, who mentioned, that the French artesian well of the Abbator de Grenelle was said to draw its supplies from a distance of forty miles, and, as far as was known, from percolating water.

This being the case, the question then arises, is a person liable, in case he does any act on his own land which has the effect of fouling water which percolates through his own soil to that of his neighbour? In other words, admitting that he has, according to Chasemore v. Richards, a right to sink a well on his own soil, so as totally to intercept all water percolating through it to the soil of his neighbour, has he a right, upon the same principle, to foul the water which so percolates?

In the recent case of Hodgkinson v. Ennor (9 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 1152), this question seems rather to have been glanced at than actually decided. The question there raised was, whether a person is entitled to have water transmitted to him in a pure and uncontaminated state, although it flows underground, during a portion of its transit, through the land of a neighbouring proprietor, in the same manner as if it flowed in a definite channel on the surface of the earth; or whether the principle laid down in Chasemore v. Richards, with reference to the abstraction of water percolating through the earth by the sinking of a well on the land of a neighbouring proprietor, were applicable to such a case.

In Hodgkinson v. Ennor it appeared that the plaintiff was the occupier of an ancient mill, where he carried on the business of a manufacturer of paper; which business had been carried on from time immemorial, and that the mill had been from time immemorial supplied with water in a pure and unpolluted state, from a stream produced by the rainfall on a part of the Mendip Hills, which, entering into "swallets," or natural fissures in the rock, of which the high land was composed, ran by underground passages into a cavern, and after traversing the floor thereof, flowed by an underground passage to the lands of the plaintiff, and thence, in an open and defined stream, to the mill. The defendant discharged water which had been used in a minery worked by him on the hills, in a foul and polluted state, which, finding its way into the swallets, flowed thence into the stream on which the plaintiff's mill was situated, and contaminated the same, and rendered it unfit for its purpose. It was argued on behalf of the defendant, that, as a landowner excavating on his own soil was not responsible to his neighbour for the abstraction of underground or percolating water, he was not liable for the pollution of waters running underground, although he might be so in the case of waters running on the surface, and between banks. The Court of Queen's Bench, however, decided in favour of the plaintiff; and Cockburn, C. J., in his judgment, drew a very clear distinction between the case before the Court and Chasemore v. Richards, observing that that case simply shows that a landholder, through whose soil water passes in a state of percolation, acquires no right therein; but that in the case before the Court, the right of the plaintiff to have the use of the water flowing to his mill was undisputed; and his Lordship did not think that the flowing of the water underground during a portion of its transit from the defendant's property, brought the case within the authority of Chasemore v. Richards, and that the plaintiff, therefore, was entitled to the water as before, undiminished in quantity and undeteriorated in quality.

The point, therefore, which appears to be decided in Hodgkinson v. Ennor is this—that where a proprietor is entitled to the use of a stream of water, which, during part of its course flows through an underground channel, another proprietor cannot foul the water merely because it flows underground during part of its course. Mellor, J., said, that "there was a considerable difference between the abstraction and pollution of water; and Chasemore v. Richards did not therefore apply."

Now, with great deference to the learned judge, it appears to us to be clear, that the reason why Chasemore v. Richards did not apply, was not merely on account of any distinction between abstraction and pollution of water, but because the case before the Court of Queen's Bench was one of water running, although partially underground, "in," to use the words of the Chief Justice, "a well-defined channel;" and it would not, therefore, have fallen within the principle of Chasemore v. Richards, even had the question been raised with reference to abstraction, and not pollution.

Blackburn, J., during the argument, observed, that "he was aware of no case which established a distinction between the pollution of the water of a stream, and water in a state of percolation." Nor does there appear to have been a decision upon the point in this country. In the United States, however, in the case of Brown v. Illius (25 Conn. 583), the Court were inclined to the position, that if, in the prosecution of a business, like the manufacture of gas, net a nuisance per se, one use materials upon his land which penetrate into the earth, and corrupt underground sources of supply, by percolating to a well upon a neighbour's land, he would not be liable for the damage done thereby.

Whether, when the neat point raised in Brown v. Illius is discussed in this country, our Courts will be disposed to take the same view as the American judges, is perhaps doubtful; for the principle upon which Chasemore v. Richards depends is this—that as the owner of land acquires no right in water percolating through his soil, he cannot be said to be damaged by its abstraction while passing through the soil of a neighbour. It appears, however, to us, that he is damaged when noxious matter is transmitted through the soil of a neighbour to his own, and it can be clearly proved to have come from no other source.

LAW REPORTING.

WE understand that the requisition for a meeting of the Bar on this subject, which we published a short time since, was presented to the Attorney-General a few days ago, signed by 368 members of the Bar, including (with two or three exceptions) all the leaders of the Chancery Bar and 26 leaders of the Common-law Bar; and, in compliance with it, the Attorney-General has issued the following invitation:—

"A requisition having been presented to me, very numerously signed by members of the Bar, by which I am requested to call a meeting of the Bar, at such time and place as I shall think proper, for the purpose of ascertaining the opinion of the Bar as to the existing system of Law Reporting, with a view to the amendment thereof: I do hereby, in compliance with the said requisition, invite the members of the Bar to meet, by permission of the Treasurer, in the Dining Hall of Lincoln's Inn, on Wednesday, the 2nd December next, at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon, for the above-mentioned purpose.

(Signed) "ROUNDSELL PALMER,
Attorney-General.

"11, New Square, 21st November, 1863."

WE believe, that at the meeting a resolution to the following effect will be moved by Mr. Daniel, Q. C.:—

"That the present system of preparing, editing, and publishing the reports of judicial decisions in this country requires amendment."

If that resolution is carried, Sir Hugh Cairns, Q. C., will then move the appointment of a committee, with a request to communicate with the Lord Chancellor, the Judges, and the Benchers of the Inns of Court; and to prepare a scheme, and report the same to a future meeting of the Bar.

We trust that the meeting will be fully attended, and will be the means of effecting the reform which is so much needed.

The number of candidates examined in this term was 135; of these, 128 were passed, and 7 postponed.

By order of the Council,

E. W. WILLIAMSON, Secretary.

FINAL EXAMINATION.

AT the examination of candidates for admission on the roll of attorneys and solicitors of the Superior Courts, the Examiners recommended the following gentlemen, under the age of twenty-six, as being entitled to honorary distinction:—

1. Thomas Ponting, aged twenty-two, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Andrews & Canham, of Sudbury, Messrs. Goaling & Girdlestone, of London, and Messrs. Loftus & Young, of London.
2. Alfred Hallworth Crowther, aged twenty-three, who served his clerkship to Mr. Newenham Charles Wright, of London, and Messrs. Chauntler & Crouch, of London.
3. John Bolton, aged twenty-five, who served his clerkship to Mr. Richard Wilson, of Kendal, and Messrs. Allen, Nichol, & Allen, of London.
3. John Burkinshaw, aged twenty-three, who served his clerkship to Mr. William Daniel Gaches, of Peterborough, Mr. Frederic Barlow, of Cambridge, and Messrs. Sharpe & Parker, of London.
3. William Mawdaley Charnley, aged twenty-two, who served his clerkship to Mr. William Charnley, of Preston, and Messrs. Gregory & Rowcliffes, of London.

The Council of the Incorporated Law Society have accordingly awarded the following Prizes of Books:—

To Mr. Ponting, the prize of the Honourable Society of Clifford's Inn; to Mr. Crowther, the prize of the Honourable Society of Clement's Inn; to Mr. Bolton, one of the prizes of the Incorporated Law Society; to Mr. Burkinshaw, one of the prizes of the Incorporated Law Society; and to Mr. Charnley, one of the prizes of the Incorporated Law Society.

THE EXAMINERS have also certified that the following candidates, whose names are placed in alphabetical order, passed examinations which entitle them to commendation:—

Richard Hale Braithwaite, aged twenty-three, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Rawson & Best, of Leeds, and Messrs. Bell, Brodrick, & Bell, of London.

William Creed, aged twenty-one, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Francis & Baker, of Newton Bushel, Devonshire, and Messrs. Church & Sons, of London.

Jabez M'Diarmid, aged twenty-three, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Ingle & Goody, of London.

Francis Thornhill Maddock, aged twenty-one, who served his clerkship to Messrs. J. & E. Whitley & Thomson, of Liverpool.

George Thompson Powell, aged twenty-four, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Powell, Thompson, & Groom, of London.

The Council have accordingly awarded them certificates of merit.

The Examiners have further announced to the following candidates, whose names are placed in alphabetical order, that their answers to the questions at the examination were highly satisfactory, and would have entitled them to prizes or certificates of merit if they had been under the age of twenty-six:—

William Henry Goodwin, aged thirty-seven, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Longueville, Williams, & Jones, of Oswestry.

David Hornby, B.A., aged thirty, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Conyers & Jennings, of Driffield, Yorkshire.

William Thornburn, aged thirty-seven, who served his clerkship to Mr. Joseph Hayton, of Cockermouth, and Messrs. Ingle & Goody, of London.

Thomas Wingate, aged fifty-two, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Van Sandau & Cumming, of London.

The number of candidates examined in this term was 120; of these 112 were passed, and 8 postponed.

By order of the Council,
E. W. WILLIAMSON, Secretary.

THE case of Hudson v. Slade, Bart., and Others (see 8 Jur., N. S., part 2, p. 583) has been brought to a close by the entry of a stet processus, and a reference to Sir John T. Coleridge, late one of the justices of the Court of Queen's Bench, who has now published his award, as follows:—

"Whereas, by an order of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, made by consent on the 8th July, 1863, it was referred to me to say, upon reading the pleadings in this cause, the letter-book referred to, and the printed evidence given on the former trial thereof, what, if anything, should be done between the parties, and that a stet processus should be entered. Now, having read the pleadings, letter-book, and evidence, I hereby say and determine, on the matter so referred to me, as hereafter follows; but considering the character and object of this reference, I think it proper to premise that, in my opinion, a cause of action was proved, not in every particular justified, but with so much of extenuation on the one hand, and of provocation on the other, that a verdict with nominal damages only would have been proper to be found by a jury coming to the same conclusion as myself upon the facts; and that it would not have been equitable that the defendants should have borne the plaintiff's costs; that the order directing the entry of a stet processus has, therefore, in substance, brought the action to its proper termination at law. But, considering the relative positions of the parties, and all the circumstances, I say and determine, that the plaintiff and now surviving defendants^a shall, within one month from the date of this award, mutually, and at their joint expense, execute to each other a release of all causes of action, if any, arisen, or supposed to have arisen, between them, or any of them, on the 8th or 9th July, 1862; and that in the recitals of the release by the plaintiff shall be expressed, on his part, a withdrawal of any imputation which he may have made of want of honour or gentlemanly feeling in the conduct of any of the defendants on the evenings of the days in question, as having been made by him in anger, and without due consideration; and, further, I say and determine, that the defendants shall, immediately on the execution of such release by the plaintiff, pay to him or his attorney the sum of 50*l.* sterling. As witness my hand, this 20th day of October, 1863,

"JOHN TAYLOR COLERIDGE."

Notwithstanding the notice of the 17th November, given in our last, the Court of Queen's Bench did not hold any Sittings in Banc after Michaelmas Term. On the 20th inst. the Lord Chief Justice stated in court that it would not be advisable to do so, as the arrears were small; but that two Nisi Prius Courts would be held instead.

^a The first-named defendant, Sir Frederick Slade, Bart., died since the order of reference.

ENGLISH AND IRISH LAW AND CHANCERY COMMISSION.

(Concluded from p. 410).

x.—Improvements of the Law of Ireland.

We recommend—

1. That the form of testing writs of replevin, provided by the Common-law Procedure Act, Ireland, 1853, "witness the seal of our superior courts of common law," be substituted in writs of summons and plaint in personal actions for the forms given in the same statute (Schedule B., No. 1).

2. That the practice in the three superior courts of common law in Ireland should be uniform; and when differences shall appear to exist in the practice, the Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench shall summon a meeting of the twelve judges to take the subject into consideration, and determine by a General Order or Orders, to be made by any seven or more of the judges, of whom two shall be chief judges, what the practice shall thenceforward be.

3. That the provisions of the Irish Common-law Procedure Act, 1853, sect. 98, fixing the number of jurors on inquiries before the Masters at not less than three, should be repealed, and that a full jury of twelve should be empanelled in every case.

4. That in all cases of writs of inquiry in Ireland it shall be lawful for the court or a judge to order that they may be tried before a judge at the Consolidated Nisi Prius Court, or at Nisi Prius, and (at his discretion) either at the after sittings or on circuit; and for that purpose to enter a suggestion on the record whenever the trial is to take place out of the venue county.

5. (1). That protection should be afforded to registered mortgages and assignments of mortgages in Ireland, by requiring service of ejectments on mortgagees and their assignees, with nine months to redeem.

5. (2). That other interests in land in Ireland should be protected by restoring the principle of the Fourth General Order of 1856, requiring an affidavit of service from one of the plaintiffs, and from the attorney bringing the ejectment, that they do not know or believe that there is any person other than those who have been served, who is tenant, mortgagee, or assignee, under the lease or instrument sought to be evicted, or is in possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the premises sought to be recovered, or of any part thereof, or who has any subsisting estate or interest in such premises, or in any part thereof.

5. (3). And in the event of there being any difficulty in tracing the parties who ought to be served, that the Court should be empowered to make orders for substitution of service.

xi.—Crown Side of the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland.

We are of opinion—

That the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland should be provided with like powers to those of the Court in England, and that the proceedings and practice adopted in England by the Crown side of the Court of Queen's Bench should be extended to Ireland.

xii.—Office Copies of Documents.

We recommend—

That the rule which now prevails in some departments of the courts of law and equity in England and Ireland, viz. that no person shall be compelled to take an office or attested copy of any affidavit or other document, should be extended to all proceedings in all the superior courts of England and Ireland, both civil and criminal.

II.—CONSTITUTION OF THE SUPERIOR COURTS OF COMMON LAW IN IRELAND AS TO NUMBER OF JUDGES.

We are of opinion—

That it is not expedient to reduce the number of the judges in the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer in Ireland.

III.—EQUITY PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

i.—Origin of Difference therein in England and Ireland. Question of Assimilation.

In November, 1854, a commission was issued to inquire into the Irish Incumbered Estates Court, and whether its powers should be transferred to the Court of Chancery; and by their Report the Commissioners recommended that the office of Master in Chancery in Ireland should be abolished, one Master, however, being retained for the management of the business of receivers, and for auditing certain public accounts under statutes providing for that duty.

They also stated their opinion, that it would be for the interest of the public and of the Profession that the practice of the English and Irish Courts of Chancery should be assimilated as closely as circumstances would permit, so that the decisions of each might be applicable to both, and thus tend to establish a uniform system of equity in the two countries.

We have come to a unanimous resolution in favour of this assimilation.

We think it is of paramount importance to restore and preserve as far as possible a uniformity of system in the equity jurisprudence of the two countries.

ii.—Inquiries in Ireland as to Irish System.—Details of Assimilation.

On the general question of assimilation of equity practice and procedure, and the changes connected with it, we are of opinion—

1. That it is expedient that the system of practice and procedure of the Courts of Chancery of England and of Ireland should be assimilated as far as practicable.

2. That the practice and procedure of the Court of Chancery of England are generally to be preferred to the practice and procedure of the Court of Chancery of Ireland.

3. That demurrers should be allowed for want of equity or for multifariousness only.

4. That the Irish rule of not requiring an attachment, and a return of non est inventus, in order to obtain a sequestration, should be extended to England.

iii.—Practice and Procedure in Equity peculiar to Ireland, proposed to be retained in Ireland.

We are of opinion—

1. That the system of pleas should not be introduced into Ireland.

2. That in consequence of the existence of the Landed Estates Court in Ireland, the Irish practice as to decretal orders in foreclosure suits, directing a sale, and an account of all incumbrances affecting the premises, as well as a foreclosure, should be retained; and that the Irish practice limiting the number of parties to a foreclosure suit should also be retained.

3. That the Irish practice should be retained by which the delivery of the possession of lands, pursuant to a decretal order, is enforced by a writ of injunction to the sheriff of the county in which the lands are situate, which issues as of course upon a direction to that effect inserted in the decretal order.

4. That the Irish practice by which all notices in the Court of Chancery in Ireland are served through the notice office, and the service proved by indorsement on the notice, should be retained.

IV.—CONSTITUTION AND FEES OF THE COURT OF CHANCERY IN IRELAND.—MODIFICATIONS CONSEQUENT ON ASSIMILATION.

Our recommendations as to the changes in the constitution and fees of the Court of Chancery of Ireland, rendered necessary by the adoption of assimilation, are as follows:—

We are of opinion—

1. That the office of Master in Chancery in Ireland, other than that of the Receiver Master, should be abolished.
2. That the existing Masters should be retained so long as it may be found necessary that they may, as far as practicable, complete the business pending before them.
3. That, having regard to the special statutable duties now discharged by the Receiver Master, that office should be retained.
4. That the Master of the Rolls, with one Vice-Chancellor, having each one chief clerk and two assistant clerks, in addition to the Lord Chancellor and Lord Justice of Appeal, will be sufficient to dispose of the equity business in Ireland.
5. That it is desirable that power be given to the Lord Chancellor, with the advice and consent of the Master of the Rolls and Vice-Chancellor in Ireland, or one of them, by order under their hands, to appoint an additional chief clerk or assistant clerks to the Master of the Rolls and Vice-Chancellor, or either of them.
6. That power should be given to the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, with the advice and consent of the Lord Justice of Appeal, the Master of the Rolls, and the Vice-Chancellor in Ireland, or any two of them, to regulate the fees to be paid, so far as it shall be necessary to make any changes in the same in consequence of the alterations produced in equity practice and procedure by carrying into effect the preceding recommendations.

V.—SUBJECTS NOT IMMEDIATELY CONNECTED WITH PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE OR CONSTITUTION OF COURTS.

- i.—Accounts in the Court of Chancery in Ireland.—Unclaimed Dividends.
- ii.—Appointment of Commissioners to take Affidavits for the Court of Chancery, Ireland.
- iii.—Affidavit Office, Court of Chancery.
- iv.—Acknowledgements and Consents by Married Women.
- v.—Substitution of Stamps for Fees.

The conclusions which we have formed on the several subjects included in the fifth part of our Report are contained in the following recommendations:—

We are of opinion—

1. That sects. 1, 2, and 3 of the stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 98, with reference to funds the dividends of which have not been dealt with for fifteen years, should be extended, mutatis mutandis, to the Lord Chancellor and Court of Chancery in Ireland.
2. That the provisions with regard to the taking of affidavits for the Court of Chancery in England contained in stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22, stat. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 78, and stat. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 42, should be extended, mutatis mutandis, to the Lord Chancellor and Court of Chancery in Ireland.
3. That the clerk of the affidavits of the Court of Chancery in Ireland should be empowered to administer oaths.
4. That the perpetual commissioners in Ireland for taking acknowledgments of deeds by married women should have power to take the acknowledgments of married women residing in Ireland relating to land situate in England, and é converso; and that the power of the perpetual commissioners in Ireland should be extended to taking the consent of married women residing in Ireland to the payment of money out of the Court of Chancery in England to their husbands, or otherwise, and é converso.

5. That the fees of the Court of Chancery of Ireland should be collected by stamps, and that such officers of that court as now receive fees for their own benefit should receive an equivalent income by salary out of the fund produced by the stamps.

6. That the fees of the superior courts of common law in England should be collected by stamps.

We humbly submit this our First Report to your Majesty's royal consideration.

Mr. Napier's reasons for dissenting from the foregoing recommendation as to the proposed abolition of the power of allowing equitable defences in ejectment:—

I do not agree in this recommendation. I think it is a retrograde step that ought not to be taken. I prefer to go forward, and have better provision made for the beneficial exercise of the power, either by enlarging it sufficiently, or by enabling the court of law to certify the facts which constitute the equitable defence, and thereby to obtain the direct intervention of a court of equity, so as to render the equitable defence available at law. I do not think it is either reasonable or just to allow a party to be defeated in a court of law, and to have judgment at law against him, if he has a good equitable defence, by means of which he could obtain the decree of a court of equity in his favour.

(Signed) JOSEPH NAPIER. (L.S.)

The Government intend, in the ensuing session of Parliament, to renew their project for building new courts of justice, or, as in imitation of the French it is commonly styled, a Palace of Justice. The necessary notices to enable the Commissioners of Public Works to acquire a site for the building have been given.

PHILLIPS'S LAW OF COPYRIGHT.

Just published, in 6vo., price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT IN WORKS OF LITERATURE and ART, and in the Application of Designs. With the Statutes relating thereto. By CHARLES PALMER PHILLIPS, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"Mr. Phillips has shown, not only great diligence in collecting cases bearing upon the various topics which he has treated, but considerable judgment in the manner in which he has dealt with them. He has spared no pains to make his work reliable as a legal text-book, and at the same time equally useful to publishers, authors, artists, and other persons who are interested in works of literature, art, or design. In a word, such a book has long been wanted, and Mr. Phillips has given abundant proof of his ability to meet the desideratum."—Solicitors' Journal, Nov. 14, 1863.

PETTY SESSIONS PRACTICE.

In thick 12mo., price 18s. cloth, lettered.

STONE'S PRACTICE of PETTY SESSIONS. With the Statutes, a List of Summary Convictions, and an Appendix of Forms. Seventh Edition. By THOMAS BELL and LEWIS W. CAVE, Esqrs., Barristers at Law. With a Supplement, bringing the Statutes and Cases up to 1863. 12mo., price 18s. cloth.

"It is remarkable for a rare combination of conciseness and clearness in the composition, which have recommended it to magistrates who have not been educated as lawyers, and to whom, therefore, the books written for the use of lawyers are often obscure by reason of their technicalities. The present editors have preserved this characteristic of Mr. Stone's volumes in their own abundant additions to it."—Law Times.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, DECEMBER 5, 1863.

THE court-martial on Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley, which is now dragging its unwieldy length along at Aldershot, invites attention to the practice of those tribunals. We, therefore, propose briefly to consider it, without however alluding in any way to the merits of that particular case.

Military men, in general, are much enamoured with this their own tribunal, and hold it beyond all comparison superior to every other in its facilities of detecting guilt and protecting innocence. Nor is this a notion confined to persons of that profession. Bentham repeatedly speaks of courts-martial, as courts of natural procedure, on the ground that they act without forms, whereas the ordinary tribunals are, he says, encumbered with forms almost countless. But no person having even a general acquaintance with the subject will recognise the accuracy of this description. The manner of constituting the court-martial, the oath of secrecy taken by its members, the questions that continually arise before it relative to the correctness of the manner in which the charges against the accused are framed, the admissibility of evidence; and above all, the burdensome, and we cannot help thinking, mischievous, practice of reducing to writing every question and answer, as well as many other incidental matters, &c., all shew the formal character of the proceedings; and those who have no acquaintance with the subject cannot, in order to be fully enlightened upon it, do better than read the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Crawley's court-martial. The truth is, that Bentham's observations relative to the absence of forms at courts-martial, are only applicable to the case of what is known in the service by the name of a drum-head court-martial—a sort of tribunal which, when troops are on the march, is improvised to deal with cases of open delinquency requiring instant punishment—a tribunal, the necessity for which, under such circumstances, we do not pretend to deny—but the introduction of the maxims or procedure of which into the affairs of civil life would be an act alike of wanton tyranny and ineffable absurdity.

On the other hand, the court-martial not unfrequently meets with hard measure at the hands of civilians; who are apt to view its proceedings as founded on despotism, and its procedure on pedantry and red tapism; a feeling not a little strengthened by the recollection, that in times of open insurrection the ordinary tribunals of the land are often set aside by the ruling powers, and replaced by courts-martial, which proceed, we fear we must say ex necessitate rei, with an amount of energy and violence not consistent with any nice discrimination of guilt and innocence.

The fact seems to be, that courts-martial are used for three very different classes of cases:—First, there is the drum-head court-martial already referred to, under which may, perhaps, be classed the courts-martial held during open insurrection—a species of tribunal plainly unfitted for any regular state of society. Secondly, courts-martial on offences recognised alike by the military law and by the common law in which the superiority of the latter, at least for the civil purposes of life, is too obvious to need pointing out to any candid mind. Thirdly, and principally, courts-martial for the trial and punishment of purely military offences. Here the superiority of the court-martial to any civil tribunal is very striking; in fact, it may be questioned whether for such offences any other tribunal is possible. It is only those who have received a military training who can truly judge of military offences; that which to the eye of a civilian may be no offence at all, or at most a peccadillo—e. g. leaving for a moment an unattacked post, or insubordinate language under very gross provocation—may be to military eyes an offence of the deepest gravity. Nor can this be otherwise. War is an unnatural state, and its rules and practice ought not to be measured by those observed in time of peace—it is unfair to try them by such a standard—"Silent leges inter arma." Besides, the proceedings of military courts-martial have no validity until reviewed by a superior officer, who has the power, and frequently exercises it, of annulling the whole. In short, the statement made on one occasion in the House of Lords by the late Duke of Wellington, a good judge of such matters, seems pretty near the truth:—"Martial law is the will of the commanding officer." It is to be observed, however, that a naval court-martial requires no such supervision, and either condemns and sentences, or acquits the accused at once.

Civilians would, however, do well, when discussing this question, not to press too far the argument based on the prolixity of military tribunals. Military men, usually jealous enough of their own forms, might retort the terribly voluminous proceedings on the commission of lunacy against Mr. Wyndham, and the case of Miss Shedden, who was allowed to waste fourteen days of the time of the Divorce Court by a simple inquiry into the legitimacy of her father, and similar cases before the ordinary tribunals. To these two particular instances it might, indeed, be replied, that the former produced an act of Parliament to remedy some of the most crying evils disclosed by it, and that in the latter a lady pleaded her own cause in person—an argument based on gallantry; but it is impossible not to see the tendency which in our day judicial proceedings, civil or military, have acquired of becoming procès monstres—a thing to be strongly deprecated, as giving rise to wanton delay and expense, and often seriously prejudicial to the interests of justice.

MEETING OF THE BAR ON THE STATE OF LAW REPORTING.

THE meeting convened by the Attorney-General, "for the purpose of ascertaining the opinion of the Bar as to the existing system of law reporting, with a view to the amendment thereof," the announcement of which will be found in our last number (ante, p. 416), took place on Wednesday, in the Dining Hall, of Lincoln's Inn. The Attorney-General presided, and the attendance was very numerous.

Mr. Daniel, Q. C., moved the first resolution, viz. "That in the opinion of this meeting the present system of preparing, editing, and publishing the reports of judicial decisions in this country requires amendment."

Sir F. Kelly, Q. C., M. P., seconded the motion.

Mr. E. Webster, moved, as an amendment, "That the whole subject of law reporting, without prejudice to the present system, should be taken into consideration by a committee of the whole bar."

The Hon. G. Denman, Q. C., M. P., seconded this amendment, modified thus—"That a committee of members of the bar be appointed to consider the whole subject of law reporting, and to report to another meeting of the bar thereupon."

The amendment was then put and negatived. Another amendment was then proposed by a gentleman in the body of the hall, declaring the present system "liable to objection," instead of affirming that it "required amendment." The meeting evinced some impatience at this proposal, and its mover and seconder were frequently interrupted by cries of "Time."

Mr. Ince said the solicitors were interested in this question as well as the bar. The profession had every reason to be satisfied with the reports. (Oh!) They combined the requisites of accuracy, expedition, and cheapness. It was not essential that they should be single. They were also a useful means of education for law students. (Mr. Ince was repeatedly interrupted by marks of impatience, and the chairman had to interpose to obtain a hearing for him).

The second amendment having been put, and also negatived, the original resolution was carried by a large majority, amid cheers.

Sir H. Cairns, Q. C., M. P., then rose to move the second resolution, namely—"That a committee of members of the bar be appointed to consider the best means of improving the system of preparing, editing, and publishing the reports of judicial proceedings, and to report thereon to a public meeting of the bar."

Mr. Malins, Q. C., M. P., seconded the resolution, without pledging himself to any particular plan.

The second resolution was carried, with scarcely a dissentient voice; and the following committee was then nominated:—

The Solicitor-General.	James Dickinson, Esq.
The Queen's Advocate.	Joshua Williams, Esq.
Sir Fitzroy Kelly, Knt.,	George Sweet, Esq.
Q. C., M. P.	Alexander Pulling, Esq.
W. T. S. Daniel, Q. C.	George Druce, Esq.
Montagu Smith, Q. C., M. P.	G. W. Hastings, Esq.
C. J. Selwyn, Q. C., M. P.	Henry Matthews, Esq.
Sir H. M. Cairns, Knt.,	Nathaniel Lindley, Esq.
Q. C., M. P.	J. B. Quain, Esq.
B. P. Amphlett, Q. C.	Alfred Wills, Esq.
The Hon. G. Denman, Q. C.,	John Westlake, Esq.
M. P.	Francis Vaughan Hawkins, Esq.
George Mellish, Q. C.

An examination of this list will shew that the committee is composed of twenty-two members of the bar, two of whom, the Solicitor-General and the Queen's Advocate, may be considered as unappropriated to either the common-law or equity bar, and the rest are distributed as follows: namely, eight Queen's Counsel, four belonging to each bar; nine members of the outer bar, five of which belong to the common law, and four to the equity bar; and three equity draftsmen, two of whom are also conveyancers. The equity element is, we incline to think, too strong here, especially as the list originally proposed consisted of only twenty-one names, to which that of the Hon. G. Denman, a Common-law Queen's Counsel, was added at the meeting. The name of every person connected, however remotely, with any system of reports, regular or irregular, has been judiciously omitted.

Reviews.

A Treatise on the Law of Railways, Railway Companies, and Railway Investments; with an Appendix of Statutes, Forms, &c. By Sir WILLIAM HODGES, Knt., Chief Justice of her Majesty's Supreme Court, Cape of Good Hope. Third Edition, by CHARLES MANLEY SMITH, Esq., of the Inner Temple and Midland Circuit, Barrister-at-Law. [H. Sweet.]

THROWING out of the question the reports and the statutes, the huge array of our legal library ranges between these two extremes—the pure book of principle, and the annotated edition of statutes. That author is fortunate whose subject-matter allows him to write a book which comes tolerably close to either of these limits; on the one hand, he is enabled to write a clear, logical, and consecutive book; on the other, he is remitted to the comparatively easy task of an industrious compiler; whilst in neither case, if he be competent to his task, does the nature itself of his subject-matter present inherent difficulties to its arrangement. When, however, an author has to deal with a subject which does not permit his book to be near either of the above extremes—in other words, to deal with a subject which involves numerous matters of principle, and is at the same time overlaid with, or in great proportion constituted of, a vast quantity of statutes, arbitrary in their matter and arrangement—then he is presented with inherent difficulties so great as to prevent him in most cases from arranging his matter in a manner entirely satisfactory either to himself or his readers. Any book on the law of railways falls peculiarly within this latter class, and fairly claims for its author a corresponding consideration; and our following remarks we, therefore, offer rather in the spirit of suggestion than criticism.

In the year 1847, Sir William Hodges undertook to supply a public want, and presented us with a work on the law of railways, and he grappled the difficulties of his task with sufficient success to produce a demand for a second edition, which was issued in the year 1854. The scheme which he adopted was the following one:—He first addressed himself to “the statute law applicable to railways, including matters of parliamentary regulation;” under which heading he discussed, first, the formation of railway companies; secondly, the course of proceedings upon railway bills in Parliament; thirdly, the constitution of railway companies, and their powers; fourthly, railway investments; fifthly, the permissive and compulsory powers to take, or injuriously affect, lands to construct a railway, and the parties who may claim compensation, and for what injuries; sixthly, the mode of assessing compensation; seventhly, the investment or payment of purchase money and compensation, and the title to lands purchased; eighthly, the powers and obligations of railway companies to construct and repair the works connected with the railway; ninthly, the jurisdiction of the Board of Trade over railways; and, tenthly, the obligations and restrictions imposed by statute law on railway companies. He secondly addressed himself to “the rights and liabilities of railway companies as carriers of goods and passengers.” And he lastly added chapters on mandamus, injunction, poor rates, and the dissolution of railway companies, with the rights of allottees to recover deposits; of course appending to his treatise a reprint of the statutes affecting railways.

Under his first heading (which we need hardly point out as being in its terms most inapplicable, and almost unintelligible), it will be seen that the main part, and indeed nearly all, of the law of railways was comprehended. Now, passing by, for the moment, the proceedings previous to the passing of a railway act, the subject is separated, as Sir William Hodges himself points out, into three great divisions by three important statutes, viz. the Companies, Lands, and Railway Clauses Consolidation Acts. These three statutes do not merely affect, but are, in truth, almost the whole of, the law of those “statutory creatures,” railways, on the matters contained under this first heading; and the greater number of the decided cases which have any claim to be under this heading, are cases which depend on, and are, interpretations of clauses in the above statutes. These statutes are, in fact, codes on particular branches of railway law—codes to which are attached the expositions contained in a vast number of decided cases. The consequence of this is, that the statutes themselves are the real text, and when any case arises under these branches, the first and main thing that a lawyer has to do is, to look to one of these statutes for its very words; the second, to see what cases have put an interpretation on the words that happen to be material. This being so, our own notion is, that the only practical way of dealing with this portion of the subject is by means of an annotated edition of these statutes. We thus get rid of a sketchy account of the statutes, which is practically of no use to the lawyer, and we avoid the nuisance of having our statute in one place, our cases in another; and thus we economise space, and study convenience. But it will be said that there are a very considerable number of cases which, though referring to these branches, are not mere interpretations of clauses, but are cases depending on principles of law, which attach to the subject; and it will be asked how we would deal with these on our proposed plan. Our answer is, that these statutes are divided under appropriate headings, and at every heading there might be a small treatise on any principles, and cases which might be appropriate. This, no doubt, is not a very grateful plan to an author ambitious of writing a treatise, and perhaps it requires some courage to adopt this treatment in a work which must also contain chapters written in the ordinary way. To be, however, really appropriate and useful, the treatment of a subject must be varied by its matter, and therefore, although it may at first startle an author's notion of symmetry, let us (to speak in loose and general terms), where a portion of the law is almost all statute, have the statute, and refer to the cases; where it is almost all case law, have the cases, and refer to the statutes. Sir William Hodges adopted, what we confess to be, the usual method, viz. that of having a text composed of parts of the statutes and the cases on them woven together, and that method has entailed the inconveniences we have pointed out. As to the manner in which he has carried it out, the verdict of the public relieves us from any criticism on that point, and with that verdict we are not inclined to quarrel. But whilst we thus pass by that, which is the main portion of the book, we may make a few criticisms on the treatment of the remaining and subsidiary parts, as the general verdict in favour of the book does not necessarily involve a complete approbation of them.

We think the second branch of the subject, though good in some particulars, confused and somewhat imperfect, and we especially point out the inconvenience of part of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act being in this branch, and part in a former portion of the work, though the whole of the statute is very applicable in this place.

With respect to the chapters on mandamus and injunction; at first sight, they seem to have no more or less special claim to be inserted than a chapter on action at law or bill in equity; and, perhaps, properly, the matter contained in them should be divided among the different portions of the first branch of the work. They, however, are very useful, and our remark possibly is hypercritical, though we certainly find some matters in the first part which are equally entitled to be here, and not more entitled to be there.

As to the chapter on rating, it is extremely useful, for, in addition to many practical and sensible remarks, all the railway cases are referred to seriatim, and the important parts of the judgments contained in them printed at full length. But the subject is not discussed in the complete and exhaustive way in which it might have been, by reference to the canal, gas, and water cases, and a discussion of their principles. The confusion of the subject is, however, so great, that, perhaps, as much has been done as is advisable.

Our remarks, as will be seen, have had reference entirely to the work, as presented to the public by Sir William Hodges, and have not touched the third edition, which has just been issued by Mr. Manley Smith, and which has been the immediate cause of this review. This has arisen from the nature of the task which he has undertaken. In preparing this edition for the press (as he says in his Preface), he has interfered as little as possible with the original scheme of the author, as the work is already well known, and many persons, who have become used to it, might dislike any change of arrangement. And consequently all remarks addressed to the general scope of the work in no way bear on his labours, which have been confined to the re-issue of the former edition, essentially unaltered, and only modified to the extent rendered necessary by the incorporation of the new statutes and cases. The task, as he truly observes, has been by no means an easy one; and we may be permitted to compliment him on the labour and discrimination which he has brought to bear on it. The object he proposed to himself has been attained, and he has presented us with the original useful work, adapted to the present state of law; excepting in so far as it has been altered by the Railway and Companies Clauses Acts of last session, which were not passed till after the book had been published.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

MICHAELMAS TERM, 27 VICT.—Nov. 25, 1863.

This Court will hold a sitting on Monday, the 7th day of December next, and will at such sitting proceed in giving judgment in matters then standing for judgment.

The Queen has been pleased to confer the honour of Knighthood upon Robert Porrett Collier, Esq., M. P., her Majesty's Solicitor-General.

GENERAL ORDERS

FOR REGULATING THE PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE OF THE COUNTY COURTS, UNDER THE BANKRUPTCY ACT, 1861.

In pursuance of the powers vested in us by the nomination of the Lord Chancellor under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, we, John Bury Dasent, Douglas Denon Heath, John Worlledge, Rupert Alfred Kettle, and William Furner, have framed the following General Orders, and do certify the same to the Lord Chancellor accordingly, this 1st day of July 1863.

1. The General Orders now in force in the county courts in matters of bankruptcy, which were framed under the provisions of sect. 46 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and dated the 12th October 1861, shall, on and from the 1st day of January 1864, be rescinded, and in lieu thereof, the following shall on and from such day be the General Orders in force and used in the said courts in matters of bankruptcy.

Sittings of the Court.

2. The place of sitting of each county court in matters of bankruptcy, shall be the place at which the court now holds, or may hereafter hold, its sittings for the general business of the court, under the provisions of the act 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, or of any act amending or extending the provisions of the same.

3. The times of the sitting of each county court in matters of bankruptcy, shall be those appointed for the transaction of the general business of the court, unless the judge of any such court shall otherwise order, and shall appoint a special day or days for a sitting of the court in matters of bankruptcy.

Proceedings.

4. In matters of bankruptcy in the county courts, the proceedings shall be in the several forms set forth in the schedule attached to these Orders, and where forms for any proceeding in such matters are not provided in the schedule, the forms required may be framed, using as guides those so provided.

5. All proceedings in the court (except notices to creditors) shall be written or printed on parchment or paper of the size hitherto used in bankruptcy, that is to say, on sheets of sixteen inches in length and ten inches in breadth; but no objection shall be taken to any proof of debt, affidavit, or letter of attorney on account of its being written or printed on other sized paper.

6. All proceedings shall be sealed with the seal of the court and remain of record in the court, so as to form a complete record of each bankruptcy, and they shall not be removed for any purpose, except for the use of the officers of the court, or by special direction of the judge or registrar. No minute book need therefore be kept.

7. All office copies of petitions, proceedings, books, papers, and writings, or any parts thereof, provided for any bankrupt, or for any debtor or creditor of a bankrupt, or attorney of any such bankrupt, debtor or creditor, shall be charged and paid for at the rate directed by the 53rd section of the Bankrupt Law Consolidation Act, 1849, with respect to the office copies therein mentioned; and such copies shall be made by the registrar forthwith after application for the same.

8. In lieu of attaching a copy of the London Gazette to the proceedings in each bankruptcy or other matter, the registrar shall make a memorandum of the advertisement in the London Gazette, and of the date thereof, with proper reference to the file to facilitate search; and one copy of every London Gazette and of each local newspaper in which any notice in any matter of bankruptcy in such court is inserted shall be handed by the high bailiff to the registrar, who shall file the same.

9. No affidavit shall be filed unless it is properly intitled in the court, and matter in which the same is to be used; and after an affidavit is left with a registrar to be filed, it is not to be delivered to any person whatever, except by order of the Court.

10. All notices and other proceedings, for the delivery of which no special mode is prescribed, shall be sent by prepaid post letter to the last known address of the person to be served therewith.

Registrar to sit in Chambers.

11. The following matters shall, unless the Court shall in any case otherwise direct or allow, be heard and disposed of by the registrar in chambers; that is to say,—

Private examinations under sect. 58 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

Petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy and granting protection.

Making orders under either sects. 40 or 124 of the Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act, 1849, or sect. 137 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

Presiding at first, or any other meeting of creditors. Swearing affidavits.

Giving requisite directions for notices and advertisements, &c.

Auditing and passing accounts of assignees.

Proceedings for declaration and payment of dividends.

Confirming and giving certificate of appointment of a creditor's assignee, under sect. 123 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861."

Any of the following matters, when uncontested, whether before or after the appointment of a creditors' assignee:—

Admitting, expunging, or reducing proofs or claims; ordering payment of rates, taxes, salary or wages, or sum in respect of apprentice fee; ordering amendments, or inspection of copies or extracts, of any proceedings; and taking mortgagee's accounts, and giving leave to mortgagee to bid.

Proceedings up to First Meeting.

12. Every petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be written or printed on parchment or paper, and shall be in the form set forth in the schedule, and, except so far as may be necessary to adapt the printed form to the circumstances of the particular case, no alterations, interlineations, or erasures shall be permitted without the leave of the court, or a registrar thereof, and every such petition shall be attested by the solicitor to the bankrupt.

13. Upon every such petition the registrar, or in his absence his clerk, shall note the precise time of the filing of such petition.

14. Before adjudication of bankruptcy upon any petition, the petitioner shall state on oath, by affidavit, that the several allegations in the petition are true.

15. No adjudication shall be made on the petition of a debtor for adjudication of bankruptcy against himself in the absence of the petitioner, unless the petitioner is in custody, or the registrar shall by special order dispense with his attendance.

16. After adjudication, the court or registrar shall without any application by the bankrupt, appoint a sitting for the bankrupt to surrender and conform, such sitting to be also a public meeting of creditors, for such proceedings as may be taken under the 109th, 110th, and 116th sections of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and such adjudication and meeting shall be advertised in the London Gazette, and one local newspaper only, within seven days after the date of adjudication. The adjudication must be dated of the day on which it is made.

17. The solicitor presenting the petition shall provide and fill up three forms of adjudication, one to be delivered to the bankrupt, one to be filed in court, and the third for transmission to the chief registrar by the registrar of the court.

18. In the adjudication to be made upon a petition, the court or registrar shall grant the bankrupt protection from arrest; and shall indorse thereon a notice to the bankrupt of the time and place of holding the sitting at which he is to surrender and conform as aforesaid; and the registrar shall deliver to the bankrupt a duplicate of the adjudication, and shall make on the adjudication to be filed, a note that he has so delivered the duplicate of the adjudication to the bankrupt. Provided that where the petitioner is not present, the duplicate of the adjudication shall be served on the bankrupt by the high bailiff.

19. Where adjudication of bankruptcy is made against a debtor on his own petition, or against a debtor in gaol without petition, the first meeting of creditors shall be holden within twenty-one days from the day of such adjudication, unless for some special reason it is desirable that it should be held at a greater interval of time from such day.

20. Forthwith after adjudication, the bankrupt shall be required to sign the declaration that he will make true answer to all questions, under sect. 211 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861 and no further declaration need be signed; but the bankrupt may have administered to him a viva voce oath on any subsequent examination.

21. The statement required to be filed in court under sect. 93 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, by every debtor petitioning for adjudication of bankruptcy against himself, and verified by the oath of the petitioner, shall be so filed in duplicate, and verified by affidavit by such debtor, within three days after filing his petition, and shall be in the form specified in the schedule to these Orders annexed; and if such statement be not so filed and verified, the adjudication shall be annulled, unless the court or registrar shall be of opinion that it will be for the benefit of the creditors that it should not be annulled, and thereupon further time for the filing of the statement may be allowed.

22. That every petitioner shall deliver with the statement of his debts, under sect. 93 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, an account in writing, in the form set forth in the schedule, signed by the petitioner, of all his books of account and vouchers, and of the names and residences of his debtors, and the amount of their debts, and of all his real and personal estate and effects (including money) then in his possession or control, or in the possession or control of any other person by his authority, or in trust for him, and the place or places where the same then are believed to be, and whether the same are liable for rent or any other charge, and to whom, by name, and the particulars of the demand, in order that such property may be duly ascertained and given up to the registrar or high bailiff, and that the said account shall be signed and delivered in duplicate, and shall be called the "Estate Paper." The bankrupt shall at the same time deliver to the registrar, his books of account and vouchers.

23. Forthwith after the filing in court of the statement of a person presenting a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against himself, in pursuance of sect. 93 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the registrar shall give the duplicate statement to the high bailiff, who shall thereupon transmit by post a notice, in the form set forth in the schedule, to each creditor named in such statement, who shall be resident within the United Kingdom, informing him of the fact of such petition having been presented, and of the time and place fixed for the first meeting of creditors.

24. The registrar, in performing the duty required of an official assignee by sect. 108 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, or in acting under any order made under sect. 40 of the Bankrupt-law Consolidation Act, 1849, shall act by the high bailiff of the court, who shall, in all respects, but subject to the directions of the Court in any particular case, observe the written directions of the registrar in taking, selling, or retaining possession of the bankrupt's estate, and shall act as his deputy; and after the appointment of the creditors' assignee, the high bailiff shall act under his written instructions in taking, keeping, or discontinuing possession, and at any time that he may be required so to do, by the registrar or creditors' assignee, shall render an account of what he has done.

25. It shall be the duty of the high bailiff to make an inventory of the bankrupt's estate, in cases where such inventory shall be deemed requisite by the registrar. No broker shall be employed for the purpose. Where such inventory has not been made prior to the choice of creditors' assignee, the inventory shall only be made upon an express direction in writing from the creditors' assignee.

26. It shall be the duty of the high bailiff to keep the books lettered "F. and G." in the schedule, and attend at all meetings of the court in matters of bankruptcy; and further, unless it is otherwise by these Orders provided, to serve all orders, summonses, (including summonses to witnesses) and notices, to execute all warrants and processes, to prepare, and cause to be inserted in the London Gazette and newspapers, all advertisements and notices whatsoever, which are to be so inserted; and to do and perform all other things which are required to be done or performed by a messenger of the Court of Bankruptcy.

27. The registrar shall, in all cases, immediately after the filing of the estate paper, apply for the payment of all the debts mentioned therein, and if any of the same are not paid within fourteen days, or a satisfactory arrangement for payment made, he shall make a second application where the debt shall not exceed 10*l.*, and also where it does exceed 10*l.*, if no creditors' assignee have been chosen: and where such two applications are unsuccessful, he may, when sole assignee, by leave of the judge, sue for any debt due to the bankrupt.

28. Where the holding possession of the property of the bankrupt taken possession of under sect. 108 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, until the choice of assignees would, in the judgment of the court or registrar, be prejudicial to the bankrupt's estate, then the court or registrar shall order the sale or other disposition of such property.

Pauper Petitions.

29. A debtor desirous of petitioning for an adjudication of bankruptcy against himself in formâ pauperis, shall petition that county court within the district of which he shall be confined.

30. After the filing of a petition for an adjudication of bankruptcy by a debtor in formâ pauperis, the registrar shall give notice to the execution, and detaining creditors of petitioner in the form in the schedule annexed.

Gaol Adjudications.

31. The notice of an order for a registrar to attend at a gaol for the examination of prisoners, in pursuance of sect. 101 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, required to be given to the gaoler, and to the execution and detaining creditors of such prisoners, shall be sent by post by the registrar of the court, under cover to their respective solicitors, and such notice shall be in the form set forth in the schedule.

32. On the registrar attending at the gaol, he is to examine, on the day on which he so attends, and so on from day to day, those prisoners named in the gaoler's return, who shall have been in prison fourteen days at least, exclusive of the day on which they were first imprisoned.

33. In acting under sect. 101 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the registrar, if he make adjudication, shall direct the proceedings under the same, to be prosecuted in that court of bankruptcy, or county court, to which the bankrupt could have presented his petition, had he not been in custody.

34. Where an adjudication is made under the 99th or the 101st sections of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the bankrupt shall file in the court in which the bankruptcy is to be prosecuted, the statement required by sect. 93 of the said act, and the estate paper required by these Orders, within such time as the court, or registrar, shall direct; and the court, or registrar, may grant the bankrupt protection, from time to time, for such number of days, for the purpose of filing the statement, and the estate paper, as the court or registrar may from time to time think fit to grant.

Transfer of Proceedings.

35. Where the proceedings in any bankruptcy are transferred from the court in which the petition was filed, under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, to any other court, the registrar of the first court shall send, by post, the duplicate adjudication, and all the other proceedings, to the registrar of the court to which the proceedings are transferred; and the receipt of such proceedings shall be considered to authorise the latter court to continue such proceedings, without any further order for transferring the proceeding, than is contained in the duplicate adjudication.

36. The receipt of the proceedings in any adjudication transferred from one court to another, under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, shall, similarly, be considered to authorise the Court to proceed without further order.

37. These Orders shall apply to all proceedings transferred to a county court either under sects. 88 or 109 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

First and other Meetings of Creditors.

38. Every creditor may, by letter of attorney, verified by affidavit, according to the form set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed, authorise the registrar or any other person, to represent him at any meeting of creditors, and to vote for him on any question submitted to the creditors at such meeting or on any adjournment thereof, and also in the choice of creditors' assignee, and also at any such meeting or adjourned meeting to accept, on his behalf, of the appointment of creditors' assignee.

39. No creditor shall be considered as "present" or "represented" at any meeting had in the matter of any bankruptcy, or of any other proceeding, until he shall have proved his debt.

40. Where at the first meeting of creditors a resolution is come to under sect. 110 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and no creditors' assignee shall have been appointed at that meeting, the notice of the adjournment of the meeting shall be given by the registrar; but if a creditors' assignee is chosen at such meeting, the notice shall be given by the creditor's assignee.

41. When any resolution shall have been come to for the winding up of a bankrupt's estate, under a deed of arrangement, composition, or otherwise, under the provisions of sect. 185 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, the registrar shall file his report with the proceedings within four days, and the application to be made for confirming the resolution by the bankrupt or any creditor nominated in that behalf at the meeting, shall be made at the next sitting of the court, which shall be held after the meeting at which the resolution was passed.

42. At the first meeting the registrar shall indorse on the duplicate adjudication held by the bankrupt, a notice to the bankrupt of the day, hour, and place on, and at, which he must surrender for the passing of his last examination, and make application for an order of discharge, and also a notice of the statement of accounts he is required to file ten days at least before the day so appointed. The registrar shall renew the bankrupt's protection to the day so appointed, and such protection may be renewed from time to time as the court or registrar shall think fit, until the day on which the order of discharge is to be drawn up.

Accounts to be filed before last Examination.

43. The statement of accounts to be filed under sect. 141 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and these Orders, shall be an account shewing all monies received or paid by the bankrupt during the six months preceding the filing of his petition, and of the monies in his possession on the day on which the account commences; and where at any time since the day on which the earliest debt, still unpaid, was contracted, any money or other property whatever has gone away from the bankrupt by gift, sale, assignment, mortgage, distress, execution, or by any payment other than in the ordinary course of trade, or ordinary domestic expenditure, particulars of such transaction, with dates and items, must be given, and such statement must be duly verified on oath, by affidavit, before it is filed, and such account shall be filed in duplicate.

44. The registrar of a county court shall assist a bankrupt in preparing the statement of his accounts by giving him access, at the office of the court, to his books and papers, and by furnishing him with all information necessary to enable him to comply in such statement, with the requirements of the Court.

45. Notice of any sale to be made by auction or tender under the provisions of sect. 137 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, shall be given in one local newspaper seven clear days at least before the sale shall be held.

46. Where it appears that the debts of the bankrupt exceed in amount 300*l.*, the bankruptcy shall be proceeded with, if the judge is satisfied that the bankrupt had a reasonable and bona fide belief that such debts did not exceed in amount 300*l.*, but if he shall not be so satisfied the adjudication shall be annulled.

Last Examination.

47. Before a bankrupt shall be allowed to pass his last examination, he shall deposit with the registrar of the court the stamped parchment on which the order of discharge, when granted, is to be drawn up, or the sum of 1*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.* for the procuring of the same, and also the necessary sum for the fees and costs of advertising the discharge; and should such discharge not be granted, the stamp or money, as the case may be, shall be returned after the expiration of the thirty days within which the bankrupt may appeal from the decision of the Court, should no appeal be made; and, if an appeal be made, then after the decision of the Court of Appeal shall have been given, should it be against the bankrupt.

Dividends.

48. If, after due notice has been given of the calling of a meeting of creditors for the purpose of declaring a dividend, according to the provisions of sect. 174 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1681, such meeting cannot be held in consequence of no creditor attending at the time and place mentioned in the notice, the creditors' assignee, if one shall have been chosen and be present, and, if not, the registrar, shall then and there declare what part of the net produce of the estate shall be divided amongst the creditors who have proved their debts.

49. The registrar, where no creditors' assignee is appointed, shall, when a dividend has been declared under sect. 174 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, pay the dividends in cash or by cheque.

50. Where a creditors' assignee is appointed, the sum which, at the audit, shall be appropriated for the payment of a dividend, shall be forthwith paid over by the creditors' assignee to the registrar, who shall receive the same, enter, account for, and pay out of the same, the dividends to the respective creditors, in the same manner as he would have done if such sum had come to his hands without the intervention of the creditors' assignee.

Accounts to be kept and examined.

51. The treasurer of the county court in which any bankrupt's estate shall be administered, shall, at the audits of the accounts of such court, examine the accounts in all matters relating to such estate, and the receipts of the several creditors for any dividend which may have been declared, and shall make a report to the judge of the court, should he consider that there is any matter with which he should be made acquainted.

52. The registrar of every court shall keep the books mentioned, and lettered "A., B., C., D., E., and F." in the schedule, and according to the forms therein given.

53. The registrar shall furnish to the treasurer by the 31st of March in every year, a list of the balances in the estate ledger, standing in such ledger on the 31st of December in the preceding year; and the treasurer shall check the list in such way as he may deem necessary, so as to satisfy himself that the receipts have been duly entered and accounted for in the cash book, and posted into the ledger.

54. The registrar shall enter all the fees received by him in the registrar's fee book, and he shall transmit a summary of such fees to the treasurer within seven days after the 31st of December in each year, for the year ended on that day.

55. The treasurer, in examining these books, shall ascertain that the fees taken are those authorised by General Orders, made under the authority of sect. 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

56. The registrar shall pay over to the treasurer, from time to time, as he may be required, the balance of bankruptcy monies in his hands, and shall include the sums so paid over by him to the treasurer in the yearly return directed to be made to the commissioners of audit, of monies paid by him to the treasurer.

57. The treasurer shall ascertain that the charges for the sale of a bankrupt's effects have been rightly made, according to the charges directed to be taken by General Orders, made under the authority of sect. 45 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861.

Proof of Separate Debts.

58. Any separate creditor of any bankrupt shall be at liberty to prove his debt under any adjudication of bankruptcy made against such bankrupt jointly, with any other person or persons. And under every such adjudication, distinct accounts shall be kept of the joint estate, and also of the separate estate or estates of each bankrupt; and the separate estate shall be applied in the first place, in satisfaction of the debts of the separate creditors. And in case there shall be an overplus of the separate estate, such overplus shall be carried to the account of the joint estate. And in case there shall be an overplus of the joint estate, such overplus shall be carried to the account of the separate estates of each bankrupt, in proportion to the right and interest of each bankrupt in the joint estate. And the cost of taking such accounts, shall be paid out of the joint and separate estates respectively, as the Court shall direct.

Taking Accounts of Property Mortgaged.

59. Upon application by any person claiming to be a mortgagee of, or to have security over, any part of the bankrupt's estate or effects, real or personal (whether such mortgage or security shall be by deed or otherwise, and whether the same shall be of a legal or equitable nature), the Court shall proceed to inquire whether such person is such mortgagee, or is entitled to such security, and for what consideration, and under what circumstances such mortgage or security shall have been given, and if it shall be found that such person is such mortgagee, or is entitled to such security, and no sufficient objection shall appear to the title of such person to the sum claimed by him, under such mortgage or security, the Court shall then proceed to take an account of the principal, interest, and costs due upon such mortgage or security, and of the rents and profits, or dividends, interest, or other proceeds received by such person, or by any other person by his order, or for his use, in respect of such mortgage or security, in case he shall have been in possession of the property over which the mortgage or security shall extend, or any part thereof; and the Court shall then cause notice to be given in the London Gazette, and in such other of the public papers as it shall think fit, when and where, and by whom, and in what way, the said property, or the interest therein so mortgaged, or over which the security shall so extend, is to be sold, and such sale shall be made accordingly, and the assignees (unless it be otherwise ordered) shall have the conduct of such sale; but it shall not be imperative on any mortgagee to make such application.

60. All proper parties shall join in the conveyance to the purchaser as the Court shall direct.

61. The monies to arise from such sale shall be applied, in the first place, in payment of the costs, charges, and expenses of the assignees, of, and occasioned by, the application to the court; and of, and attending, such sale, and then in payment and satisfaction of what shall be found due to such mortgagee, or person so having security, for principal, interest, and costs; and the surplus of the said monies (if any) shall be paid to the assignees. But in case the monies to arise from such sale shall be insufficient to pay and satisfy what shall be so found due to such mortgagee or person so having security, then he shall be admitted a creditor for such deficiency, and shall receive the dividends thereon rateably with the other creditors, but not so as to disturb any dividend or dividends then already made.

62. For the better making of such inquiry and taking of such account, and for making a title to the purchaser, all parties to the transaction, or persons capable of giving information, may be examined by the Court on oath upon interrogatories, or otherwise, as it shall think fit, and shall produce before the court upon oath, all deeds, papers, and writings in their respective custody or power, relating to the estate or effects of the bankrupt, as the Court shall direct.

Motion.

63. All applications to the court shall (unless the Court shall in any particular case otherwise direct) be by way of motion, and, if required by the Court, shall be supported by affidavit; but no order affecting any person other than the applicant, shall be made, unless upon the consent of such person duly shewn to the court, or upon proof that notice of the intended motion has been served upon the person to be affected thereby, four clear days at least before the day named in such notice as the day when the motion is to be made. Provided, however, that the Court may, if it shall think fit, in any case where the person to be affected by the order shall not have been duly served with a notice of the motion, grant a rule calling upon such person to be affected by the motion to shew cause, at a day to be named by the Court in such rule, why an order should not be made as required.

64. Every rule to shew cause shall be served upon the party or parties to be affected thereby, four clear days at the least before the day appointed for shewing cause, by serving the same on the person named in the rule, or by leaving the same at his place of abode or business.

Appeals.

65. At or before the time of entering an appeal against a decision or order of the Court, the party intending to appeal shall (in every case not otherwise specially provided for) deposit with the registrar such sum, not being less than 10*l.* and not exceeding 40*l.*, as the Court shall direct, to satisfy, so far as the same may extend, any costs that the appellant may be ordered to pay, and in the absence of any directions of the Court as to the amount of deposit, the sum of 20*l.* shall be so deposited. If it shall appear that there are several respondents in separate interests, the Court, if it shall think fit, may order a separate deposit as to every such respondent.

66. At the time of entering an appeal against the judgment of the Court for the allowance of an order of discharge, or for the refusal or the withholding the same, notice thereof in writing, stating the grounds on which the party appeals, shall be left with the registrar, who shall forthwith enter thereon the time and nature of every such appeal, and shall afterwards file such notice.

67. All affidavits to be made in support of petitions of appeal, against the allowance, refusal, or withholding of any bankrupt's order of discharge, shall be filed at the time of the filing of such petition of appeal.

Costs.

68. Every bill of fees and disbursements, and charges of any solicitor or attorney, messenger, broker, or auctioneer under any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, shall be delivered to the registrar for taxation five clear days at least before the day appointed for an audit; and in default thereof, if the holding of such audit shall be adjourned by reason of such default, such solicitor, attorney, messenger, broker, or auctioneer shall pay the costs occasioned by the adjournment, and the amount thereof shall be deducted from the amount of such bill; and no money shall be paid out of the estate to any solicitor, attorney, messenger, broker, or auctioneer, on account of any fees or disbursements or charges of any bill, until such bill shall have been taxed; and every such solicitor, attorney, messenger, broker, or auctioneer shall at the time of taxation account to the court or registrar for any sum which he may have received from or for the bankrupt, or from any other person by way of deposit or otherwise, in respect of such fees, disbursements, or charges; and the difference between the amount of the bill as taxed, and the amount of the deposit, shall be paid to, or received out of, the estate by the person with whom such deposit has been made, as the case may be.

69. At the first audit, after payment or retainer out of the estate of the bankrupt of all monies duly paid, or costs incurred by the official or creditors' assignee, and of all fees and costs of the officials of the court, and afterwards of the per-centage payable to the official assignee in respect of the realisation of the property, the taxed costs and charges of the bankrupt's solicitor acting in the matter of the bankruptcy shall be paid.

70. In case any joint estate of any bankrupts shall be insufficient to pay any costs or charges necessarily incurred in respect of the same, the Court may order such costs to be paid out of the separate estates of such bankrupts, or of one or any of them; or the Court may order the costs necessarily incurred for any separate estate to be paid out of such joint estate, if the said costs were incurred with reasonable probability of benefit to the joint estate.

Stamps.

71. Every officer of the court who shall receive any document to which a stamp shall be affixed, or upon which a stamp shall be impressed, shall immediately, upon the receipt of such document, deface the stamp thereon, by writing across the stamp the name of the bankrupt; and no such document shall be filed or delivered until the stamp thereon shall have been defaced in manner aforesaid, and it shall be the duty of the party presenting or receiving such document, to see that such defacement has been duly made.

Examination of Bankrupt.

72. If the court or registrar shall in any case be of opinion that it would be desirable that a person should be appointed to take down the answers of the bankrupt, it shall be competent for the court or registrar to make such an appointment; and every person so appointed shall be considered to be a shorthand writer under sect. 61 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and shall be paid a sum not exceeding one guinea out of the estate, as may be allowed by the court or registrar; and if the estate be insufficient, then the registrar of the court shall pay the same, and such payment shall be treated as a disbursement of the court, and shall be repaid to the registrar by the treasurer at the next audit.

Amendments.

73. In any proceeding before the court or registrar, the court or registrar may allow any amendments which in the judgment of the court or registrar are not material to the merits of the case, on such terms as may be ordered.

Costs of Printing, &c.

74. The costs of printing and postages in any matters of bankruptcy in the county courts, and the fee to, and costs of, the gaoler for bringing up a prisoner petitioning in formâ pauperis, or adjudicated bankrupt by a registrar, under sect. 101 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, and the cost of all necessary advertisements in the London Gazette and newspapers, in proceedings on an adjudication of a pauper prisoner, whether on petition, or under sect. 101 in prison, shall be defrayed out of the proceeds of the bankrupt's estate, and when such estate is insufficient to pay such costs, the same shall be repaid to the officer incurring the expense by the treasurer of the court.

75. The account books shall be paid for by the treasurer of the court, and also the forms in the schedule numbered 19 to 28, both inclusive, 44, 45, 46, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 75, 76, 77, and 81.

Trial for Misdemeanour.

76. When the Court shall appoint a day for the trial of a bankrupt on a charge of misdemeanour, and the bankrupt shall require a jury for the purpose of such trial, the registrar shall summon such jury from the list delivered to him by the sheriff, under the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95; and the proceedings at the trial as to the calling, impannelling, challenging, and swearing the jury shall be in the manner provided for the trial of causes, under the provisions of the 72nd and 73rd sections of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, except that the number of the jury impannelled and sworn shall be twelve.

Remuneration of Managers.

77. Whenever a manager shall be appointed under sect. 122 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, to collect and wind up an estate, the remuneration to be paid out of the estate to such person shall be clearly stated in the appointment; and before any money is paid out of the estate to such person, the charges made by such person shall be taxed by the registrar of the court, in accordance with the terms of the appointment, which shall for such purpose be produced to the registrar, and if the amount or mode of remuneration is not stated in the appointment, no allowance shall be made to such manager.

RULES, ORDERS, AND FORMS

FOR REGULATING THE PRACTICE OF THE COUNTY COURTS, 1863.

IN pursuance of the powers vested in us by the act 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108, we, John Bury Daseant, Douglas Denon Heath, John Worledge, Rupert Alfred Kettle, and William Furner, have framed the following Rules, Orders, and Forms, as amendments of, and additions to, the Rules, Orders, and Forms now in use in the county courts, and we do hereby certify the same to the Lord Chancellor accordingly.

J. B. DASEANT.
D. D. HEATH.
J. WORLEDGE.
RUPERT A. KETTLE.
WILLIAM FURNER.

1. The rules of practice which came into force in all county courts on the 1st January, 1857, and are now in force in such courts, may be cited for all purposes as "The County Court Rules, 1857," and these Rules may be cited for all purposes as "The County Court Rules, 1863."

2. The County Court Rules, 1857, which are numbered respectively 6, 12, 13, 59, 123, and 171, the forms 54 and 55 annexed thereto, and the rules which came into force in all county courts respectively on the 3rd January, 1859, and the 20th February, 1863, shall cease to be used.

Registrar's Duties.

3. The offices of the county courts may, from time to time, be closed by special order of the Lord Chancellor on such days as may be mentioned in any such order.

4. The registrar shall keep an office at each place where the court of which he is registrar is holden, and such office shall be kept open every day from ten o'clock in the morning until four o'clock in the afternoon, except on Christmas-day, Good Friday, the day next after Good Friday, or any day appointed by royal proclamation for a public fast, humiliation, or thanksgiving, and except also on Saturdays, on which day the office may be closed at one o'clock in the afternoon; provided, that where Saturday is the market day of the town in which the court is holden, the office shall not be so closed, but may be closed at one o'clock on some other day of the week instead of Saturday, which day shall be fixed upon for such purpose by the judge, and shall not afterwards be changed except by his leave: provided that an office need not be kept open in more than one place within the district of a court, although the court is holden at more than one place within the district, unless the Lord Chancellor shall otherwise order: provided also, that during the days on which in such district the court is held in any place other than in the place where the registrar's office is situate, or on which an office is open at such other place, the office may be closed on such days in the place in which the office is required generally to be kept open.

5. Where a summons is required to be served in a foreign district, the registrar shall transmit the same, and a copy thereof, to the bailiff of the foreign court on the same day as the plaint is entered, with a letter, according to the form annexed to the County Court Rules, 1857, unless the judge of the home court shall order the summons in that particular case to be served by the bailiff of the home court; and if the summons be returned to the registrar by the bailiff of the foreign court, not served, the registrar shall forthwith give notice to the plaintiff of such non-service: provided, that if any delay shall arise in the transmission of the summons to the bailiff of the foreign court, he shall acquaint the treasurer of the foreign court of the fact, and such treasurer shall report the same to the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury.

6. Monies to be paid into court under the order of the judge may be so paid, during office hours, on every day on which such office is open.

High Bailiff's Duties.

7. Where the bailiff of a foreign court does not comply with the requisitions of No. 26 of the County Court Rules, 1857, it shall be the duty of the registrar of the home court to make a note of such neglect to the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury.

8. The office of the high bailiff of a county court in which the plaints entered therein shall exceed six thousand in the year, shall be open to the public for the purpose of answering inquiries, giving information, or for any other purpose connected with the duties of the bailiff during the same hours as the office of the registrar of the court is directed by any rule of practice to be kept open.

9. In all cases where a summons cannot be served personally, it shall be left at the residence of the defendant mentioned therein, unless the bailiff shall ascertain that the defendant has removed to some other place within the district; and whenever the bailiff's return of service of such summons shall make it doubtful whether the service will be held sufficient, the high bailiff shall send the plaintiff a notice in the form in the schedule hereunto annexed.

Service of Summons.

10. No summons, order, or other process or notice, shall be served on Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, the day next after Good Friday, or any day appointed by royal proclamation for a public fast, humiliation, or thanksgiving, or on any day on which the offices of the courts shall be closed by order of the Lord Chancellor; but such days shall be counted in the computation of the time required by these Rules in respect of such service.

Hearing.

11. When, at the hearing of any plaint, it shall appear that an action for the same cause is pending in any other court of record, the judge shall order the plaint to be struck out, unless the plaintiff shall undertake to discontinue the action in such other court, before a day to be named, to which the hearing shall be adjourned, and unless before such adjourned hearing such action shall have been discontinued, the plaint shall then be struck out.

Costs.

12. In all cases where a plaintiff claims more than 20*l.*, and recovers more than 5*l.*, but less than 20*l.*, the scale upon which the costs shall be taxed shall be in the discretion of the court.

13. On the hearing of a judgment summons, where a warrant against the goods has been issued, the costs of such warrant shall not be allowed as against the judgment debtor, unless the judge be satisfied that there was a reasonable cause for issuing the warrant.

14. The costs of a judgment summons shall not be allowed against the judgment debtor, unless some order shall have been made thereon. When an order is made on a judgment summons, the judge may, in his discretion, allow the costs, as against the judgment debtor, of any previous judgment summonses which have not been served through the judgment debtor having evaded service.

Judgment Summons.

15. When an application is made by a judgment creditor for the issue of a judgment summons, the applicant shall be asked to state the ground or grounds upon which he relies to obtain the committal of the judgment debtor, and after the registrar shall have struck from the form of application for the summons in the schedule hereunto annexed all the grounds therein mentioned, upon which the applicant does not rely, the form shall be handed to the applicant, and he shall be required to read and sign the same; and if the applicant be an agent, the form of the application shall be given to him to obtain the signature of the judgment creditor thereto, which signature shall be witnessed by the agent. Where the ground relied on is not that the judgment debtor has had, since the judgment, the means and ability to satisfy the judgment, then the undertaking in reference to such ground shall be struck out.

16. Every judgment summons shall be issued ten clear days at least before the day on which the judgment debtor is required to appear to it, unless the person entering the summons shall, at the time of issuing it, inform the registrar that the plaintiff will be prepared at the hearing to prove one of the facts mentioned in No. 117 of the County Court Rules, 1857, as grounds for short service.

17. The hearing of judgment summonses may be adjourned from time to time.

Commitment.

18. When a warrant of commitment for non-payment of money is issued, the defendant may, at any time before his body is delivered into the custody of the gaoler, pay to the bailiff the amount indorsed on the warrant as that on the payment of which he may be discharged; and on receiving such amount the bailiff shall discharge the defendant, and shall, within twenty-four hours after receiving such amount, pay over the same to the registrar.

Recovery of Tenements.

19. Where, on the hearing of a plaint for the recovery of a tenement, any order for the payment of money is made on the defendant, Form 93, annexed to the County Court Rules, 1857, shall be sent to the defendant in the mode prescribed, for the service of ordinary orders of the court.

Notices, &c.

20. In all cases where anything is required by the rules of practice to be done within a period of twenty-four hours, or within a period of forty-eight hours, no part of Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, the day next after Good Friday, or of any day appointed by royal proclamation for a public fast, humiliation, or thanksgiving, or any day on which the offices of the courts shall be closed by order of the Lord Chancellor, shall be included in the computation of such period.

C. D., defendant.

I apply for the issue of a judgment summons against the said defendant, and I state that I rely on the following grounds for obtaining an order of committal of the judgment debtor; that is to say—

That the judgment debtor contracted the said debt under false pretences, or by means of fraud or breach of trust, or without reasonable expectation of being able to pay the same;

That the judgment debtor has made a gift or transfer of part of his property with intent to defraud his creditors;

That the judgment debtor has charged, or removed, or concealed part of his property with intent to defraud his creditors;

That the judgment debtor has had, since the judgment was obtained against him, sufficient means and ability to pay the sums directed to be paid under the judgment;

And I undertake to prove, to the satisfaction of the judge at the hearing, that the judgment debtor has been able since the judgment to pay the amount ordered by the court as it became due.

I am aware that if I do not prove the same accordingly, that I shall have to pay the costs of this summons.

A. B., judgment creditor.

[To be added where application made by agent.]

Signed by the said judgment creditor before me,
C. D., agent to such creditor.]

In the [title of court ordering committal.] (Seal).

No. of plaint.

No. of judgment summonses.

No. of warrant.

Between A. B., plaintiff, and

C. D., defendant.

To the high bailiff and others the bailiffs of the said court, and all peace officers within the jurisdiction of the said court, to the governor or keeper of the [prison used by the court.]

Whereas the plaintiff obtained a judgment [or order] against the defendant in the County Court of —, holden at —, on the — day of —, 186—, for the payment of £—, for debt [or damages] and costs, upon which judgment [or order], and the subsequent process issued thereon, the sum of £— was, at the date of the issuing of the summons hereinafter mentioned, and still is due:

And whereas a summons was, at the instance of the plaintiff, duly issued out of this court, by which the defendant was required to appear at this court on the — day of —, 186—, to answer such questions as might be put to him pursuant to sect. 98 of stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, in relation to such debt [or damages], which summons was proved to this court to have been personally and duly served on the defendant:

And whereas this court, at the hearing of the said summons, ordered that the defendant should be committed to prison for — days, for [as the case may be] refusing to be sworn;

[or, for refusing to answer such questions as aforesaid to the satisfaction of the judge;]

[or, for contracting the said debt under false pretences, or by means of fraud or breach of trust, or without reasonable expectation of being able to pay the same;]

[or, for making a gift or transfer of part of his property with intent to defraud his creditors;]

[or, for having charged, or removed, or concealed part of his property with intent to defraud his creditors;]

[or, for not having satisfied the said judgment and costs, having had sufficient means and ability so to do;]

These are, therefore, to require you, the said high bailiff, bailiffs, and others, to take the defendant, and to deliver him to the governor or keeper of the [prison used by the court], and you, the said governor or keeper, to receive the defendant, and him safely keep in the said prison for — days from the arrest under this warrant, or until he shall be sooner discharged by due course of law.

Dated this [insert date of order] day of —, 186—.

SHIPPING LAW.

In 8vo., price 20s. cloth, lettered.

THE SHIPPING LAW MANUAL: a concise

Treatise on the Law governing the Interests of Shipowners, Merchants, Masters, Seamen, and other Persons connected with British Ships. Together with the Acts of Parliament, Forms, and Precedents relating to the subject. Being especially intended for popular use in Seaport Towns. By W. T. GREENHOW, of the Middle Temple, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"The 'Shipping Law Manual,' by Mr. W. T. Greenhow, brings into a popular shape, and to the latest date, the entire body of legal regulations affecting the shipping trade of the country alike in relation to owners, merchants, masters, and seamen, and is especially adapted for ordinary use by all persons connected with the business of seaport towns."—Times, Jan. 31, 1863.

"The object of the author of this book is to popularise the Law of Merchant Shipping, and to compress within the compass of a single volume all that is necessary to be known by those directly interested in British navigation. It was no easy task to condense and arrange this mass of legislation, so as to make it intelligible to the general reader. But Mr. Greenhow has achieved it, and placed within reach of every one connected with shipping a valuable compendium of the law relating to that branch of industry."—Shipping and Mercantile Gazette.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, DECEMBER 12, 1863.

We noticed in our last number, ante, p. 428, the result of the meeting of the Bar, convened by the Attorney-General, in consequence of a requisition set on foot by Mr. Daniel, Q. C., and numerous signed by its members, to consider the state of law reporting. Two resolutions were then passed. 1. "That the present system of preparing, editing, and publishing the reports of judicial decisions in this country requires amendment." 2. "That a committee of members of the Bar be appointed to consider the best means of improving the system of preparing, editing, and publishing the reports of judicial decisions, and to report thereon to a public meeting of the Bar." A committee was appointed accordingly, the names of which are there given.

Looking to the form of these resolutions, and the language held by the different speakers, it would seem that, while there was an almost unanimous feeling in the members that the present state of the reporting system loudly calls for amendment, they were by no means unanimous as to what the amendment should be. One speaker, indeed, Mr. Ince, after laying down that the general public had nothing to do with the question, and that the solicitors were interested in it as well as the Bar, assured the meeting that "the profession had every reason to be satisfied with the present reports; that they combined the requisites of accuracy, expedition, and cheapness, and it was not essential that they should be single." He also said, and this is significant, that they must bear in mind the interests which, during the last thirty or forty years, had grown up under the system of competition. The meeting thought very differently, and repeatedly interrupted the speaker with marks of impatience, which we much regret; for however we dissent from the views of Mr. Ince, every shade of opinion is entitled to a fair hearing on such an occasion, and the meeting that refuses to accord it derogates not a little from the moral weight of any decision to which it may come.

The present unfortunate state of things is owing to the operation of a multitude of causes. Many are ready to say that the blame rests altogether with the regular reporters, and we admit that a portion of it is fairly chargeable to that quarter. Some of them have grievously offended by the prolixity of their reports, which are filled with every sort of unnecessary matter—facts and documents set out at needless and embarrassing length, authorities quoted too fully, arguments of counsel needlessly expanded. Others have been dilatory in the publication of their reports, and others have injured themselves and the system by their needless expense. And lastly, the reports of some are prepared with a carelessness, and sometimes even display an amount of inaccuracy, which is utterly inexcusable.

Be, however, the faults of the regular reporters what they may, the irregular reports have contributed their full share to the present chaos and mischief. Whatever may be said of individuals, the regular reports, taken as a whole, are very superior to the irregular ones in point of fullness and accuracy. It would, indeed, be a scandal and absurdity if this were otherwise, when we consider the numerous advantages the former possess, in time to publish their reports, in assistance from the Bench, and general prestige; and their infinitely greater responsibility. It should not be forgotten, that the regular reports are the recognised records, so to speak, of our tribunals, to deliver to the present, and hand down to all future time, the decisions of our judges on matters of law—decisions which, as is well known, have, in our jurisprudence, the force of law, and are, therefore, of infinitely greater importance than similar decisions in countries which are governed by a written law. Compared with these, the irregular reporters exhibit a want of sustained exertion. Individual cases among them will often be found well reported, but these are mixed up with others often far below mediocrity. Independent of more positive errors, one of the vices of this kind of reporting is, that the work is half done. The decision of a Court may be given rightly, and perhaps some of the reasons on which it is founded, but the rest are omitted; while some only of the authorities cited are mentioned. This latter is a great vice in a report; because in future cases, if there appears to be a conflict in the authorities, it is matter of the greatest importance to ascertain whether an older case, apparently overruled by a more recent one, was under the notice of the Court by which that case was decided. Nor is this all. Some irregular reports advertise triumphantly the number of cases reported by them; and others, resolved not to be outdone, proceed on the principle of reporting, whether of the least value or not, every case which is reported by a rival. If number is the test of excellence, an office copy of the Registrar's or Master's Book is the best of reports, and all others are superfluous. It may, however, be fairly questioned whether, as we noticed on a former occasion (ante, p. 160), the undue number of our reporters at the present day, or the excessive number of cases reported by them, is chargeable solely to the reporters. We believe that one great source of the evil will be found in the style of discussion now adopted. Lord Coke correctly says (4 Rep. 94 a.), that the party who would have the benefit of precedents must search for them, for the Court will not search for them; and if no precedents, or no sufficient precedents, are adduced, the Court will give judgment according to law and reason. A contrary course seems pursued among us. Cases are rarely discussed on principle, and the efforts of Court and counsel seem directed almost exclusively to finding out some authority, or semblance of authority, bearing on the question; for which purpose the loosest dicta of judges;—dicta which ought never to have been reported, either as being ill considered in themselves, or inconsistent with principle, or, if true, are only so when taken with their context;—are seized on with avidity, and too often form the foundation of decisions. Of course, if counsel choose so to argue, and the bench choose so to decide, it is not for us to complain; but it is unjust to cast blame on the reporters for doing that which they are encouraged, and even incited to do.

This eagerness of modern judges to decide, if possible, every case upon some authority, or semblance of authority, proceeds, we believe, in part at least, from the fact of their being overworked. In the early part of the present century there were only twelve judges of the Common-law Courts at Westminster, and although three were added in 1830, the Welsh jurisdiction was then joined to the English, and the population of both countries has immensely increased since that time. What with the regular duties in open court, and scarcely less important duties at chambers, attendance at the House of Lords and the Central Criminal Court, on the Circuits, both winter and summer, &c., a modern judge has not time to sift every case as it deserves, and is compelled to decide many at a kind of haphazard. We do not say this in any disparagement of those eminent persons, who, indeed, do the best they can under the circumstances—the vice is in the system, and in its reformation the remedy must be sought.

What, then, is the remedy for the evils in the reporting system? This we cheerfully leave in the hands of the committee. According to Mr. Daniel, Q. C., and several others, it consists in making reporting a State affair, constituting a set of reporters paid by the State. Some advocates of this plan go so far as to require all reports to be revised by the judges, and prohibit absolutely the citing of any other reports. Mr. Denman, Q. C., M. P., a member of the committee, strenuously denies all this, and prefers a system of free competition. "Judges," he says, "are but men, and there is no greater check upon them than the knowledge that they are watched by the intelligent men who report their decisions, and who are too independent to allow their reports to be tampered or interfered with." And both he and Mr. Malins, Q. C., M. P., broadly intimated, that although there are evils in the existing system, it is difficult, if not impossible, to find an effective remedy. We hope that the labours of the committee will give some practical disproof of this notion. Mr. Edward Webster stated his views to be against creating a monopoly, but declared, that what the country wants is a Minister of Justice, or some other authority, to superintend the reports of case law—a plan which, as appears to us, would create a monopoly of the very worst kind; for we presume, that the cases which have been revised, and declared to be law by the Minister of Justice or his satellites, would be the only authorities permitted to be cited; they would be in the position of the relic of a saint, on the genuineness of which the Church has put her seal, and then woe to those who display skepticism.

The Bar having complained for many years past of the state of the reporting system, has now the means of reforming it. At a meeting called by their head, to which every member was invited, and at which about 500 attended, a committee has been appointed (we may say unanimously, for not a single name proposed was objected to, and one only was added, apparently by general consent) to investigate the whole subject, and suggest a remedy. We hope the occasion will not be lost, and that the committee, avoiding all crude theories and ignes fatui, of which there are many abroad, will produce some plan worthy alike of themselves and the profession from which they derive their powers. Should this opportunity be let slip, it is unlikely that any other will present itself, and the reporting system will pass from the hands of the Bar to receive a more energetic, though, in all probability, less effectual and agreeable reform, at the hands of the Executive or the Legislature.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal granting the dignity of a Knight of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Gillery Pigott, Esq., one of the Barons of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION.—HILARY TERM, 1864.

THE Council of Legal Education have approved of the following rules for the public examination of the students.

The attention of the students is requested to the following rules of the Inns of Court:—

"As an inducement to students to propose themselves for examination, studentships shall be founded of fifty guineas per annum each, to continue for a period of three years, and one such studentship shall be conferred on the most distinguished student at each public examination; and further, the examiners shall select and certify the names of three other students who shall have passed the next best examinations; and the Inns of Court to which such students belong may, if desired, dispense with any terms, not exceeding two, that may remain to be kept by such students previously to their being called to the Bar. Provided that the examiners shall not be obliged to confer or grant any studentship or certificate unless they shall be of opinion that the examination of the students they select has been such as entitles them thereto."

"At every call to the Bar those students who have passed a public examination, and either obtained a studentship or a certificate of honour, shall take rank in seniority over all other students who shall be called on the same day."

"No students shall be eligible to be called to the Bar who shall not either have attended during one whole year the lectures of two of the Readers, or have satisfactorily passed a public examination."

RULES FOR THE PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR HONOURS, OR CERTIFICATES ENTITLING STUDENTS TO BE CALLED TO THE BAR.

An examination will be held in next Hilary Term, to which a student of any of the Inns of Court who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship or honours, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name at the treasurer's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs on or before Friday, the 1st day of January next; and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship or other honourable distinction, or whether he is merely desirous of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar.

The examination will commence on Thursday, the 7th day of January next, and will be continued on the Friday and Saturday following.

It will take place in the Benchers' Reading-room of Lincoln's-inn; and the doors will be closed ten minutes after the time appointed for the commencement of the examination.

The examination by printed questions will be conducted in the following order:—

Thursday morning, the 7th January, at half-past nine, on Constitutional Law and Legal History; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on Equity.

Friday morning, the 8th January, at half-past nine, on Common Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on the Law of Real Property, &c.

Saturday morning, the 9th January, at half-past nine, on Jurisprudence and the Civil Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, a paper will be given to the students including questions bearing upon all the foregoing subjects of examination.

The oral examination will be conducted in the same order, during the same hours, and on the same subjects, as those already marked out for the examination by printed questions, except that on Saturday afternoon there will be no oral examination.

The oral examination of each student will be conducted apart from the other students; and the character of that examination will vary, according as the student is a candidate for honours or a studentship, or desires simply to obtain a certificate.

The oral examination and printed questions will be founded on the books below mentioned, regard being had, however, to the particular object with a view to which the student presents himself for examination.

In determining the question whether a student has passed the examination in such a manner as to entitle him to be called to the Bar, the examiners will principally have regard to the general knowledge of law and jurisprudence which he has displayed.

A student may present himself at any number of examinations until he shall have obtained a certificate.

Any student who shall obtain a certificate may present himself a second time for examination as a candidate for the studentship, but only at one of the three examinations immediately succeeding that at which he shall have obtained such certificate; provided, that if any student so presenting himself shall not succeed in obtaining the studentship, his name shall not appear in the list.

Students who have kept more than eleven terms shall not be admitted to an examination for the studentship.

The READER ON CONSTITUTIONAL LAW and LEGAL HISTORY will expect the candidates for honours to be well acquainted with the origin and progress of our Laws and Constitution, as explained in chap. 8, part 3, of Hallam's History of the Middle Ages.

He will expect them to be well acquainted with the chapters in Hallam's Constitutional History which give an account of the reigns of Henry VIII, of Elizabeth, the Stuarts, William III, and Anne; with the State Trials of persons eminent in our history, or remarkable for any other reason, from the accession of James I to the year 1747; with the History of the Law of Treason and the Law of Libel.

All candidates will be required to know the leading events in English History from the Conquest to the Accession of George III; to have an accurate knowledge of the reigns of the Stuart Kings, of Magna Charta, the Petition of Right, the Bill of Rights, the Act of Settlement, and the Toleration Act.

The READER ON EQUITY proposes to examine in the following books:—

1. Haynes's Outlines of Equity; Smith's Manual of Equity Jurisprudence; Hunter's Elementary View of the Proceedings in a Suit in Equity, part 1.

2. The Cases and Notes contained in the 1st volume of White & Tudor's Leading Cases; the Act to further amend the Law of Property and to relieve Trustees, 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35; the Act to further amend the Law of Property, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38; the Act to give to Trustees, Mortgagees, and others, certain Powers now commonly inserted in Settlements, Mortgages, and Wills, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145; the Act to regulate the Procedure in the High Court of Chancery and the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Lancaster, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 42; the General Orders of the Court of Chancery of the 1st February, 1861, and of the 5th February, 1861 (7 Jur., N. S., part 2, p. 58); Mitford on Pleadings in the Court of Chancery—Introduction, c. 1, ss. 1, 2; c. 1, s. 3 (the first six pages); c. 2, s. 1; c. 2, s. 2, part 1 (the first three pages); c. 2, s. 2, part 2 (the first two pages); c. 2, s. 2, part 3; c. 3.

Candidates for certificates of having passed a satisfactory examination will be expected to be well acquainted with the books mentioned in the first of the above classes.

Candidates for a studentship or honours will be examined in the books mentioned in the two classes.

The READER on the LAW of REAL PROPERTY, proposes to examine in the following books and subjects:—

1. Joshua Williams on the Law of Real Property, 6th ed.

2. Legal and Equitable Interests; Josiah W. Smith on Real and Personal Property, pp. 234–287, 2nd ed.

3. Vested and Contingent Bequests; Stapleton v. Cheales (Pre. Ch. 317); Hanson v. Graham (6 Ves. 239), and the Notes to those Cases; Tudor's Real Property Leading Cases, pp. 724–762, 2nd ed.

4. The Fines and Recoveries Abolition Act, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, and the Notes to that Act; Shelford's Real Property Statutes, 7th ed.

5. The Nature and Effects of Tenure; Hayes on Conveyancing, vol. 1, c. 1, pp. 1–31, 5th ed.

Candidates for honours or the studentship will be examined in all the foregoing books and subjects; candidates for a certificate in those under heads 1, 2, and 3.

The READER ON CIVIL LAW and JURISPRUDENCE proposes to examine in the following books and subjects:—

1. Justinian's Institutes, book 2, with the Notes of Ortolan or Sandars.

2. Mackeldeii—Systema Juris Romani—Pars Specialis, lib. 1, § 208–327 (pp. 227–338, ed. Lips. 1847).

4. Wheaton's Elements of International Law (ed. 1888); part 4, c. 1, Commencement of War, and its immediate effects.

5. Austin, Province of Jurisprudence Defined. Lectures I and II.

Candidates for honours will be examined in the whole of the above subjects; but candidates for a pass certificate will be examined in 1, 4, and 5 only.

The READER ON COMMON LAW proposes to examine in the following books and subjects:—

Candidates for a pass certificate will be examined in—

1. The ordinary Steps and Course of Pleading in an Action.

2. The Law of Contracts, so far as set forth in Broom's Commentaries (2nd ed.), book 2, omitting cc. 4 and 6.

3. Selwyn's Nisi Prius (12th ed.). Titles—“Assault and Battery,” “Deceit,” “Libel,” “Trespass,” and “Trover.”

4. Archbold's Criminal Pleading, 15th ed. (by Welsby), book 2, part 1, ss. 1–3, “Of Larceny, Embezzlement, and Cheating.”

Candidates for the studentship and honours will be examined in 1, 3, and 4, supra, and also in—

5. The under-mentioned cases, with the notes appended to them, contained in Smith's Selection of Leading Cases (last ed.), vol. 2:—Cutter v. Powell; Ehous v. Maue; Marriot v. Hampton; Pasley v. Freeman; Vicars v. Wilcocks.

6. Broom's Legal Maxims, c. 5 (3rd ed.), “Fundamental Legal Principles;” c. 8, “The Interpretation of Deeds and Written Instruments.”

7. Smith's Mercantile Law, 6th ed. (by Dowdeswell), book 1, “Of Mercantile Persons.”

8. Taylor on Evidence (3rd ed.), part 1, "Nature and Principles of Evidence."

Just published, in 8vo., price 12s. cloth.

THE LAW of COPYRIGHT in WORKS of LITERATURE and ART, and in the Application of Designs. With the Statutes relating thereto. By CHARLES PALMER PHILIPS, of Lincoln's-inn, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"Mr. Phillips has shown, not only great diligence in collecting cases bearing upon the various topics which he has treated, but considerable judgment in the manner in which he has dealt with them. He has spared no pains to make his work reliable as a legal text-book, and at the same time equally useful to publishers, authors, artists, and other persons who are interested in works of literature, art, or design. In a word, such a book has long been wanted, and Mr. Phillips has given abundant proof of his ability to meet the desideratum."—Solicitors' Journal, Nov. 15, 1863.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, DECEMBER 19, 1863.

HOWEVER much opinions may differ with regard to the views propounded by Mr. Daniel in his pamphlet on the subject of law reporting, and his speech upon the same subject at the meeting which recently took place in Lincoln's-inn Hall, there can be little doubt that he deserves the gratitude of all interested in the subject, for the manner in which he has brought it forward, by appealing to the whole body of the Bar as constituting the persons most interested in the solution of the questions which it involves.

The meeting very wisely, we think, referred the whole matter to a committee, for it is obvious, that so large a number of men as those constituting the Bar, holding, as they do, views so widely differing from each other, would never have been able, in the first instance, to arrive at so sound a conclusion as a committee, composed of part of their members. The report of the committee, when it is made, will, we presume, be subjected to a searching examination at a meeting of the Bar. But we would suggest, that if such meeting is called, the arrangements should, in some respects, differ from those of the last. It should be convened at an earlier hour, and the speeches of members in support of the report should not be drawn out to such great length as to leave no time or opportunity for those who do not agree with it, altogether or in part, fairly to lay before the meeting their objections or criticisms.

The great question before the committee will be, whether reports of cases ought to be considered as merchantable articles, to be produced, sold, and cited in our courts of law and equity (subject only to the restriction of their having attached to them, as a guarantee for their accuracy, the name of a member of the Bar); or whether, at any rate, so far as their citation as authorities in our courts is concerned, the reporting of law cases is to be considered as being the proper subject for a monopoly; whether it be carried on under the sanction of the Bar, or under the sole protection and at the expense of the State.

The evil of having so many series of reports is, we think, admitted by all persons; nor do we think that any persons can doubt that the evil originated with, and was occasioned by, those who are called the authorised reporters. If they had supplied the public and the Profession with the reports of cases within a reasonable time after their decision—if the reports had been themselves accurate and succinct, and supplied to their readers at a moderate price—we should, in all probability, never have had what are termed unauthorised or irregular reports. The great defects of the authorised reports—the neglect of their assumed duties by the authorised reporters—have alone called into existence other reporters, who (whatever may be their faults) have in a great measure supplied the wants occasioned by the defects and negligence of their more expensive and tardy competitors. We have, indeed, heard it suggested, and we think with some apparent show of reason, that the authorised reporters are themselves the sole obstacle to the needful improvements in our system of reporting, and that if they were suppressed, the Profession would at once have all that they want.

Whatever alteration takes place in the system of the authorised reporting, it must be such as will assimilate the authorised to the best of the unauthorised reports. In the latter the reader finds unity of design and management; in the former, nothing but irregularity and confusion; sometimes as many as three series of authorised reports, with many intervening years between them, are coming out at tardy intervals in the same court; sometimes gaps are left never (except from other sources) to be supplied; cases are reported as decided by inferior Courts, but their reversal, either entire or partial (except from other sources), may never appear. Now, all this the authorised reporters by imitating the example of their unauthorised brethren, might have cured—they might, by arrangements among themselves, have appointed proper editors to overlook their labours; they might have been punctual in the performance of their duties; and when they found reporting not sufficiently remunerative, in comparison with the employment of their time in strictly professional pursuits, they might and ought, whenever they found they could not adequately fulfil the duties attached to them, resign their posts in favour of those who could and would do so.

It would, of course, be too strong an act to suppress the authorised reports; but it is said, and said also with great appearance of probability, that if no one interferes in their favour, either by making the reporters the stipendiaries of the Bar or the Government, they will, should they not entirely alter their system, or rather entire want of system, in the mode we have pointed out, most effectually suppress themselves. It is, in fact, pretty well known, that the circulation of the authorised reports has for some years rapidly decreased, that it is still decreasing, and will decrease.

Whatever resolution, therefore, the committee of the Bar, or the Bar itself, may ultimately arrive at, as to the respective merits and demerits of the authorised and unauthorised reports, it should be borne in mind that the latter were called into existence by the defaults of the former; that they have supplied (with certain improvements which may doubtless be made) models for a complete system of reporting, under adequate and proper revision; that it would be scarcely treating the unauthorised reporters, or the publishers who have embarked their capital in their support, with ordinary fairness, if, in some manner or other, they do not receive compensation, or that interests which have grown up to supply the laches of others, should be forfeited for the benefit of the wrongdoers. If, however, the authorised reports are simply put upon a better footing, whether under the supervision of the Bar or of the Government, but no monopoly is created in their favour, then the other reporters will have no just cause to complain, if, in an equal and open competition, their place is supplied by the authorised reports, and their labours are consequently rendered unnecessary.

With regard to the authorised reports, there are certain resolutions to which we hope the Bar will ultimately arrive, first, that the reporters ought neither to be appointed by, nor to be in any way dependent upon, the judges to whose courts they are attached; their appointment, like that of the judges, should be during good behaviour—their presence in court upon all occasions should be imperative, for it is absurd to suppose that a reporter can make a proper report of cases which he never heard, and for the manufacturing of which he depends solely upon borrowed briefs, arguments picked up second-hand from casual bystanders, or hashed up from other reports, from remarks in the judgments, or invented from a hasty consideration of the cases said to have been, and which, perhaps, may have been, actually cited.

Next, cases should not be thrust into the reports which merely decide what has been decided and reported before, nor where the judge merely decides upon the particular facts of the case, without venturing to ground his judgment upon principle, or to state the reasons upon which it proceeds; and, lastly, the material facts of the case only should be stated, and stated succinctly; and when a judgment is rambling and diffuse, it ought to be cut down to proper dimensions, although it is to be regretted that judicial eloquence is not more frequently restrained within reasonable limits, and that judgments are not on all occasions pronounced with that precision which is essential to preserve the law from confusion—the parent of doubt, discord, and litigation.

JURIDICAL SOCIETY.—A meeting of this Society took place at its rooms, No. 4, St. Martin's-place, Trafalgar-square, on Monday, the 14th December, the Hon. G. Denman, Q. C., M. P., in the chair; when a paper was read by Mr. F. Worsley, "On the Extent of Civil Remedies for Military Offences, Contracts, and Wrongs." The meeting was addressed on the subject of the paper by the chairman, Mr. Joshua Williams, and Mr. W. W. Kerr.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—People talk, and resolutions are passed, with respect to what is called "the present system of reporting;" but this is an error, for there is no such system, and it is precisely for the want of a system that we are suffering. Now, it becomes a question of great importance, whether this subject is capable of being systematised: let us consider first principles.

Courts of justice are open to all. As the pure judicial stream rightly flows beneath, and challenges, the observation of the world, so judicial decision must lie exposed to report and comment; in one sense, therefore, anybody, whether of sufficient ability or not, is, or may be, a reporter. A priori, therefore, it was to be expected that reports would be multimiform, and full or imperfect, in various degrees, according to the capabilities and opportunities of their authors. Nor would this result be a matter of consequence if one decision had no influence over another; but, as one of the elements by which judges arrive at their conclusions is "precedent," we naturally ask from whence authorised precedent is drawn? This is a question more difficult to be answered than is commonly supposed. It is true that there are certain reporters, who are said to be attached to each court, and who enjoy as such, more or less, the benefit of the supervision of the presiding judge as to his decisions; but the facts of each case, which are of no less importance than the judicial decision thereon, have no judicial guarantee, except so far as they are found in the judgment itself; and thus it happens that, in respect of ancient as well as modern reports, the remark of counsel is not uncommon, that a case is better reported in another work, and thereupon the report is, with little hesitation, read from another work; and if the judge should be of opinion, or perhaps recollect, that the so-called unauthorised report is more correct, it is recognised and allowed. What are termed "the irregular reports" are constantly cited in the courts as possessing authority, and the judges take notes of the cases referred to; and as to your own serial, Sir, "THE JURIST," I have for a long period always found it treated on an equal footing with the authorised reports—and deservedly so, for, on the whole, it appears to me, to bear fair comparison with any of them, especially as to cases of the highest importance, which appear to be uniformly reported in your columns with admirable accuracy. It is, doubtless, an unsatisfactory state of things, that a judge should possess a sort of privilege of adopting, or not adopting, a particular report of his own decision, or of that of another judge; but where is a remedy? Nowhere; unless it be thought that judicial decision should be published in a statutory form, by the authority of Parliament, and that, as ignorance of the law is an excuse in no case, the Legislature ought to provide for a statutory record of that important constituent, "precedent."

It may seem to some persons desirable, according to the suggestion of Mr. Joshua Williams, whose name I rejoice to see on the committee, that every word spoken in a court of justice should be recorded, but I must confess that, in my opinion, too much is already taken down. What we want is an authorised skeleton, and not a rather corpulent (shall I say dropsical?) body of reports. Mr. Daniel's idea of a council for reporting is simply impracticable, and is, moreover, inconsistent with the dignity and perfect independence of the judge. I have a strong objection to amateur supervision, by ability however high, of the hard work of a paid staff. Jealousies, we know, are inherent in human nature, and will spring up; let us not afford them an ampler field, by vesting irresponsible power in any board or council. Division of labour, according to Adam Smith, is the secret of advance, and in no case, as I believe, is this proposition truer than in reference to reporting, in which I think it is a mistake to attempt centralisation.

However, it must be admitted that some more authoritative record of decision is required; but let the judges under whose virtual control reports, authorised or unauthorised, have ever remained, determine this point; or, if they decline, let Parliament enact, that the decisions of the judges, together with the simple facts of the cases, without the arguments of counsel, be reported by an officer of each court, styled "The Public Reporter," with the approval of the judge, monthly; and that from and after the date of the issue of "The Court Reports," no other reports of the cases therein contained should be admissible. This would, at all events, remove the possibility of any conflict of future reports. The existing evil has been of gradual growth; so, I think, must be the cure. It would be presumptuous, if it were possible, to exclude from the consideration of the judge so much that has been already well and wisely recorded, by any invidious act of distinction. What are termed "the authorised reports," if they claim any inherent excellence, might appear in a more desirable form, as "The Court Reports," to which I have referred. Your pages, Sir, might (as I believe would be quite in accordance with your wishes) cease altogether as a volume of reports, and continue, with much less trouble and anxiety to yourself, as a serial exclusively devoted to the discussion of law, and to the consideration of those great legal measures of reform, in which you have always taken the initiative.

The truth seems to me, that we are undertaking a task posterior in order to that which the Lord Chancellor has suggested, and of which I confess I am much enamoured—I mean that of digestion and ultimate codification. Let us, by all means, digest the cases, and begin to codify the law; and before disembarassing ourselves of what may seem redundant in modern reports, throw off altogether that immense mass of obsolete and reversed decision, which now encumbers the shelves of our libraries.

Your obedient servant,
Rolls Chambers, Chancery-lane, G. L.
Dec. 16, 1863.

JUDICIAL REPORTING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—Having recently laid before the public some observations on the true principles of law reporting, which several members of the legal profession, whose opinion is of weight, have considered to be deserving, at least, of fuller discussion, I am induced to ask the opportunity of bringing them, through your columns, more immediately to the notice of the profession, while adding such explanations as may, perhaps, remove the objections to which they have in some quarters been thought open.

The theory of the present system has this fundamental defect, that it gives us the law as laid down in the courts through an inevitably imperfect channel. The judge decides; but at best he only vaguely states the motives of his judgment in a (usually) extempore speech. The reporter adds a detail of the facts, of the nature of the case, and of the authorities, all of which are necessary to explain the true import and effect of the decision. But not being part and parcel of the judge's mind, the reporter is apt to err in thus interpreting his meaning. He may give facts which the judge really considered (though he failed to say so) to have no bearing on the case; he may omit others which greatly influenced the judgment. To avoid this last source of error, reporters generally enter into the amplest detail, and vie with each other in minuteness and prolixity of statement, while they shelter themselves from any charge of misrepresenting the judge's opinion by giving his speech verbatim. Hence, as a necessary consequence, our reports are lengthy, diffuse, and discrepant, leading to confusion and uncertainty in the law. So absolute is this rule of their being, that those which are started on the principle of giving only abbreviated notes of the points decided, always, after a year or two, fall into the habit of giving them at the same length as their competitors. And the addition, as is now proposed, of one more series, to be called "the authorised reports," would not obviate the evil, for the authorised reporters would, like their brethren, be liable to err, and consequently would still be exposed to the competition which sometimes corrects errors, but at the cost of always overlaying and obscuring the truth.

The only way, I submit, in which this inherent defect can be remedied is by removing its source. In order to know exactly what a judgment means, we must ask the judge himself to tell us. This is more than his speech at present does, for it is not constructed on any fixed system; it adverts to the case as if the facts were known, and so lays down the law on an undetermined series of facts. But if the judge were required to note—first, the facts which he considers pertinent; secondly, the nature of the suit brought upon them; thirdly, the remedy sought; fourthly, the authorities cited; fifthly, the judgment in law of the court, it is obvious that we should have a perfect report, containing not a word of superfluous matter, while containing everything necessary for the explanation or application of the judgment. No reporter could compete with such a statement, for he could add nothing useful, nor exclude anything as superfluous, and, as a result of this resort to the sound principles of recording the law of the courts, all save the judges' reports, would come to a natural death.

But it is objected in the first place, that the judges would refuse to do this, and that if they did it, it would be a very great burthen upon them. My answer is, that the judges will not refuse to do what the Legislature enjoins, and that there is precedent for the injunction and the system. A case stated on appeal, or for the opinion of a superior court, by quarter sessions or a revising barrister, is very nearly such a report as I have indicated. In Scotland, the judges, when sitting singly, always append a written note of explanation to their judgments; and, whether sitting singly or as a court, they are required by statute, when facts are proved before them (as in that country juries are often dispensed with), to state articulately in their judgment the pertinent facts which they consider proved. All this works very simply and easily. Nor, evidently, is a judge likely to pass negligently over a duty, the performance of which will fix his reputation among his contemporaries, and with posterity. On the other hand, its performance would not be so burthensome as at first sight might appear, for the judge would, as the case is argued, take down in his note-book the facts and authorities; and a slight revision and methodising of these would form the report, to which a written judgment, terse, succinct, and logical, because written, would form the climax. It need scarcely be observed, that if it appeared that the judges could not overtake this work, relief would be given them by the appointment of one or more additional judges.

In the next place, it has been objected, that judges, being human, are liable, on reflection, to change their minds, and a little to bend the facts to make them better to support their law. That objection, whatever its weight, applies, however, only to "authorised reports" which the judge may have revised: it does not apply to the system now under consideration; for, under it, the judgment would not be issued until the statement of facts on which it rests is completed: both would be given out together, and neither could afterwards be modified. If the result should be to lead the judges very anxiously to consider the real points of the case, and the law which bears upon them, before they decide, an unquestionable benefit will accrue to the suitors and the public.

It has further been objected by men deserving much respect, that a mere judge's report would exclude much matter useful to the profession, and especially to its younger members. To these gentlemen I would recall the fact, that the plan I propose expressly requires that the shape and nature of the suit shall be stated, as well as the facts on which it rests. This a judge would certainly do briefly, but he would also do it with precision; and, if more is required in order to teach the course of practice, it may be answered, that the student should seek it by personal attendance in the courts, or as a pupil in chambers, rather than by vitiating the record of English law through the operation of a cumbrous and imperfect reporting system.

To make up for any fancied loss of this nature, the profession and the public would reap the following advantages:—The variety of reports, containing a variety of versions of each case and of the law it embodies, would cease; there would be only one report, very much briefer, clearer, and more exact; the law in it would be better considered and better stated; appeals would be less frequent; litigation would be less common; the barrister's pocket would be relieved from a heavy annual tax, and his mind from the labour of consulting a mass of undigested and disputable matter, and from the anxiety of being often unable to advise his clients with any satisfactory degree of certainty.

I will now summarise the practical machinery through which these benefits would be obtained. The Legislature would enact—

First, that every judge in every case heard before him, should take a note of the facts he deems pertinent to the cause, of the nature and object of the suit, of the authorities cited by the respective counsel, and should append thereto his judgment in writing. If several judges sit together, and agree, one statement and judgment should be issued as that of the Court; if they disagree, each should issue his own in so far as discrepant.

Secondly, that such statements and judgments when issued should be handed by the judge, or court, to the registrar or other officer, who shall immediately transmit them to the printer, and proofs shall next day be sent to all the other judges of the same department of the law, by whom they should be perused, and returned to the registrar, with the words "retain" or "cancel" written thereon; these words not expressing any opinion on the soundness of the decision, but only referring to the propriety or otherwise of such a case being recorded. That the registrar should act thereon in accordance with the opinion of the majority, and such cases as are retained should be printed and published every week.

Thirdly, that parties appealing should not be concluded by such statement of the facts, but be at liberty to shew error in it as well as in the law.

Fourthly, that motions and other interlocutory applications should be similarly reported or not, in the discretion of the judge before whom they are made, with liberty, when the case has been already reported, to refer thereto for the statement of the facts.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

J. BOYD KINNEAR.

A CHALLENGE TO DRAFTSMEN.

A CORRESPONDENT asks us to give him the form of a condition of a bond for securing the payment of a sum by instalments, and of interest at 6l. per cent. upon any instalment in arrear. We confess our inability to gratify him. Can any of our readers?

DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE WIGHTMAN.—APPOINTMENT OF MR. SERJEANT SHEE.

WE regret to announce the decease of Mr. Justice Wightman, which took place suddenly, on the 10th inst., at York, where he was holding the winter commission of general gaol delivery. On the previous day his Lordship, who was in his eightieth year, and whose faculties, both physical and mental, did not exhibit the least appearance of decay, conducted the business of the court as usual; but on his servant proceeding to call him the next morning, he was found in a state of insensibility, from which he never roused, and died in a few hours. Mr. Justice Mellor went down to York to finish the business of the court.

The deceased was an example of judicial appointment without the previous honour of a silk gown. He was nearly twenty-three years a judge, having been raised to the bench on the resignation of Mr. Justice Littledale, in the Hilary Vacation of 1841.

This is the fourth instance within the last twenty years of the sudden death of judges on circuit—the other three being, Lord Abinger, in 1844; Mr. Justice Talfourd, in 1854; and Mr. Baron Watson, in 1860. The deaths of Lord Chancellor Campbell, in 1861, of Mr. Justice J. A. Park, in 1838, and of Mr. Justice Vaughan, in 1839, were also sudden, but took place in the metropolis.

William Shee, Esq., Queen's Serjeant, has been appointed one of the justices of the Court of Queen's Bench, in the room of the late Mr. Justice Wightman. This appointment is very remarkable from one circumstance, which will long be remembered, namely, that Mr. Justice Shee is the first Roman Catholic who has sat in England as judge of a superior court since the Revolution of 1688, and indeed since a much earlier period. Until the 10 Geo. 4, c. 7, commonly called the Catholic Emancipation Act, Roman Catholics were excluded from the bench in consequence of certain oaths being required to be taken by all judges, which no person of that persuasion could conscientiously take; that is to say, the declaration against transubstantiation, the invocation of saints, and the sacrifice of the mass. Since that time several Roman Catholics have been appointed to the bench in Ireland, but none in this country; and, indeed, we are aware of none, except, perhaps, Mr. Charles Butler, the well-known editor of Coke upon Littleton, who had any claim to it.

Mr. Justice Shee formerly sat in Parliament for his native county, Kilkenny.

SHERIFF FOR CORNWALL.—The names of those who have been nominated by the Council of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to serve the office of sheriff of Cornwall:—

John Michael Williams, Esq., of Caerhayes Castle.

Thomas Simon Bolitho, Esq., of Penalvern.

Day Perry Le Grice, Esq., of Trevelick.

LAW AMENDMENT SOCIETY.—A meeting of this Society took place at its rooms, 3, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, on Monday, the 7th December, Sir Richard Graves M'Donnell in the chair; when a paper was read by Mr. Robert Wilson, on "Transfer of Title to Land." Mr. H. G. Allen read the report of the committee appointed to conclude the negotiations with the Social Science Association for a closer union with that body, on the basis of the draft agreement submitted to the last meeting, and moved that the same be adopted. Mr. Wingfield seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. It was moved by Mr. Hawes, and seconded by Mr. Wingfield, and carried—"That the thanks of the Society be given to G. W. Hastings, Esq., for the energy and zeal which, during the five years he was its secretary, he displayed in conducting its affairs, promoting its prosperity, and in advancing every measure calculated to promote the amendment of the law, and those great social questions intimately connected therewith." Votes of thanks were also passed to Mr. William Hawes, Mr. Edgar, and Mr. Palmer, for their past services as officers of the Society.

The London Gazette of Friday, the 11th December, contains an Order of the Queen in Council, bearing date the 8th December, 1863, made in pursuance of the powers vested in the Crown by the 26 & 27 Vict. c. 122, directing the following alterations of the Northern, Midland, and Norfolk Circuits of the Judges:—The county of York and the county of the city of York shall be taken away from the Northern Circuit, and annexed to the Midland Circuit; and the counties of Leicester, Rutland, and Northampton shall be taken away from the Midland Circuit, and annexed to the Norfolk Circuit.

By another Order of the Queen in Council, of the same date, made under the same statute, the number of revising barristers on the Northern Circuit is diminished by six; while the number of those on the Midland and Norfolk Circuits is increased by three for each of those circuits.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, this Company now offers to new Insurers EIGHTY PER CENT. of the PROFITS, at Quinquennial Divisions, of a low Rate of Premium without participation of Profits.

Since the establishment of the Company in 1821, the amount of Profits allotted to the Assured has exceeded in Cash value 660,000*l.*, which represents equivalent Reversionary Bonuses of 1,056,000*l.*

After the Division of Profits at Christmas, 1859, the Life Assurances in force, with existing Bonuses thereon, amounted to upwards of 4,780,000*l.*, the Income from the Life Branch 207,000*l.* per annum, and the Life Assurance Fund, independent of the Capital, exceeded 1,618,000*l.*

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—Insurances are effected upon every description of property at home and abroad at moderate rates.

No expense is incurred in effecting a new Insurance beyond the payment of the Annual Premium and Duty, when the Premium amounts to 5*s.*

Claims liberally and promptly settled.

Notice is hereby given, that FIRE POLICIES which expire at Christmas must be renewed within fifteen days at this office; or with Mr. SAMS, No. 1, St. James's-street, corner of Pall-mall; or with the Company's Agents throughout the Kingdom, otherwise they become void.

Applications for Prospectuses and Agencies to be made to the Secretary.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, DECEMBER 26, 1863.

WE have already expressed our sincere hope that the exertions of the committee appointed at the late meeting of the Bar to inquire into the reporting system, and find, if possible, some remedy for the present state of things, will be attended with success. At the same time we must not dissemble the greatness and difficulty of the task they have before them, or the danger of their acting on some foregone conclusion, or being led away by some fallacious or ill-considered theory. The obvious way to guard against such errors and mischances is to imitate the conduct of the skilful physician, who carefully investigates the causes of the malady of his patient before he attempts to apply, or even thinks of, any remedy for it.

From the very nature of the thing, as well as from what has lately been said and written on this subject, it is obvious that one question that must be considered by the committee is, whether it would be possible or desirable to establish a corps of privileged reporters, whose reports alone should be permitted to be cited before our tribunals. And the example of the Year Books of this country in the olden time, and the reports in the United States of America at the present day, will be relied on as precedents in favour of this proposition. Without presuming to offer any opinion of our own upon it, we must observe, that before the committee hold up either of these systems as examples for our guidance, they are bound thoroughly to examine into them, so as to be able fully to appreciate and describe their nature and mode of working.

First, then, with respect to the Year Books, we should like to ask the following questions:—

1. Who were the Year Book reporters?
2. Were they appointed to that office; and, if so, by whom? By the Crown, by the judges, or otherwise?
3. Were they remunerated; and, if so, by whom, and how?

Sir W. Blackstone (1 Com. 71, 72) solves these questions as follows:—"The reports are extant in a regular series from the reign of Edward 2 inclusive" (several of them, however, and among others the whole reign of Richard 2 are not yet printed); "and from his time to that of Henry 8 were taken by the prothonotaries, or chief scribes of the court, at the expense of the Crown, and published annually, whence they are known under the denomination of the Year Books." No authority is cited for this, but Sir Edward Coke (Preface to 3rd Reports, p. ii), who, from the period at which he lived, may well have conversed with persons who saw the system in operation, tells us, "The kings of this realm, that is to say, Edward 3, Henry 4, Henry 5, Henry 6, Edward 4, Richard 3, and Henry 7, did select and appoint four discreet and learned professors of law to report the judgments and opinions of the reverend judges, &c.; whose learned works are extant, and digested into nine several volumes." The Year Book of Edward 2 was not then published. Serjeant Wilson adds, in a note to his edition of Coke's Reports, "These four reporters I take to be those who have since been named readers, and elected to that office by the respective Inns of Court."

4. Is there reason to believe that these reports are complete, i. e. not omitting any cases important in themselves, not omitting cases through obsequiousness to the powers that be, and not distorting reported cases for the same reason?

5. And, lastly, how came the Year Books to cease, after a continued existence of about two centuries and a half? We mention this period, for although the printed Year Books only extend from Michaelmas Term, 1 Edw. 2 (A.D. 1307), to Michaelmas Term, 27 Hen. 8 (A.D. 1537), yet the Year Book of Edw. 1 is in MS. in Lincoln's-inn Library, which adds more than thirty years to the collection.

These questions are difficult to answer at the present day. In the preface to Douglas's reports, published during the latter part of the last century, p. vi, speaking of reports in general, he says, "The most ancient compilations of this sort were the work of persons specially appointed for the purpose. In what particular manner they exercise their function, how far the courts superintended, or the judges assisted or revised their labours, no where appears; and, indeed, almost everything relating to them is involved in so much obscurity, that I believe their very names are totally unknown. It is probable, however, that the cotemporary judges, and those who immediately followed them, had satisfactory reasons for confiding in the accuracy of those reporters, since their writings, called the Year Books, have always possessed a degree of traditional weight and authority, superior to what is allowed to any subsequent reports. This, indeed, is in some measure owing to the circumstances of their priority in point of time, exclusive of any consideration of peculiar authenticity or excellence, the decisions contained in them forming the basis of that large superstructure of successive determinations which now fills the library of an English lawyer." The above italics are our own.

Passages are to be found in the Year Books which throw doubt on the assumption that the reporters in those days had those facilities of access to the judges, or were in that constant attendance on the Courts, which is commonly supposed. Thus, in the 21 Hen. 7. 6. b, we find the reporter expressing himself as follows:—"Fisher and Vavasour, Justices, were of the same opinion, but I know not how to report them; they spoke in so low a tone that I could not hear them." ("Fisher & Vavasour, Just., de mesme l'opinion; mes jeo ne scay eux reporter, ils parlerent si bassement que jeo ne pouvais eux ouir"). And the reporters sometimes account for not reporting particular matters by the expressive phrase, "Non interfui." Then, as to the cause of the cessation of the Year Books; Mr. Daniel, in his speech at the meeting of the Bar, ascribed it to the rapacity of King Henry 8, who wanted for other purposes the money which had been set apart for the salaries of the reporters. No authority was cited for this assertion, nor are we in a condition either to confirm or refute it. One question, however, we wish to put to all whom it may concern. Is it not possible that the Year Books may have come to a stand still in consequence of their deterioration, either in quality, quantity, lateness of appearance, or expensiveness? For it must not be assumed that they are all of equal value. Hear what Sir Matthew Hale says on this subject in his History of the Common Law, 172:—"Touching the reports of the years and terms of Hen. 4 and Hen. 5, I can only say, they do not arrive, either in the nature of the learning contained in them, or in the judiciousness and knowledge of the judges and pleaders, nor in any other respect arise to the perfection of the last twelve years of Edw. 3. But the times of Hen. 6, as also of Edw. 4, Edw. 5, and Hen. 7, were times that abounded with learned and excellent men. There is little odds in the usefulness or learning of these books, only the first part of Hen. 6 is more barren, spending itself much in learning of little moment, and now out of use; but the second part is full of excellent learning. In the time of those three kings, Hen. 6, Edw. 4, and Hen. 7, the learning seems to be much alike." Why is no mention made of the last of the series, the Year Book of Hen. 8?

Be this, however, as it may, it is well known that about a century after the cessation of the Year Books, an attempt was made to revive the practice of official reporting, and that under the auspices of no less a person than Lord Bacon. One of these reporters was Serjeant Hetley, the title to whose reports (which include the years 3 to 7 Car. 1.—1628 to 1632) informs us, that he was "appointed by the King AND the Judges, as one of the reporters of the law." Hetley's reports do not bear a high reputation, and the system shortly came to a close, from what cause we are unable to say.

The regular system of modern reporting—a system almost, if not altogether as exclusive as that of the Year Books—may be dated from the commencement of Durnford & East's Reports, A.D. 1785. Within half a century complaints began to be made; the system was shaken, and finally broke down.

To proceed to the American system. In the Supreme Court at Washington, in the Empire State of New York, and we believe in most of the other States, there is an official salaried reporter, whose reports alone are permitted to be cited. We trust that no pains will be spared by the committee to inquire fully into this matter. American legislation throws some light on the subject. Reporting in the Supreme Court at Washington is regulated by an act of the 27th Congress, sess. 2; c. 264, "The reporter who shall, from time to time, be appointed by the Supreme Court, shall be entitled to receive from the treasury of the United States, as an annual compensation for his services, and for the copies of the annual volumes of the reports he is hereinafter required to deliver to the Secretary of State, the sum of 1300 dollars: Provided, that the compensation shall not be paid unless the said reporter shall print and publish, or cause to be printed and published, the decisions of the said Court, made during the time he shall act as such reporter, within six months after the said decisions shall be made: . . . And provided also that the volumes of the decisions of the Supreme Court shall not be sold by the reporter to the public at large, for a greater price than five dollars for each volume." (Statutes of the United States, vol. 5, p. 545).

The Code of Civil Procedure of the State of New York, 1850, compiled by Mr. D. D. Field, contains the following provisions on this subject:—

"Art. 369. The State reporter is appointed by the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Attorney-General, and holds his office for three years, but may be sooner removed by the Legislature, a majority of the members elected to each House voting for his removal. His compensation is fixed by special statutes.

"Art. 370. The State reporter must report and publish, within thirty days after the adjournment of each term, of the Court of Appeals, a concise outline of the facts and decision in every case determined at that term, with any opinion of the Court delivered to him for that purpose; omitting, however, every opinion dissenting from the decision, except in a case involving the construction of the constitution of this State or of the United States.

"Art. 371. The State reporter can have no pecuniary interest in the publication of the reports, nor can a copyright for them be secured by him or any other person: but they are free for publication by all.

"Art. 372. The reports must be published in pamphlet form, under the supervision of the State reporter, by contract, as prescribed by special statutes, and designated 'The New York Reports.' Each volume must contain at least 600 pages, with a suitable table of the names of the cases reported, head-notes to each case, and an index of the principal matters contained in each volume. Their sale and distribution is provided for by special statutes."

The passage which we have marked in italics in art. 370 is very remarkable. We leave it to the candid judgment of every competent and unprejudiced person, whether such a provision is a light to guide, or a beacon to warn.

The discrepancies between these codes are obvious. The most curious is, that the Washington reporter is allowed six months to publish his report, while his brother at New York is limited to thirty days—one-sixth of the former period. Are we to understand from this that the reports at Washington are six times as numerous as those at New York, or is the reporter at the latter place six times more expeditious than the reporter at the former; and in the latter event are they equally efficient?

If authorised reporters, with the exclusive right of reporting, are to be again appointed in England, it is impossible to overrate the importance of having their status and functions accurately defined, and, in particular, to determine whether they are to hold office durante bene placito, and if so, of whom, or quamdiu se bene gesserint, and if so, who is to be judge of their good behaviour? On these matters, the American laws above quoted leave us in the dark. A reporter may discharge his functions in a way which, although not open to any objection that could be reduced to specific form, shews him inadequate to the important functions with which he is entrusted. And yet to render him removable without specific objection seems levelling a blow at his independence, and a violation of constitutional principle.

NEW RULES AND ORDERS.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.—REVENUE SIDE.

In pursuance of the provisions contained in the 26th section of the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 21, intituled "An Act to regulate the Office of Queen's Remembrancer, and to amend the Practice and Procedure on the Revenue Side of the Court of Exchequer," "it is ordered that the following provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, be extended, applied, and adapted to the revenue side of the Court of Exchequer; and also that the following rules, as to giving bail in cases of appeal, shall be in force on the revenue side of the Court of Exchequer:—

1. "In all cases of rules to enter a verdict or non-suit upon a point reserved at the trial, if the rule to shew cause be refused or granted, and then discharged or made absolute, the party decided against may appeal.

2. "In all cases of motions for a new trial, upon the ground that the judge has not ruled according to law, if the rule to shew cause be refused, or if granted, be then discharged or made absolute, the party decided against may appeal, provided any one of the judges dissent from the rule being refused, or when granted, being discharged or made absolute, as the case may be, or provided the Court in its discretion think fit that an appeal should be allowed; provided that where the application for a new trial is upon matter of discretion only, as on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence or otherwise, no such appeal shall be allowed.

3. "The Court of Error, the Exchequer Chamber, and the House of Lords shall be Courts of Appeal for this purpose.

4. "No appeal shall be allowed unless notice thereof be given in writing to the opposite party or his attorney, and to the Queen's Remembrancer, within four days after the decision complained of, or such further time as may be allowed by the court or a judge.

5. "The appeal hereinbefore mentioned shall be upon a case to be stated by the parties (and in case of difference to be settled by the court or a judge of the Court appealed from), in which case shall be set forth so much of the pleadings, evidence, and the ruling or judgment objected to, as may be necessary to raise the question for the decision of the Court of Appeal.

6. "When the appeal is from the refusal of the Court below to grant a rule to shew cause, and the Court of Appeal grant such rule, such rule shall be argued and disposed of in the Court of Appeal.

7. "The Court of Appeal shall give such judgment as ought to have been given in the Court below, and all such further proceeding may be taken thereupon as if the judgment had been given by the Court in which the record originated.

8. "The Court of Appeal shall have power to adjudge payment of costs, and to order restitution; and they shall have the same powers as the Court of Error in respect of awarding process, and otherwise.

9. "Upon an award of a trial de novo by the Court, or by the Court of Error upon matter appearing upon record, error may at once be brought; and if the judgment in such or any other case be affirmed in error, it shall be lawful for the Court of Error to adjudge costs to the defendant in error.

10. "When a new trial is granted on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, the costs of the first trial shall abide the event, unless the Court shall otherwise order.

11. "Upon motions founded upon affidavits, it shall be lawful for either party, with leave of the court or a judge, to make affidavits, in answer to the affidavits of the opposite party, upon any new matter arising out of such affidavits, subject to all such rules as shall hereafter be made respecting such affidavits.

12. "Notice of appeal shall be a stay of execution, provided that, within eight days after the decision complained of, or before execution delivered to the sheriff, bail, to pay the sum recovered and costs, or to pay costs when adjudged, be given in like manner, and to the same amount, as bail in error is required to be given under the rules of this Court, made on the 22nd day of June, 1860, or as near thereto as may be applicable, provided that such bail shall not be necessary to stay execution in cases where the appellant is the Crown, the Attorney-General on behalf of the Crown, or the Prince of Wales, or the Duke of Cornwall for the time being.

"The foregoing rules shall come into operation and take effect forthwith, and apply to every cause, matter, and proceeding now pending.

PROSPECTUS OF THE LECTURES

To be delivered during the ensuing Hilary Educational Term, by the several Readers appointed by the Inns of Court.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND LEGAL HISTORY.

The Reader will trace the History of our Constitution from the accession of Edward VI down to the lowest period which the time allotted to the Course of Lectures will enable him to reach.

He will dwell particularly on the Legal and Judicial History of each different reign, as recorded in the Statute-book, the volume of Reports, and the State Trials.

In his Private Classes he will begin with the Norman Conquest, and proceed in regular order through each successive reign till his course has ended.

The books to which he will chiefly refer are—Blackstone's Commentaries, by Kerr—Rapin's History of the Period—The Chroniclers—Hallam's Constitutional History—Brodie's History—Burnet's Works—Lord Clarendon's History—May's History—Hayes's History of Conveyancing—Starkie's Law of Libel—State Trials—Statute-book and Reports of the Period—Coke's Institutes—Somers's Tracts.

EQUITY.

The Reader on Equity proposes to deliver, during the ensuing Educational Term, a course of Nine Lectures on the following subjects:—

1. On Implied and Resulting Trusts.
2. On Charitable Trusts.
3. On Relief in Equity against Penalties and Forfeitures.
4. On the Nature of Legal Mortgages.
5. On Suits for Redemption and Foreclosure.

The Reader will continue with his Senior and Junior Classes the general courses of Equity already commenced. He will also continue in the Senior Class, and commence in the Junior, to explain the leading rules of Pleading and Procedure in Equity.

THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY.

The Reader on the Law of Real Property proposes to deliver, in the ensuing Educational Term, Nine Public Lectures on the following subjects:—

1. Conditions of Sale.
2. The Doctrine of Election.
3. The Doctrine of Equitable Conversion.
4. The Law of Copyholds.

In his Private Classes, the Reader on the Law of Real Property will continue his Course of Real Property Law, using the work of Mr. Joshua Williams and Mr. Tudor's Leading Cases on Conveyancing, as Text-books.

JURISPRUDENCE AND THE CIVIL LAW.

The Reader on Jurisprudence and the Civil Law proposes, in the ensuing Educational Term, to deliver Nine Public Lectures on the following subjects:—

1. The Roman Idea of Dominium, and the Origin of the distinction between Legal and Equitable Ownership.
2. The Modes of Acquisition of Property by the Roman and English Law.
3. The Comparison of the Roman and French Law respecting the Transfer of Property, with the English Law upon the same subject.
4. The Roman Testament.
5. The Right of Search.

In his Private Class, the Reader proposes to continue the Course of the Roman Civil Law, beginning with the Second Book of Justinian's Institutes, using Sanders's edition of that work, and the Systema Juris Romani of Mackeldey as Text-books.

The Reader in his Private Class will discuss various points of International Law, using the work of Wheaton as his Text-book.

COMMON LAW.

The Reader on Common Law proposes to deliver, during the ensuing Educational Term, Nine Public Lectures as under. The first Lecture will be Introductory to the Law of Contracts, and in the subsequent Lectures will be considered—

1. The Three Classes of Contracts, with their respective Characteristics.
2. The Nature of, and Ingredients in, a Simple Contract.
3. Mercantile Contracts, with the Leading Statutes which affect or regulate them.
4. Negotiable Instruments.

With his Private Class, the Reader will examine seriatim the various subjects above set forth, using the following Books for reference:—Smith's Leading Cases and Mercantile Law, Broom's Commentaries, and Story's Treatises on Bailments, and Principal and Agent.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, JANUARY 2, 1864.

THOSE who consider "writing" essential to the existence of law, or at least of good law, and consequently insist on the necessity of reducing the law of every country to the form of a code, are bound to contend, as indeed some of them do, that the principle should not be confined to municipal law, and that the law of nations must be codified also. But supposing this desirable, a position very questionable in itself, how is it to be accomplished? Evidently in no other way than by agreement among the different nations of the earth to replace the present system of international law by a written one. This, however, is not what is meant by those who advocate a code of international laws. They mean a code of European international law to be established by a congress of European nations—a body which at most could only make laws to bind those whom it represents, for it would be the height alike of injustice and absurdity to suppose that nations who are beyond the limits of Europe—although not beyond what no people can ever be beyond, the primary laws of nature and nations—could be bound by laws to the making of which they were not parties.

We allude to this subject at present, because the actual state of Europe at this moment illustrates practically the insurmountable difficulties that would attend the execution of such a plan, even so far as affects that portion of the globe. The Emperor of the French has, as is well known, invited all the powers of Europe to meet in congress, for the purpose of settling, or unsettling, as the case may be, the relations of the different States to each other, and perhaps to arrange a redistribution of its soil—an invitation which a majority of those powers, chiefly of second and inferior classes, have accepted with more or less eagerness, while the first-rate powers stand aloof. Nor is this latter circumstance to be wondered at. Suppose a congress of nations assembled, either to reconstruct the map of Europe, or to draw up a code of international law, or for some other purpose, are all its members to have equal rights and voices, in virtue of their sovereign independence? Is Switzerland or Belgium, for instance, to have one vote in the congress, while France or Russia is to have no more? And in drawing up rules to regulate maritime warfare, is every State, which, like many of the German States, has no navy because it has no sea coast, or which, like Prussia, has but a small one, to have one vote, while England, whose very existence as a first-class power depends on her navy is to have no more? The injustice of such a system would be gross, and yet how could it be prevented? Who is to determine a priori the precise number of votes to which each State would be fairly entitled, taking into account its size, population, intelligence, wealth, &c.?

Nor is this all. Passing events disclose another source of difficulty in the fact, that while a nation is disposed to act in a particular manner, it may after all be only an imperium in imperio. Austria and Prussia are the two principal powers of Germany; each ranks among what are called the great powers of Europe; and we make no doubt either would feel highly indignant at any suggestion that it was not thoroughly independent, and able to think and act for itself. But how is this in reality? Some years ago those powers executed a treaty, to which other States were parties, whereby important arrangements were made respecting the kingdom of Denmark. But now the German Confederation, consisting of upwards of thirty States, including the two we have mentioned, seems to disapprove of that treaty. At a meeting of the Diet, Austria and Prussia might be outvoted at any moment on that question, and reduced to the humiliating and absurd position of declaring that what they did in their individual capacities was not binding on them as members of the Confederation, and that as members of it they would be bound even to take up arms to oppose that which as individuals they approved, and had solemnly pledged themselves by treaty to uphold.

Lastly, there is the old distinction between de jure and de facto governments, which seems likely to receive a curious and somewhat novel illustration on the other side of the Atlantic. Ten of the United States of America have declared themselves independent, and set up a government for themselves, which they are seeking to uphold by force of arms. Their right thus to secede from the Union being denied by the general government, which looks on them in the light of rebels, the President has just issued a proclamation, declaring that one-tenth part of the population in any of the revolted States may set up a State government, which will be recognised as its de jure government by the general government. The complications likely to arise from this, especially in the event of any foreign powers recognising the present rulers of the Southern States, either as their de jure or de facto governments, may easily be conceived.

We do not, however, mean to assert that congresses of nations for settling disputed questions of international law are without their use, of which a memorable instance is supplied by the congress at Paris in 1856, although its value has been overrated. Some of its rules, such as that which prohibits paper blockades, although most valuable in themselves, are only declaratory of the law of nations which had been violated in previous wars; and, after all, its dicta only bind the nations who were parties to, or which have since ratified, it. It prohibits privateering, but one great naval people—the United States of America—which was no party to that congress, refused to submit to this. It is impossible to contend that privateering is either malum in se, or forbidden by the general law of nations, and (as has been amply illustrated by the contest now raging in America) in a war between a strong and a weak maritime State, privateering is the most powerful weapon in the hands of the latter, for a privateer can be equipped at a much cheaper rate, and far more expeditiously, than a man-of-war, and a great maritime nation has an enormous amount of commerce which no fleet is numerous enough to protect completely. It is, therefore, highly improbable that the condemnation of privateering will for a long time, if ever, become a received principle of international law.

Suppose, however, all difficulties overcome, and a code of international law drawn up, so perfect that no possible case remains unprovided for by its text, there remain the questions, in what language is it to be promulgated? and, as no language is free from ambiguities, to whom is the construction of its provisions to be intrusted? And suppose a nation, or body of nations, to set at defiance those provisions, whether well or ill interpreted, there would remain no other mode of bringing them to obedience than the ratio ultima belli.

THE STATUTES

PASSED IN THE SESSION 1863—26 & 27 VICTORIA.

CAP. I.

An Act to enable Her Majesty to provide for the Establishment of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and Her Royal Highness the Princess Alexandra of Denmark, and to settle certain Annuities on Her Royal Highness.

[5th March, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Power to her Majesty to grant an annuity of 40,000*l.* for the establishment of the Prince of Wales and Princess Alexandra on their marriage.

2. Power to her Majesty to grant an annuity of 10,000*l.* to her Royal Highness the Princess Alexandra during her marriage with the Prince of Wales.

3. Power to her Majesty to grant an annuity of 30,000*l.* to her said Royal Highness in the event of her surviving his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

4. Annuities granted by this act to be charged on the Consolidated Fund.

CAP. II.

An Act to make Provision concerning Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes payable in the Metropolis on the Day appointed for the Passage through the Metropolis of Her Royal Highness the Princess Alexandra of Denmark.

[5th March, 1863.]

Sect. I. Provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 15, and 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 58, with respect to bills of exchange and promissory notes payable in the metropolis on fast days, &c., to extend to bills, &c. payable on the 7th March, 1863.

2. Notarial charges occasioned by this act not chargeable on persons paying bills, &c.

3. Metropolis to be defined by the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120.

CAP. III.

An Act to extend the Credit for Payment of a Portion of the Excise Duty on Malt.

[27th March, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Credit for payment of a portion of the excise duty on malt extended under conditions herein named.

2. Bonds and securities given by makers of malt under former acts to continue in force.

3. Nothing to prejudice immediate proceedings for duties considered in danger.

CAP. IV.

An Act to extend for a further Period the Provisions of the Union Relief Aid Act of the last Session.

[27th March, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Certain provisions of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 110, extended.

2. Repayment of sums borrowed.

3. As to the word "expenditure."

4. Provision as to cases of unions situate in more than one county.

5. As to parishes within the union of Mansfield.

6. Power to parishes under separate board of guardians to borrow.

7. Parishes not in union to contribute.

8. Time of issuing orders limited.

9. Construction of act.

Whereas by an act passed in the last session of Parliament provisions were made to enable the board of guardians of certain unions situate wholly or in part within the counties of Lancaster, Chester, or Derby, to obtain temporary aid to meet the extraordinary demands for relief therein, which provisions applied to the expenditure during the quarters of the year ending at Michaelmas and Christmas last only, and it is necessary that such provisions should be extended for a further period: be it therefore enacted, &c.

Sect. 1. That all the provisions of the said act which apply to the expenditure during the quarters of the year ending as aforesaid, shall be extended and apply to the expenditure for the quarters ending respectively at Lady-day and Midsummer-day next.

2. Any sum borrowed under the authority of this act may be repaid by equal annual instalments, not exceeding fourteen.

3. The word "expenditure," in sect. 5 of the said act, shall be construed to include the amount paid under any order of contribution issued by the Poor-law Board pursuant to the said act or this act.

4. When the union applying for aid under this act shall extend into two or more counties, each of such counties shall contribute to such aid; and the amount required shall be apportioned between such counties, according to the annual rateable value of so much of the union as shall be situate within such counties respectively; and where the union required to contribute shall be situate in two or more counties, it shall contribute upon the annual rateable value of so many of the parishes of the union as shall be wholly within the county or counties within which the union applying for aid is situate, and the contribution shall be borne exclusively by such parishes, and shall be apportioned by the guardians between such parishes according to their rateable values respectively, in exoneration of the common fund of the union, anything in the said first-mentioned act to the contrary notwithstanding.

5. The parishes comprised within the Mansfield Union in the county of Nottingham, shall be exempted from the operation of sect. 1 of the said act of the last session.

6. The powers to borrow conferred by sect. 3 of the said act of the last session, and by this act, shall extend to the overseers of any parish under a separate board of guardians in either of the said counties.

7. The several parishes in the said counties not in union, and not under a separate board of guardians, shall contribute in aid according to their annual rateable value.

8. The power of the Poor-law Board to issue their orders under this act shall determine on the 1st September next.

9. This act shall be construed, except as herein provided, in the same manner as the act herein referred to, and all the provisions and enactments therein contained shall be applicable to orders to be issued under the authority of this act.

CAP. V.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Royal Naval Coast Volunteers.

[27th March, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Sect. 5 of the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 73, "for the establishment of a body of Naval Coast Volunteers, and for the temporary transfer to the Navy, in case of need, of seafaring men employed in other public services," shall, with respect to every volunteer raised under that act, who, after the passing of this act, enters or re-enters himself as such volunteer, be read as if the words, "but so that no such volunteer be taken or sent beyond 100 leagues from the shore of some part of the United Kingdom," were omitted therefrom.

CAP. VI.

An Act to apply the Sum of Ten Millions out of the Consolidated Fund to the Service of the Year 1863.

[27th March, 1863.]

Sect. 1. There shall be applied for the service of the year 1863 the sum of 10,000,000*l.* out of the Consolidated Fund.

2. The Treasury may cause 10,000,000*l.* of Exchequer Bills to be made out in manner prescribed by stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 1; 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 15; and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 66.

3. The clauses, &c. in recited acts extended to this act.
4. Interest on Exchequer Bills.
5. Bank of England may advance 10,000,000L. on the credit of this act, notwithstanding the 5 & 6 Will. & M. c. 20.
6. Bills prepared by virtue of this act to be delivered to the Bank as security for such advances.
7. Monies raised by bills to be applied to the services voted by the Commons.
8. Exchequer Bills made chargeable upon the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund.

CAP. XIII.

An Act for the Protection of certain Garden or Ornamental Grounds in Cities and Boroughs. [4th May, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Gardens in squares, &c., of fifty years' standing may be freed from neglect, encroachments, &c., and vested in the Metropolitan Board of Works or other corporate authority; or vested in a committee of rated inhabitants.

2. Protection of open spaces from encroachment.

3. Expenses how to be defrayed.

4. By-laws for management of garden, &c.

5. Penalty for injuring garden.

6. Certain provisions of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, to be incorporated with this act, and to apply to penalties, &c. imposed by this act. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, also to apply.

7. Act not to extend to property of the Crown, or to property under the management of the Commissioners of Works, &c.

8. Extent of act.

Sect. 1. Where, in any city or borough, any enclosed garden or ornamental ground has been set apart otherwise than by the revocable permission of the owner thereof in any public square, crescent, circus, street, or other public place, for the use or enjoyment of the inhabitants thereof, and where the trustees, commissioners, or other body appointed for the care of the same, have neglected to keep it in proper order, or where such garden or ground has not been vested in or placed under the management of any trustees, commissioners, or other body for the care of the same, and from the want of such care, or from any other cause, has been neglected, the Metropolitan Board of Works, where the same is in any place under their jurisdiction, except the city of London (where the provisions of this act shall be carried into effect by the corporation of the said city), and the corporate authorities in any other city or borough, shall take charge of the same, putting up a notice or notices to that effect in such garden or ornamental ground, and if after due inquiry the person entitled to any estate of freehold in the same cannot be found, or if it shall be vested in any person by whom it is held, subject to any condition or reservation for keeping the same as and for a garden or pleasure-ground, or that the same shall not be built upon, but not otherwise, shall cause any buildings or other encroachment made therein within the period of twenty years before the passing of this act to be removed, and (if requested by a majority of two-thirds of the owners and of the occupiers of the houses surrounding the same) shall vest such garden or ornamental ground in a committee, consisting of not more than nine nor fewer than three of the rated inhabitants of such houses, to be chosen annually by such inhabitants, in order that the same may be kept as a garden or ornamental ground for the use of such inhabitants; and the vestry or board of any and every parish or district within which the same or any part thereof is situate, shall from time to time cause to be raised the sums required by such committee for defraying the expenses of the maintenance and management of such enclosed garden or ornamental ground, or such part thereof as is situate within their parish or district, by an addition to the general rate to be assessed on the occupiers of such houses; or if the said owners and occupiers shall not agree as aforesaid to undertake the charge of such garden or ornamental ground, the Metropolitan Board of Works or corporate authority aforesaid shall, within six months after the notice hereinbefore mentioned shall have been put up within the same, or within such further time as the said board or authority may think it expedient to allow for such agreement to be come to, vest the same in such vestries or boards, who shall thenceforth take charge of and maintain the same as an open place or street in such manner as shall appear to them most advantageous to the public, subject to the approval of the Metropolitan Board of Works or corporate authority, as the case may require; saving and always reserving to every person and persons, his and their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, all such estate, right, title, and interest as he, she, or they would or ought to have had and enjoyed of, in, to, from, or out of the gardens and grounds aforesaid in case this act had not passed.

2. And whereas it is expedient that the same should be carefully protected from undue encroachment, where any right to require that any garden or ornamental ground as aforesaid be kept and maintained as such, or that the same shall not be built upon, shall belong to any person in right of any house or other property, and he shall by notice in writing, signed by him, addressed to the Metropolitan Board of Works, where the same is in any place under their jurisdiction, except the city of London, where the same shall be addressed to the corporation of the said city, or to the corporate authorities in any other city or borough, requesting the said Metropolitan Board of Works or corporate authority to protect the right before mentioned, the said Metropolitan Board of Works or corporate authority, after due inquiry, may, if they shall think fit, accede to such request, and then and thereupon the right of such person to require that such garden or ornamental ground to be maintained as such, or that the same shall not be built upon, shall thenceforth be vested in such Metropolitan Board of Works or corporate authority, who shall be fully empowered, for and in their own name, to exercise all the rights, powers, and privileges in relation thereto, and take such legal proceedings for asserting, defending, and protecting the same, as the said person might have exercised or taken.

3. Any charge incurred by the Metropolitan Board of Works in the execution of this act shall be deemed to be expenses of the said board, for payment whereof provision is made by the act for the better local management of the metropolis; and the expenses incurred by any corporate authority shall be deemed to be expenses necessarily incurred by them in carrying into execution, within and for their city or borough, the act, intitled "An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales," and any other act amending the same.

4. Where any such garden or ground is managed by any committee of the inhabitants of any square, crescent, circus, street, or place, such committee may make, and from time to time revoke and alter, by-laws for the management of the same, and for the preservation of the trees, shrubs, plants, flowers, rails, fences, seats, summer-houses, and other things therein, which by-laws shall be entered in a book kept for that purpose by the committee, signed by the chairman of the meeting at which the same shall be passed, and which book shall and may be produced and read, and taken as evidence of such by-laws, in all courts whatever; and any inhabitant or servant, or other person admitted to such garden by any inhabitant, offending against the same, after they shall have been duly allowed, as hereinafter provided, upon proof thereof before a magistrate acting for the district in which such garden is situate, shall be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.: provided always, that such by-laws shall not come into operation until the same shall have been allowed by some judge of one of the superior courts, or by the justices in quarter sessions; and it shall be incumbent on such judge or justices, on the request of such committee, to inquire into any by-laws tendered to them for that purpose, and to allow or disallow the same as they think meet.

5. Any police constable who shall see any person throwing any rubbish into any such garden, or trespassing therein, or getting over the railings or fence, or stealing or damaging the flowers or plants, or committing any nuisance therein, may apprehend such person, under the authority hereby given to him; and any person convicted before any magistrate acting for the district shall be liable for each and every offence aforesaid to a penalty not exceeding 40*s*., or to imprisonment for any period not exceeding fourteen days; and in case it shall be necessary to state in any proceedings the ownership of the property of such garden, flowers, or plants, it shall be sufficient to describe the same as the property of the committee by the name of A. B. and others.

6. The provisions contained in the 225th, 226th, 227th, and 228th sections of the act passed in the session of Parliament held in the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, shall be incorporated in this act, and shall apply to any penalty or forfeiture imposed by this act, or any by-law made in pursuance thereof, in and for every matter or thing done, or omitted to be done, within the metropolitan district; and the act passed in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, shall apply to every penalty or forfeiture imposed by this act, or any by-law made in pursuance thereof, for any matter or thing done, or omitted to be done, within any other part of England and Wales.

7. Nothing in this act shall extend to or include any garden, ornamental ground, or other land belonging to her Majesty is right of her Crown or of her Duchy of Lancaster, or any garden, ornamental ground, or other land for the time being under the management of the commissioners for the time being of her Majesty's works and public buildings, or of the commissioners for the time being acting under the Crown Estate Paving Act, 1851, or to any garden, ornamental or other ground, for which special provision is made for the due care and protection thereof by any public or private act of Parliament.

8. Nothing in this act shall extend to Scotland or Ireland.

CAP. XIV.

6. Warrants to be laid before Parliament.

SECT. 1. In the case of the accounts of minors, or of accounts standing in the names of a minor and any other party, either in a post-office savings bank or in a savings bank established under the laws relating to savings banks, the Postmaster-General in the one case, and the trustees of the savings bank in the other, on the application in writing of the parent or other relative of the minor if under seven years of age, and of the minor himself if above that age, and also of the other party, if any, in whose name the account may stand, shall issue a certificate for the transfer of such account, and of all money standing to the credit of such account, according to the provisions of the 24 Vict. c. 14, s. 10, anything in the rules of any savings bank notwithstanding; and such account so transferred shall be opened in the post-office savings bank, or other savings bank to which the transfer is made, in the name of such party, if any, and of the minor, or in the name of the minor alone, as the case may be; and the receipt of the party or parties making such application, and receiving such transfer certificate, shall be a sufficient discharge to the Postmaster-General and to such trustees; but the money so transferred shall not be withdrawn, except with the consent of the Postmaster-General, or of any two trustees or managers of the savings bank to which the transfer is made, until the minor shall have attained the age at which it might have been withdrawn under the rules of the savings bank from which it was transferred, a note whereof shall be made on the said certificate.

2. Upon the final closing of any savings bank, or where any savings bank has already closed, the trustees or trustee for the time being thereof, or any two or more of them, shall forthwith notify the same in writing to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and shall, with the consent of the said commissioners, convert into money any property, not being money, held by the said trustees of the savings bank, or by any person as trustee for the savings bank, and after paying the expenses of such conversion, and any claims thereon, shall account for and pay over the residue to the said commissioners, to be by them carried to the separate surplus fund standing in the books of the said commissioners, and the monies carried on account of each saving bank to the said separate surplus fund under this and the following section of this act shall be subject to any claim that may thereafter be substantiated on account of any depositor in the savings bank so closed; and the receipt in writing of the said trustees or trustee for the time being, or any two or more of them, for any money paid to them by any purchaser or lessee, shall be an effectual discharge for the same, and the purchaser or lessee shall not be obliged to see to the application of such money, or be accountable or answerable for the loss, misapplication, or non-application thereof, or be bound to inquire whether the assent of the said commissioners has been obtained to such sale or lease, or to the regularity thereof: and all purchases of any freehold or copyhold or leasehold estates which have already been made, or may hereafter be made, with the consent of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, or the Comptroller-General acting under them, by the trustees of any savings bank, with the monies thereof, shall be and shall be deemed to have been as good, valid, and effectual in the law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if the same had been or were expressly authorised or sanctioned by any statute relating to savings banks; and such purchases shall not be liable to any objection, or their validity affected by reason of any defect in the right or power of such trustees to make such purchases; and a certificate under the hand of the said Comptroller-General of any such purchases having been made, with such consent and with such monies as aforesaid, shall for all purposes whatsoever be conclusive evidence thereof: provided always, that trustees of savings banks, which are desirous of closing shall have power to compensate their officers out of any separate surplus fund that may belong to any such savings bank, with the consent of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt.

3. When the trustees of any savings bank shall have determined to close the savings bank for the receipt of deposits, and shall have given public notice of such intention by letter through the post-office, prepaid, to each depositor at his residence when known, by advertisement in some one newspaper circulating in the district in which the savings bank is situate, and by affixing such notice on the outer door of the building in which the business of the savings bank is carried on, and shall have paid off three-fourths of their depositors amount, either in money or by transfer to a post-office savings bank, such trustees may, if they think fit, transmit, under the hands of two trustees and three managers, to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, a certified list of such depositors as have not applied to them to receive their deposits or for transfer certificates, and of the amount due to them respectively, and the said commissioners may thereupon receive from the said trustees all money remaining in the hands of the said trustees or of their treasurer, and if such money, with the money belonging to the said savings bank in the hands of the said commissioners, together with the proceeds of the sale of other property, as referred to in sect. 2 of this act, shall be sufficient to discharge the whole of the liabilities of such trustees to the depositors, as set forth in the said list, then the certificate of the said commissioners shall be a sufficient discharge to the said trustees in respect of all such money so paid over, or in the hands of the said commissioners; and all such monies shall be held by the said commissioners, subject to the rights and claims of the depositors named in such list, who shall thenceforth be considered to be depositors in a post-office savings bank; and such depositors, on presenting their deposit books at any post-office savings bank, shall be entitled to claim payment of the sums due to them respectively, with the interest due to them thereon, and on establishing their claim shall be paid out of the monies so paid over by the trustees under this and the foregoing section of this act, and in the hands of the commissioners as above referred to, and the surplus of such monies, if any, after providing for the sums due to such depositors, shall be carried to the separate surplus fund in the books of the said commissioners.

4. The Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, by warrant under the hands of any two or more of them, addressed to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, may from time to time direct that out of the total amount of the capital stock of any perpetual Government annuities, bearing interest at or exceeding the rate of 3l. per cent. per annum, standing in the names of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt on account of post-office savings banks in the books of the Bank of England, the amount of stock mentioned in such warrant shall be cancelled, and that in place thereof there shall be created and inscribed in the said books, in the names of the said commissioners, a like amount of capital stock, bearing interest at the rate of 2l. 10s. per cent. per annum; and the said Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury shall by the said warrant authorise and direct the said governor and company to create and inscribe in the books of the Bank, in addition to the said capital stock, bearing an interest of 2l. 10s. per cent. per annum, such an amount of annuity, for a term of years ending on the 5th April, 1885, as shall be equivalent in value to the difference between the rate of 2l. 10s. per cent. and the rate of interest on the capital stock so cancelled; and the amount of such terminable annuity shall be ascertained and determined by the tables in force under the act of the 10 Geo. 4, c. 24, under the authority of which annuities for terms of years are granted by the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; and such stock and annuities so created in lieu of the annuities cancelled shall be held by the said Commissioners for Post-office Savings Banks; and all such 2l. 10s. perpetual annuities shall be consolidated with, and be deemed part of, the 2l. 10s. per cent. annuities created under the act of the 16 Vict. c. 23, s. 2; and such terminable annuities shall be consolidated with, and form part of, the terminable annuities created under the act of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 109, s. 3, and the interest thereon shall be charged on the Consolidated Fund, and be paid and payable to the Bank of England; and such warrant shall be a sufficient authority to the said Governor and Company for the creation and inscription of the said stock and annuities respectively.

5. The trustees of any savings bank, at a meeting called for that purpose, may appoint any number of managers to sign transfer certificates; and the signatures of any two of such managers to a transfer certificate shall be a sufficient authority to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt to transfer the amount set forth in such certificate; provided that a list of such managers, with their signatures certified by two trustees, shall have been previously deposited with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; and provided also, that the said trustees may from time to time revoke such appointment, and appoint other managers, notifying such revocation and appointment to the said commissioners.

6. Whenever the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury shall exercise the powers vested in them by the 4th section of this act, copy of the warrant issued in respect thereof by the said commissioners shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within ten days from the date thereof, if Parliament shall be then sitting; and if not then sitting, then in the ten days after the then next assembling of Parliament.

CAP. XV.

An Act to apply the Sum of Twenty Millions out of the Consolidated Fund to the Service of the Year 1863.

[11th May, 1863.]

CAP. XVI.

An Act for raising the Sum of One Million Pounds by Exchequer Bonds for the Service of the Year 1863.

[11th May, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Treasury may raise 1,000,000l. by Exchequer Bonds.

2. Interest on bonds, and repayment of principal money.

3. Treasury may cause Exchequer Bonds to be prepared and issued.

4. Application of clauses 16, 17, 18, and 19 of stat. 16 & 19 Vict. c. 23.

5. Money raised to be paid to the Consolidated Fund.

6. Exchequer Bonds may be delivered to persons authorised by the Treasury.

7. Bank of England may advance 1,000,000l. on the credit of bonds, and Commissioners of National Debt may invest money on account of savings banks in purchase of bonds.

CAP. XVII.

An Act for amending the Local Government Act, 1858.

[11th May, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Restriction as to the adoption of the act by certain places.

3. Amendment of sects. 17 & 18 of stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 96.

4. As to abandonment of Local Government Act in certain places.

5. Provision for avoidance of constitution of district.

6. Local Government Act districts to be within highway districts for the purpose of highway meetings.

7. Amendment of sect. 15 of stat. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 96.

8. Construction of acts.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Local Government Act Amendment Act, 1863."

2. The adoption of the Local Government Act, 1858, by any place where that act was not in force on the 1st March, 1863, and where the population, according to the then last census, is less than 3000, shall not be of any validity unless it is approved by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, on proof being given to his satisfaction, that by reason of special circumstances, it is expedient that such place should be allowed to adopt the act.

Before signifying his approval or disapproval, the said Secretary may cause an inquiry to be made in the place as to the circumstances alleged in support of the expediency of the adoption of the act, of the time and place of which inquiry fourteen days' public notice shall be given, and on the determination of such inquiry shall give or withhold, as he thinks just, his approval of the adoption of the act.

The approval or disapproval of the said Secretary of State shall be published by the said Secretary in the Gazette, and such publication shall be evidence of the fact of that approval or disapproval having been given.

3. Petitions appealing against the resolution of adoption, and praying for exclusion from the operation of the Local Government Act, under the 17th section of that act, and appeals from owners and ratepayers who dispute the validity of the vote for adoption under the 18th section of the same act, may be presented and had at any time before the expiration of six weeks from the date of any resolution adopting the act.

4. When a resolution adopting the Local Government Act has been passed in a place in which the population, according to the then last census, is less than 3000, that resolution may at any time be rescinded by a subsequent resolution passed in the same manner in which resolutions for the adoption of the act are required to be passed, but the rescinding resolution shall not be of any effect unless it is approved by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and notice is published by him in the London Gazette of the passing of the resolution, and of his approval thereof.

An appeal may be had from any such rescinding resolution in the same manner, and subject to the same conditions, as nearly as may be, in and subject to which an appeal may be had against a resolution adopting the act; and the provisions of the Local Government Act relating to an appeal against the adoption of the act shall, with the requisite variations, apply to an appeal under this section.

The notice of the rescinding resolution shall not be published until the expiration of the time limited for an appeal, or until the determination of the appeal, but upon the publication thereof the adoption of the Local Government Act shall be deemed to be avoided as from the date of that publication, and from the same date the Local Government Act shall cease to be in force within the district, and the district shall revert to the position in which it was before the adoption of the Local Government Act; so nevertheless that any contracts that may have been entered into by or on behalf of the local board of any such district may be enforced in the same manner in all respects as if the Local Government Act had continued in force in the district, and, so far as may be necessary for the enforcement of such contracts, the local board, and all their powers of levying money, shall be deemed to be continued.

5. In any district constituted under the Local Government Act, 1858, where by that act the local board is required to be elected by the ratepayers, and where the population, according to the then last census, is less than 3000, if no election of a local board, in pursuance of the said act, takes place within three months from the date of the constitution of the district, or if in any such district as last aforesaid the local board makes default in appointing fit and proper persons to the following offices, or any of them—that is to say, to the office of surveyor, inspector of nuisances, clerk, and treasurer, within two months after the election of the local board, then, upon the happening of either of the above events, the adoption of the Local Government Act, in the said district shall be void, and the Local Government Act, 1858, shall cease to be in force within the district, and the district shall revert to the same position as it was in before the adoption of the act: so nevertheless that any contracts that may have been entered into by or on behalf of the local board of any such district may be enforced in the same manner in all respects as if the Local Government Act had continued in force in the district, and so far as may be necessary for the enforcement of such contracts, the local board and all their powers of levying money shall be deemed to be continued.

6. Where any district under the Public Health Act, 1848, and the Local Government Act, 1858, or either such of acts, or any other place, is surrounded by or adjoins a highway district constituted under the Highway Acts, such first-mentioned district or other place shall, for the purpose of any meeting of the highway board, be deemed to be within such highway district.

7. The power of adopting any part or parts of the Local Government Act, 1858, given by that act and the acts amending the same, shall not be exhausted by one adoption, but may be exercised from time to time.

8. The Public Health Act, 1848, and the acts amending the same, and the acts amending the Local Government Act, 1858, including this act, are hereby declared to be one act, and to be included under the expression the "Local Government Act, 1858," or any words referring to that act.

CAP. XXVIII.

An Act to give further Facilities to the Holders of the Public Stocks.

[8th June, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Definition of terms.

3. Right of certificate of title to stock.

4. Restriction as to trustees taking certificates of title.

5. General provisions as to certificates of title.

6. Distinction between certificates of title to bearer and nominal certificates.

7. Nominees in a nominal certificate not entitled to have it renewed as nominal.

8. Fees in respect of dealings with stock under this act.

9. Remuneration to the Bank.

10. General regulations with respect to certificates of title.

11. Income tax.

12. Unclaimed dividends.

13. Provisions as to public stocks outstanding.
14. Penalties on persons committing forgery.
15. Penalties on persons falsely personating owners of stock.
16. Penalties on persons engraving plates, &c.

Whereas it is expedient to give further facilities to the holders of the public stocks in respect of the transfer thereof, and the receipt of the dividends thereon: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as the "Stock Certificate Act, 1863."

2. In this section, and elsewhere in this act, the following expressions have the meanings here assigned to them:—

"The Bank" shall, with reference to the public stocks transferable at the Bank of England, and certificates issued under this act in respect thereof, and the coupons of such certificates, mean the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and shall, with reference to the public stocks transferable at the Bank of Ireland, and certificates issued under this act in respect thereof, and the coupons of such last-mentioned certificates, mean the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland:

"The Treasury" shall mean "the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, or any two of them:"

"The public stocks" shall mean any stocks forming part of the National Debt, and transferable in the books of the Bank; and "share in the public stocks" shall include any part of a share:

"Person" shall include corporation:

"Felony" shall mean and include crime and offence in Scotland.

3. With the exception, and subject to the conditions hereinafter mentioned, every person inscribed in the books of the Bank of England or of the Bank of Ireland as proprietor of a share in the public stocks may obtain a certificate or certificates of title to the said share, or to any part thereof, having annexed coupons entitling the bearer to the dividends payable in respect of that share or part of a share.

4. No trustee of any share in the said stocks shall apply for or hold a certificate of title to that share, unless he is authorised so to do by the terms of his trust; and any contravention of this section by a trustee shall be deemed to be a breach of trust, and be punishable accordingly; nevertheless this section shall not impose on the Bank any obligation to inquire whether a person applying for a certificate of title under this act is or not a trustee, nor subject them to any liability in the event of their granting a certificate of title to a trustee, nor invalidate any certificate of title if granted.

5. No certificate shall be granted in respect of any sum of stock not being 50*l.*, or a multiple of 50*l.*, or in respect of any larger amount than 1000*l.*:

The Treasury may, by warrant, declare that any one or more of the public stocks specified in the warrant shall be subject to the provisions of this act; but, until that declaration is made, stock certificates shall be issued only in respect of the 3*l.* per Cent. Consolidated Annuities, Reduced 3*l.* per Cent. Annuities, and the New 3*l.* per Cent. Annuities:

The coupons annexed to a stock certificate shall comprise the dividends payable in respect of the stock described in the certificate for a period of not less than five years, commencing from the date of the certificate. At the expiration of that period, fresh coupons shall be issued for a further period of not less than five years, and so for successive periods of not less than five years during the continuance in force of the stock certificate; but the Bank may, if they think fit, in lieu of issuing fresh coupons in respect of a certificate, give in exchange a fresh certificate with coupons attached thereto:

Coupons shall be payable at the chief establishment of the Bank at the expiration of three clear days from the day of presentation, and at any branch establishment of the Bank, situate more than ten miles from the chief establishment, at the expiration of five clear days from the day of presentation:

The payment to the bearer of any coupon of the amount expressed therein shall be a full discharge to the Bank of all liability in respect of that coupon, and the dividend represented thereby:

If any stock certificate or coupon issued under this act is lost, or destroyed, the Bank shall grant a new certificate or coupon, on receiving indemnity to their satisfaction against the claims of all persons deriving title under the certificate or coupon so lost or destroyed:

No notice of any trust in respect of any stock certificate or coupon issued under this act shall be receivable by the Bank.

6. A stock certificate, unless a name is inscribed therein, as hereinafter provided, shall entitle the bearer to the stock therein described, and shall be transferable by delivery:

The bearer of a stock certificate may convert the same into a nominal certificate by inserting therein, in manner prescribed by any regulation made in pursuance of this act, the name, address, and quality of some person. A stock certificate when it becomes nominal shall not be transferable, and the person named therein (hereinafter called the nominee), or some person deriving title from him by devolution in law as hereinafter mentioned, shall alone be recognised by the Bank as entitled to the stock described in the certificate:

Upon the death of the nominee in a nominal certificate, his personal representative, upon his bankruptcy his assignees, and upon the marriage of any female nominee her husband, shall alone be recognised by the Bank as entitled to the stock described in the certificate, and shall be deemed respectively to be a nominee or nominees in that certificate:

The death or bankruptcy of any nominee in a nominal certificate, or the marriage of any female nominee, and the loss or destruction of any certificate or coupon, shall be proved in such manner as may from time to time be directed by the Bank, with the sanction of the Treasury.

7. The nominee in a nominal stock certificate shall not be entitled to have the same renewed as nominal, but he shall, on delivery up to the Bank of his certificate, and of all unpaid coupons belonging thereto, and on compliance with any regulation made in pursuance of this act, be entitled to receive in exchange from the Bank a stock certificate to bearer:

The nominee in a nominal stock certificate, and the bearer of a stock certificate to bearer, may, on the like delivery, and on compliance with any regulation made in pursuance of this act, require to be registered in the books of the Bank as a holder of the stock described in the certificates under which they respectively derive title, and thereupon the stock shall be re-entered in the books kept by the Bank for the entry of transferable stock, and become transferable, and the dividends payable as if no certificate had been issued in respect of such stock.

8. No fees shall be charged on the grant of a stock certificate to bearer, in exchange for a like certificate, but there shall be charged with respect to the several other proceedings in relation to stock authorised by this act the fees specified in the schedule hereto, or such less fees as may be determined by the Treasury:

All fees received in pursuance of this act shall be paid into the receipt of her Majesty's exchequer:

No stamp duty shall be payable in respect of any certificate or coupon issued in pursuance of this act.

9. There shall be paid to the Bank of England, out of the Consolidated Fund, on account of the additional trouble, expense, and responsibility, if any, imposed on it by this act, in addition to the remuneration otherwise payable to it in respect of the management of the National Debt, such remuneration as may be agreed upon between the Treasury and the Bank of England.

10. The Bank of England and the Bank of Ireland, with the sanction of the Treasury, may from time to time issue any forms that may be required for carrying into effect the provisions of this act, and also from time to time make any regulations that are not inconsistent with this act relative to the following things:

- (1.) The time for which coupons are to be given:
- (2.) The conversion of a stock certificate to bearer into a nominal certificate:
- (3.) The authority under which, and the mode in which, the bank is to act in issuing stock certificates, or exchanging nominal certificates for certificates to bearer, or registering in their books the holders of stock certificates, or taking any other proceedings in relation to stock authorised to be taken under this act:

(4.) The mode of proving the title of, or identifying, any person applying for a stock certificate, or deriving any title under a stock certificate issued under this act:

(5.) With respect to any other matter necessary to carry this act into effect:

And any regulation so made shall be deemed to be part of this act in the same manner as if it were herein enacted.

11. The income tax shall be deducted from any coupons payable under this act in the same manner and subject to the same regulations in and subject to which it may, in pursuance of any law for the time being in force, be deducted from the dividends payable at the Bank in respect of the stock of proprietors inscribed in the books of the Bank.

12. All sums due and not demanded on any coupons issued under this act shall for all purposes be dealt with as if they were dividends due and not demanded in respect of the stock of proprietors inscribed in the books of the Bank.

13. When any certificate of title issued under this act in respect of any share in the public stocks is outstanding, the stock represented thereby shall cease to be transferable in the books of the Bank:

Save in so far as relates to the mode of transfer and payment of dividends thereon, any stock described in a stock certificate issued under this act shall be deemed to be charged on the same securities, and to be subject to the same powers of redemption, and to the same incidents in all respects, including the remuneration payable to the Bank, as if it had continued registered in the books of the Bank as stock transferable therein:

Any stock described in a stock certificate in respect of which no coupons have been presented for payment for a period of ten years, may in all respects be dealt with as if it were stock upon which no dividends had been demanded for a period of ten years, and be transferred accordingly to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and shall be subject to the rights of the parties proving themselves entitled to such stock in pursuance of the act passed in the 56 Geo. 3. c. 60, or the act passed in the session held in the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 71; and the provisions of those acts and of all other acts relating to stock transferred to the aforesaid commissioners shall apply to stock in respect of which certificates shall have been issued in pursuance of this act.

14. Whosoever shall forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any stock certificate or coupon, or any document purporting to be a stock certificate or coupon issued in pursuance of this act, or shall demand or endeavour to obtain or receive any share or interest of or in the public stocks, or to receive any dividend or money payable in respect thereof, by virtue of any such forged or altered certificate or coupon or document purporting as aforesaid, knowing the same to be forged or altered, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to defraud, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life or for any term not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

15. Whosoever shall falsely and deceitfully personate any owner of any share or interest of or in any of the public stocks, or of any stock certificate or coupon issued in pursuance of this act, and shall thereby obtain, or endeavour to obtain, any such stock certificate or coupon, or receive, or endeavour to receive, any money due to any such owner, as if such offender were the true and lawful owner, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life or for any term not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

16. Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused, shall engrave or make, upon any plate, wood, stone, or other material, any stock certificate or coupon purporting to be a stock certificate or coupon issued or made under and in pursuance of this act, or to be a blank stock certificate or coupon issued or made as aforesaid, or to be a part of such a stock certificate or coupon, or shall use any such plate, wood, stone, or other material for the making or printing of any such stock certificate or coupon, or any such blank stock certificate or coupon, or any part thereof respectively, or knowingly have in his custody or possession any such plate, wood, stone, or other material, or shall knowingly offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, or have in his custody or possession, any paper upon which any such blank stock certificate or coupon, or part of any such stock certificate or coupon, shall be made or printed, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

SCHEDULE OF FEES.

On the issue of a stock certificate, a fee not exceeding 5s. on every 100l. of stock included in the certificate, and a proportional sum for any less sum.

If the applicant is the registered holder of an amount of stock divisible into several sums of 50l., or multiples of 50l., he may require such sums of 50l., or such multiples of 50l., to be distributed amongst different certificates, as he thinks fit; subject to this proviso, that if the number of certificates required by him exceed the proportion of five to 1000l., he shall, in respect of each certificate constituting that excess, pay a sum of 6d. in addition to the per-centage fee.

On the change of a nominal certificate for a certificate to bearer, or on the registration in the books of the Bank of the stock included in a nominal certificate, there shall be charged a fee not exceeding one-half the fee that would be chargeable on the issue of a new certificate to bearer.

On the registration in the books of the Bank of the stock included in a stock certificate to bearer there shall be charged a fee not exceeding 5s.

CAP. XXIX.

An Act to amend and continue the Law relating to Corrupt Practices at Elections of Members of Parliament.

[8th June, 1863.]

Sec. 1. Short title.

2. No payment, &c. shall be made by or on behalf of candidates otherwise than through authorised agents.

3. Bills, &c. to be sent in within one month to agent, or right to recover barred.

4. As to publication of statement of election expenses.

5. Sec. 14 of stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, extended to misdemeanours, &c.

6. General allegations sufficient in indictments.

7. Evidence of witness on election committees and before commissions.

8. Regulations as to proceedings of election committees.

9. Prosecutions for bribery.

10. Acts as mentioned in col. 3 of schedule repealed.

11. Continuance of Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts.

Whereas the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 [17 & 18 Vict. c. 102], as amended by an act of the session holden in the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 87, is limited to continue in force until the 1st September, 1863, and from thence until the end of the next session of Parliament; and it is expedient further to amend the said acts, and to continue the same in manner hereinafter mentioned: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sec. 1. The expression "the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts," shall include this act and the said act of the 21 & 22 Vict., and the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854, as amended by the said other acts.

Expenses of Elections.

2. No payment (except in respect of the personal expenses of a candidate), and no advance, loan, or deposit, shall be made by or on behalf of any candidate at an election, before, or during, or after such election, on account of, or in respect of, such election, otherwise than through an agent or agents whose name and address, or names and addresses, have been declared in writing to the returning officer on or before the day of nomination, or through an agent or agents to be appointed in his or their place as herein provided; and any person making any such payment, advance, loan, or deposit, otherwise than through such agent or agents, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, or in Scotland of an offence punishable by fine and imprisonment. It shall be the duty of the returning officer to publish, on or before the day of nomination, the name and address, or the names and addresses, of the agent or agents appointed in pursuance of this section.

In the event of the death or legal incapacity of any agent appointed in pursuance of this section, the candidate shall forthwith appoint another agent in his place, on giving notice to the returning officer of the name and address of the person so appointed, which shall be forthwith published by the returning officer.

3. All persons who have any bills, charges, or claims upon any candidate for or in respect of any election shall send in such bills, charges, or claims within one month from the day of the declaration of the election to such agent or agents as aforesaid, otherwise such persons shall be barred of their right to recover such claims, and every or any part thereof: provided always, that in case of the death within the said month of any person claiming the amount of such bill, charge, or claim, the legal representative of such person shall send in such bill, charge, or claim within one month after obtaining probate or letters of administration, or confirmation as executor, as the case may be, or the right to recover such claim shall be barred as aforesaid: provided also, that such bills, charges, and claims shall and may be sent in and delivered to the candidate, if, and so long as, during the said month, there shall, owing to death or legal incapacity, be no such agent.

4. A detailed statement of all election expenses incurred by or on behalf of any candidate, including such excepted payments as aforesaid, shall, within two months after the election (or in cases where, by reason of the death of the creditor, no bill has been sent in within such period of two months, then within one month after such bill has been sent in), be made out and signed by the agent, or, if there be more than one, by every agent who has paid the same (including the candidate in case of payments made by him), and delivered, with the bills and vouchers relative thereto, to the returning officer, and the returning officer for the time being shall, at the expense of the candidate, within fourteen days, insert or cause to be inserted an abstract of such statement, with the signature of the agent thereto, in some newspaper published or circulating in the county or place where the election was held; and any agent or candidate who makes default in delivering to the returning officer the statement required by this section, shall incur a penalty, not exceeding 5*l.*, for every day during which he so makes default; and any agent or candidate who wilfully furnishes to the said returning officer an untrue statement shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, or, in Scotland, of an offence punishable by fine and imprisonment; and the said returning officer shall preserve all such bills and vouchers, and, during six months after they have been delivered to him, permit any voter to inspect the same, on payment of a fee of 1*s.*

Legal Proceedings.

5. The provisions of the 14th section of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854, shall extend to a misdemeanour or to any other offence under the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts not punishable by a penalty or forfeiture, as well as to proceedings for any offence punishable by a penalty or forfeiture.

6. In any indictment or information for bribery or undue influence, and in any action or proceeding for any penalty for bribery, treating, or undue influence, it shall be sufficient to allege that the defendant was, at the election at or in connexion with which the offence is intended to be alleged to have been committed, guilty of bribery, treating, or undue influence (as the case may require); and in any criminal or civil proceedings in relation to any such offence, the certificate of the returning officer in this behalf shall be sufficient evidence of the due holding of the election, and of any person therein named having been a candidate thereat.

7. No person who is called as a witness before any election committee, or any commissioners appointed in pursuance of the act of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57, shall be excused from answering any question relating to any corrupt practice at, or connected with, any election forming the subject of inquiry by such committee or commissioners, on the ground that the answer thereto may criminate, or tend to criminate, himself: provided always, that where any witness shall answer every question relating to the matters aforesaid which he shall be required by such committee or commissioners (as the case may be) to answer, and the answer to which may criminate, or tend to criminate him, he shall be entitled to receive from the committee, under the hand of their clerk, or from the commissioners, under their hands (as the case may be), a certificate stating that such witness was, upon his examination, required by the said committee or commissioners to answer questions, or a question, relating to the matters aforesaid, the answers or answer to which criminated, or tended to criminate him, and had answered all such questions or such question; and if any information, indictment, or action be at any time thereafter pending in any court against such witness for any offence under the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts, or for which he might have been prosecuted or proceeded against under such acts committed by him previously to the time of his giving his evidence, and at or in relation to the election concerning or in relation to which the witness may have been so examined, the court shall, on production and proof of such certificate, stay the proceedings in such last-mentioned information, indictment, or action, and may, at its discretion, award to such witness such costs as he may have been put to in such information, indictment, or action: provided that no statement made by any person in answer to any question put by or before such election committee or commissioners shall, except in cases of indictments for perjury, be admissible in evidence in any proceeding, civil or criminal.

Election Committees.

8. The following regulations shall be made with respect to the proceedings of select committees appointed to try election petitions:—

- (1). On any charge of treating being brought before any election committee, it shall not be necessary, unless the committee should otherwise decide, to prove agency in the first instance, before giving in evidence the facts whereby the charge of treating is to be sustained:
- (2). Where any person who has voted at any election is found by any committee to have been guilty of bribery or treating at such election, his vote shall be void, and may, upon a scrutiny, be struck off the list of voters, notwithstanding that the name of such guilty person has not been included in the list of voters to be objected to:
- (3). Where any election petition complains that bribery, treating, or other corrupt practices have been committed at any election, the committee to whose determination such petition is referred shall report to the House of Commons whether or not corrupt practices have, or whether there is reason to believe corrupt practices have, extensively prevailed at such election in the place to which the petition refers.

9. Where an election committee has reported to the House of Commons, that certain persons named by them have been guilty of bribery or treating, and where it appears by the report of any commission of inquiry into corrupt practices at any election made to Her Majesty, and laid before Parliament, that certain persons named by them have been guilty of the offences of bribery or treating, and have not been furnished by them with certificates of indemnity, such report, with the evidence taken by the commission, shall be laid before the Attorney-General, with a view to his instituting a prosecution against such persons if the evidence should, in his opinion, be sufficient to support a prosecution.

Repeal.

10. There shall be repealed the several acts of Parliament mentioned in the schedule hereto to the extent specified in the third column of the said schedule, but such repeal shall not affect the punishment of any offence, or the recovery of any penalty or forfeiture, incurred under any of the provisions hereby repealed.

11. The Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts shall continue in force for a period of five years from the date of the passing of this act, and from thenceforth until the end of the then next session of Parliament.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards raising the necessary supplies to defray your Majesty's public expenses, and making an addition to the public revenue, have freely and voluntarily resolved to give and grant unto your Majesty the several rates and duties hereinafter mentioned, and do therefore most humbly beseech your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. From and after the passing of this act any person who, in England or Ireland, shall have taken out an excise license to sell strong beer in casks containing not less than four and a half gallons, or in not less than two dozen reputed quart bottles at one time, to be drunk or consumed elsewhere than on his premises, may take out an additional license on payment of the excise duty of 1l. 1s. and 6l. per cent. thereon; and the same shall authorise such person to sell beer in any less quantity and in any other manner than as aforesaid, but not to be drunk or consumed on the premises where sold; and such additional license shall be granted without the production of any certificate, or the possession of any other qualification than the license herein first mentioned.

2. From and after the 10th October, 1863, there shall be charged and paid for and upon every excise license to be taken out by any person who, in England or Ireland, shall be duly authorised by justices of the peace to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling house, and who shall sell beer, cider, or perry by retail, to be drunk or consumed in his, her, or their house or premises, and who shall not take out a license to retail spirits, the excise duty of 3l. 3s., and 6l. per cent. thereon, in lieu of the duty now payable on such license to retail beer.

3. Every person who shall in Ireland sell beer, cider, or perry by retail, that is to say, in any quantity less than four and a half gallons or in less than two dozen reputed quart bottles at one time, without having an excise retail license in force authorising him so to do, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 20l., which said penalty may be sued for and recovered under the Laws of Excise, by and in the name of any superintendent or inspector of police within the police district of Dublin metropolis, or by any sub-inspector, head or other constable, in any other part of Ireland, without any order of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for that purpose, as well as by and in the name of an officer of excise, under the order of the said commissioners.

4. The duties of excise on sugar made in the United King-dem, specified in Schedule (B.) of the act passed in the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 61, shall be continued, and be levied and charged, until the 1st August, 1864.

5. And whereas by an act passed in the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 34, a duty of excise was imposed on sugar used in the brewing or making of beer, and by an act passed in the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22, the charging of the said duty was deferred until the 1st July, 1863, and it is expedient to further defer the same: be it enacted, that the charging of the said duty of excise on sugar used as aforesaid shall be further deferred until the 1st August, 1864.

6. From and after the passing of this act the duties now payable by law for and in respect of the licenses and stage carriages hereinafter in this clause described shall be reduced; and in lieu of the said duties now payable as aforesaid there shall be charged and paid in Great Britain for and in respect of every original license, to be taken out yearly, to keep, use, or employ a stage carriage which shall be licensed to carry not more than eight passengers at one time, the duty of 10s.; and for and in respect of every supplementary license for the same carriage which shall be taken out in any case allowed by law during the period for which such original license was granted, the duty of 6d.;

And for and in respect of every mile which any such stage carriage as aforesaid shall be licensed to travel, the duty of 04d.

7. If any person who shall have obtained a license under this act to keep, use, and employ a stage carriage to carry not more than eight passengers at one time, shall carry or convey in or upon such carriage more than eight passengers at one time, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of 10l.; and every person who shall be carried or conveyed in or upon any such carriage (except the driver thereof) shall be deemed to be a passenger conveyed for hire at a separate fare.

8. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, whenever they shall deem it to be necessary for the accommodation of the public, to grant to any person an occasional license to use a carriage for the conveyance of passengers at separate fares for one day, or for any longer period not exceeding six days in the whole, on payment of the following duties for and in respect of such license (that is to say),—

For a license for one day only:

For a carriage drawn by one horse only .	£0	3	0
For a carriage drawn by two horses and no more	0	5	0
For a carriage drawn by more than two horses	0	10	0

And where any such license shall be granted for a longer period than one day there shall be charged and paid for the same the further duty of one-half of the before-mentioned rates respectively for every day after the first, in addition to the rate payable for one day.

9. Every such occasional license to use a carriage for the purpose aforesaid shall be granted under and subject to such conditions, rules, and regulations as the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall prescribe in that behalf, and the carriage for which such license shall be granted shall be designated in such manner as the said commissioners shall require or direct; and in default of complying with any such rule, regulation, or direction, the person to whom such license shall be granted shall forfeit the sum of 10l.

10. Whereas by the law in force licenses to keep, use, and employ stage carriages expire on the first Sunday in the month of October in each year, and it is expedient to alter the time of the expiration thereof: be it enacted, that all such licenses taken out after the passing of this act shall (except in the cases hereinafter provided for) expire on the first Sunday in the month of November in each year; and every license which shall be taken out after the first Sunday in the month of November in any year, and before the 1st December in the same year, shall be dated on the first Monday in November in the year in which the same shall be granted, and if taken out on or at any time after the 1st December in any year, shall be dated on the day when the same shall be granted; and every license to use a stage carriage in force at the time of the passing of this act shall continue in force until the first Sunday in the month of November next after the passing hereof, and the holder of such license shall be liable to, and chargeable with, the payment of the same rate and amount of duties as are chargeable upon him according to the terms of such license until the said first Sunday in the last-mentioned month of November, unless such license shall be sooner discontinued.

11. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any person to take out a license to keep, use, and employ a stage carriage for the conveyance of passengers at separate fares for the period of three months only, commencing on any of the several quarter days following (that is to say), the 1st April, the 1st July, the 1st October, and the 1st January in any year, paying for such license one-fourth part of the duty which would be payable for the granting of such license for one whole year; provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to repeal or supersede the provisions of the 17th section of the act passed in the 6 Geo. 4, c. 81, authorising the granting of excise licenses for the remainder of a current year, but that such provisions shall be deemed to apply and shall be observed with regard to stage carriage licenses for the remainder of any year ending on the first Sunday in November; and the several quarters corresponding with the termination of such year shall be deemed to consist of ninety-one days.

12. When any person to whom any license shall have been granted for or in respect of any stage carriage shall discontinue the business in relation to such stage carriage, it shall be lawful for the proper officer or officers of excise, upon payment of all duty in arrear due from the person to whom the license was granted, to transfer such license to any other person to whom the original holder thereof shall assign his interest therein; and the person to whom such license shall be transferred shall thereupon be liable to, and chargeable with, the payment of the duty which shall accrue or become payable under such license, or in respect of the stage carriage to which the same shall relate, and shall also be liable to all other the provisions and regulations contained in any act relating to stage carriages, in the same manner as if such last-mentioned person had duly obtained a license in his own name for the keeping, using, and employing of such stage carriage: provided always, that the original holder of such license shall indorse in writing upon the back thereof the name of the person to whom he assigns his interest therein, and shall sign his own name to such indorsement.

13. Whereas, by sect. 4 of stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 79, the proprietor, or company of proprietors, of every railway in Great Britain, and other persons therein named, are required to keep and render certain accounts as therein mentioned, and it is expedient to alter the period for which such accounts are directed to be made up, and the time of delivering the same: be it enacted, that the proprietor, or company of proprietors, of every railway in Great Britain, and the persons required by law to keep such accounts as aforesaid, shall deliver to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, or to the proper officer appointed for receiving the same, within twenty days after the termination of every calendar month, a true copy or true copies of the amounts of all sums of money received or charged, and paid or accounted for, as in the said act is mentioned, during the whole of the calendar month last preceding; and all the provisions and regulations contained in the said act with regard to the accounts therein directed to be rendered, and all bonds and securities entered into or given, or to be entered into or given, with relation thereto, shall apply, continue, and be in force, as well with respect to any surety as to the principal in any such bond, and to the accounts to be kept and rendered at the time and in the manner by this act directed, and the duties payable in respect thereof.

14. The exemption from duty granted by the 9th section of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, in respect of the conveyance of passengers by cheap trains shall not extend to any railway train which shall not be a train running on at least six days of the week, or else a train running to or from a market town on a market day, and approved of by the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade and Plantations as a cheap train for the conveyance of passengers to or from market, or a train approved by the said Lords of the Committee of Privy Council as an ordinary train of the railway travelling on Sunday, and conveying third-class passengers at fares not exceeding 1d. per mile.

15. Whereas under the laws of excise now in force separate and distinct licenses are granted to the same person to exercise several trades in the same house and premises, and it is expedient that the authority to exercise two or more of such trades should be combined in one license: be it enacted, that whenever any person shall intend to carry on two or more trades under the excise laws in the same house or premises, the licenses for which several trades would expire by law at the same time, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, in such cases as they shall think fit, to authorise the exercising of the said several trades by one license for that purpose on payment of the amount of the several duties chargeable for several licenses to exercise the same trades respectively.

16. If any person who shall have given notice of his intention to ship any goods or commodities for exportation on drawback shall give another such notice in respect of the same goods or commodities, or shall claim the drawback upon the same goods and commodities more than once, or shall pass any account or do any act for the purpose of obtaining any further or greater amount of drawback upon any such goods or commodities than the drawback payable by law thereon, or whereby, or by means or colour whereof any such further or greater amount of drawback than as aforesaid may be obtained or claimed, he shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 100*l.*, and treble the amount of the drawback unlawfully obtained or claimed, or which might be obtained or claimed, by means or under colour of any such unlawful act as aforesaid.

17. If any goods or commodities upon the exportation of which a drawback of excise is payable, shall, after the same shall have been shipped on board any vessel for exportation, be brought on shore, or if the package or packages, in which any such goods or commodities shall be contained, shall, after shipment thereof as aforesaid, be opened, or the marks, letters, or devices thereon, be cancelled, obliterated, or altered, without the sanction of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue first had and obtained, all such goods and commodities, and the packages containing the same, shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of Customs or Excise, and the person or persons who shall bring on shore such goods or commodities, or who shall open such packages, or cancel, obliterate, or alter the marks, letters, or devices thereon, or who shall be concerned in doing any of the said acts, shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*

18. Every license taken out under the provisions contained in the two several acts passed in the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 27 and c. 107, respectively, by a licensed keeper of a refreshment-house, to sell therein by retail foreign wine, to be consumed in such house, or on the premises belonging thereto, shall authorise and include the sale of sweets and made wines, mead, and metheglin, by retail, to be consumed in the said house, or on the said premises.

19. In lieu of the duty now chargeable on a victualler's occasional license, specified in Schedule (B.) of the act passed in the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22, there shall be charged and paid the following duty (that is to say);—

For and upon every occasional license to be granted to any person who shall be duly authorised to keep a common inn, alehouse, or victualling-house, and licensed to sell therein beer, spirits, wine, or tobacco, to sell the like articles for which he shall be so licensed at any such other place, and for and during such space or period of time not exceeding six days as shall be specified in such occasional license, the sum of 2*s.* 6*d.* for every day so specified as aforesaid for which the same shall be granted:

Provided always, that when any person shall have taken out such an occasional license for six successive days, and shall desire to take out another occasional license for a time in immediate succession, or only separated by the intervention of Sundays and holidays, then the duty chargeable for every license after the first, and for any number of days not exceeding six, shall not exceed 10*s.*

20. Whereas it is expedient to alter and amend the conditions and restrictions upon and under which occasional licenses to sell beer, spirits, or wine, may be granted and used, as provided by the 13th section of the act passed in the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22: be it enacted as follows:—

(1.) That the consent of one justice of the peace, as in the said section mentioned, only, shall be necessary:

(2.) That the hours during which such occasional license shall authorise the sale of any beer, spirits, or wine, shall extend from sunrise to one hour after sunset:

(3.) That upon the occasion of any public dinner or ball, it shall be lawful for the person who shall have obtained an occasional license, under the provisions of the said act, to sell the said liquors during such hours before or after sunrise or sunset as shall be allowed and specified in that behalf in the consent to be given by the justice of the peace for the granting of such occasional license.

21. Whereas by the 12th section of the act passed in the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 22, so much of any act as permits the sale of beer, spirits, or wine at fairs or races without an excise license, was repealed: be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, nothing in the last-recited enactment contained shall extend to prohibit any person duly licensed by the excise to retail beer, spirits, or wine, as in the 11th section of the act passed in the 6 Geo. 4, c. 81, is mentioned, from carrying on his trade or business, for which he shall be so licensed, in booths, tents, or other places, at the time and place, and within the limits of holding any lawful and accustomed fair, by virtue of any law or statute in that behalf, or any public races, in like manner as such person might lawfully have done under the said last-mentioned act if the said act of the 25 & 26 Vict. had not been passed.

22. Whereas the assessment committee provided for by the County Rates Assessment Act, sect. 52, and by the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, respectively, are thereby empowered to require assessors, collectors, and other persons therein mentioned, to make and transmit copies of, or extracts from the books of assessment of, any taxes or rates in their custody, and to produce such books as therein mentioned: be it enacted, that nothing in the said act contained shall extend to, authorise, or empower, the said committee to require any assessor, collector, or other person employed in the assessment or collection of the income tax, to make or transmit, or to permit any other person to make, copies of, or extracts from, any assessment, rate, or rate-book, or any document relating to the assessment or collection of the income tax upon profits of trade for or in respect of any quarries, mines, ironworks, gasworks, or other concerns in the nature of trade or manufacture, chargeable under Schedule (A.) of the Income Tax Acts, or to attend before the said committee to produce any such assessment, rate, or rate-book, or other such document as aforesaid, or to be examined by or before such committee touching or concerning the same.

23. It shall be lawful for the commissioners acting in execution of the acts relating to the land tax, the assessed taxes, and the income tax respectively, for any district or division of a county, to sit and hold their meetings, and do any act in execution of the said acts respectively as such commissioners as aforesaid, at any place within any city, town, or other precinct, being a county of itself, or otherwise having exclusive jurisdiction, and situated within, surrounded by, or adjoining to, their respective districts or divisions; and all such acts, matters, and things to be so done by such commissioners, within such city, town, or precinct, as commissioners acting for such district or division, shall be as valid and effectual in law as if the same had been done within such district or division.

24. And whereas by an act passed in the present session of Parliament, intituled "An Act to give further Facilities to the Holders of the Public Stocks," certificates of title to shares in the public stocks are authorised to be issued having annexed coupons entitling the bearer to the dividends payable in respect thereof, and by sect. 11 of the same act it is enacted that the income tax shall be deducted from any coupons payable under the said act in like manner as it may be deducted from the dividends payable at the Bank in respect of the stock of proprietors inscribed in the books of the Bank: be it enacted, that the income tax shall be deducted from any such coupons as aforesaid, although the half-yearly payment thereon shall not amount to 50*s.*, anything in any former act to the contrary notwithstanding.

25. Whereas by the law in force licenses to deal in or sell tobacco or snuff expire on the 5th July in each year, and it is expedient to alter the time of the expiration of such licenses taken out for the sale of tobacco or snuff in inns or houses licensed for the sale of beer by retail to be consumed upon the premises: be it enacted, that all such licenses aforesaid taken out by innkeepers or persons licensed to sell beer to be consumed upon the premises after the 5th July next after the passing of this act, and before the 11th October, 1864, shall be and continue in force until the said last-mentioned day; and all such licenses which shall be taken out on or after the said last-mentioned day shall expire on the 10th October next after the granting thereof; and every such license as aforesaid which shall be in force at the time of the passing of this act, or which shall be taken out on or before the said 5th July, shall continue in force until the 11th October next after the passing hereof; and in respect of every such license as aforesaid which shall be in force between the 5th July and the 11th October next after the passing of this act there shall be charged and paid in respect of the said last-mentioned period, and in addition to the duty paid or payable thereon, the duty for one quarter of a year, and such additional duty shall be recoverable in like manner as any other duty of excise.

20. All the powers, provisions, clauses, regulations, forfeitures, pains, and penalties contained in or imposed by any act or acts relating to any duties of the same kind or description as the several rates or duties granted by this act respectively, and in force at the time of the passing of this act, and not hereby expressly repealed, shall respectively be in full force and effect with respect to the said rates and duties by this act granted respectively, so far as the same are or shall be applicable, in all cases not hereby expressly provided for, and shall be observed, applied, enforced, and put in execution for, and in the raising, levying, collecting, and securing of the said last-mentioned rates and duties, and otherwise in relation thereto, so far as the same shall not be superseded by, and shall be consistent with, the express provisions of this act, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same had been herein repeated and specially enacted, mutatis mutandis, with reference to the rates and duties by this act granted respectively.

CAP. XXXVIII.

An Act to amend the Act for placing the Employment of Women, young Persons, and Children in Bleaching Works and Dyeing Works, under the Regulation of the Factories Acts. [29th June, 1863.]

Sect. 1. That the words "bleaching works" and "dyeing works" in the said recited act shall be further understood to mean any building, buildings, or premises in which females, young persons, and children are employed, and in any part of which buildings or premises any process previous to packing is carried on in the occupation of calendering or finishing of any yarn, or cloth of cotton, wool, silk, or flax, or any of them, or any mixture of them, or any yarn or cloth of any other material or materials, or in any process incident to such calendering or finishing, and in one or more of which processes steam, water, or other mechanical power is used or employed: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to any building, buildings, or premises defined to be a "factory," by the act of the 7 & 1 Vict. c. 15, intitled "An Act to amend the Laws relating to Labour in Factories."

CAP. XXXIX.

An Act to authorise the Inclosure of certain Lands, in pursuance of a Special Report of the Inclosure Commissioners. [13th July, 1863.]

CAP. XL.

An Act for the Regulation of Bakehouses. [13th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Interpretation of terms.

3. Limitation of hours of labour of persons under eighteen years of age.

4. Regulations as to cleanliness of bakehouse.

5. As to sleeping-places near bakehouses.

6. Power to local authority to enforce provisions of this act.

7. As to expenses of local authority acting under this act.

8. Recovery of penalties.

9. Jurisdiction of certain magistrates.

Whereas it is expedient to limit the hours of labour of young persons employed in bakehouses, and to make regulations with respect to cleanliness and ventilation in bakehouses: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Bakehouse Regulation Act, 1863."

2. For the purposes of this act the words hereinafter mentioned shall be construed as follows—that is to say,

"Local authority" shall, as respects any place, mean the persons or bodies of persons defined to be the local authority in that place by the 134th section of the act passed in the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, or by the Nuisances Removal Acts hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, as to England, by the act passed in the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, as amended by the act passed in the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 77; as to Scotland, by the act passed in the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 103; and as to Ireland, by the acts passed, one in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 123, and the other in the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 111:

"Bakehouse" shall mean any place in which are baked bread, biscuits, or confectionery, from the baking or selling of which a profit is derived:

"Employed," as applied to any person, shall include any person working in a bakehouse, whether he receives wages or not:

"Occupier" shall include any person in possession:

"The court" shall include any justice or justices, sheriff or sheriff substitute, magistrate or magistrates, to whom jurisdiction is given by this act.

3. No person under the age of eighteen years shall be employed in any bakehouse between the hours of nine of the clock at night and five of the clock in the morning.

If any person is employed in contravention of this section the occupier of the bakehouse in which he is employed shall incur the following penalties in respect of each person so employed—that is to say,

For the first offence, a sum not exceeding 2*l.*:

For a second offence, a sum not exceeding 5*l.*:

For a third and every subsequent offence, a sum not exceeding 1*l.* for each day of the continuance of the employment in contravention of this act, so that no greater penalty be imposed than 10*l.*

4. The inside walls and ceiling or top of every bakehouse situate in any city, town, or place containing, according to the last census, a population of more than 5000 persons, and the passages and staircase leading thereto, shall either be painted with oil or be limewashed, or partly painted and partly limewashed: where painted with oil there shall be three coats of paint, and the painting shall be renewed once at least in every seven years, and shall be washed with hot water and soap once at least in every six months: where limewashed, the limewashing shall be renewed once at least in every six months.

Every bakehouse, wherever situate, shall be kept in a cleanly state, and shall be provided with proper means for effectual ventilation, and be free from effluvia arising from any drain, privy, or other nuisance.

If the occupier of any bakehouse fails to keep the same in conformity with this section, he shall be deemed to be guilty of an offence against this act, and to be subject in respect of such offence to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

The court having jurisdiction under this act may, in addition to, or instead of, inflicting any penalty in respect of an offence under this section, make an order directing that within a certain time to be named in such order certain means are to be adopted by the occupier for the purpose of bringing his bakehouse into conformity with this section; the court may, upon application, enlarge any time appointed for the adoption of the means directed by the order, but any non-compliance with the order of the court shall, after the expiration of the time as originally limited or enlarged by subsequent order, be deemed to be a continuing offence, and to be punishable by a penalty not exceeding 1*l*. for every day that such non-compliance continues.

5. No place on the same level with a bakehouse situate in any city, town, or place containing according to the last census a population of more than 5000 persons, and forming part of the same building, shall be used as a sleeping-place, unless it is constructed as follows—that is to say,

Unless it is effectually separated from the bakehouse by a partition extending from the floor to the ceiling:

Unless there be an external glazed window of at least nine superficial feet in area, of which at the least four-and-a-half superficial feet are made to open for ventilation:

And any person who lets, occupies, or continues to let, or knowingly suffers to be occupied, any place contrary to this act, shall be liable for the first offence to a penalty not exceeding 20*s*., and for every subsequent offence to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

6. It shall be the duty of the local authority to enforce within their district the provisions of this act, and in order to facilitate the enforcement thereof, any officer of health, inspector of nuisances, or other officer appointed by the local authority, hereinafter referred to as the inspector, may enter into any bakehouse at all times during the hours of baking, and may inspect the same, and examine whether it is not in conformity with the provisions of this act; and any person refusing admission to the inspector, or obstructing him in his examination, shall for each offence incur a penalty not exceeding 30*l*.; and it shall be lawful for any inspector who is refused admission to any bakehouse, in pursuance of this section, to apply to any justice for a warrant authorising him, accompanied by a police constable, to enter into any such bakehouse for the purpose of examining the same, and to enter the same accordingly.

7. All expenses incurred by any local authority in pursuance of the provisions of this act may be paid out of any rate leviable by them, and applicable to the payment of the expenses incurred by the local authority under the said Nuisances Removal Acts, and the said authority may levy such rate accordingly.

Penalties.

8. All penalties under this act may be recovered summarily before two or more justices; as to England, in manner directed by an act passed in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales, with respect to summary Convictions and Orders," or any act amending the same; as to Ireland, in manner directed by the act passed in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts regulating the Proceedings of Petty Sessions and the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Quarter Sessions in Ireland," or any act amending the same; and, as to Scotland, upon summary conviction, with power for the justices having cognisance of the case to sentence the offender to imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, until the penalty and the expenses of conviction are paid.

9. Any act, power, or jurisdiction hereby authorised to be done or exercised by two justices may be done or exercised by the following magistrates within their respective jurisdictions—that is to say, as to England, by any metropolitan police magistrate or other stipendiary magistrate sitting alone at a police court or other appointed place, or by the lord mayor of the city of London, or any alderman of the said city sitting alone or with others at the Mansion House or Guildhall; as to Ireland, by any one or more divisional magistrates of police in the police district of Dublin, and elsewhere by one or more justice or justices of the peace in petty sessions; and as to Scotland, by the sheriff or sheriff substitute, or by any police magistrate of a burgh.

CAP. XLI.

An Act to amend the Law respecting the Liability of Innkeepers, and to prevent certain Frauds upon them.

[13th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. *Innkeeper not to be liable for loss, &c. beyond 30*l*., except in certain cases.*

2. Obligation to receive property of guests for safe custody.

3. Notice of law, &c. to be conspicuously exhibited.

4. Interpretation of terms.

Whereas it is expedient to amend the law concerning the liability of innkeepers in respect of the goods of their guests in manner hereinafter mentioned: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows—that is to say,

Sect. 1. No innkeeper shall, after the passing of this act, be liable to make good to any guest of such innkeeper any loss of, or injury to, goods or property brought to his inn, not being a horse or other live animal, or any gear appertaining thereto, or any carriage, to a greater amount than the sum of 30*l*., except in the following cases—that is to say,

(1). Where such goods or property shall have been stolen, lost, or injured through the wilful act, default, or neglect of such innkeeper, or any servant in his employ;

(2). Where such goods or property shall have been deposited expressly for safe custody with such innkeeper:

Provided always, that in the case of such deposit it shall be lawful for such innkeeper, if he think fit, to require, as a condition of his liability, that such goods or property shall be deposited in a box or other receptacle, fastened and sealed by the person depositing the same.

3. If any innkeeper shall refuse to receive for safe custody, as before mentioned, any goods or property of his guest, or if any such guest shall, through any default of such innkeeper, be unable to deposit such goods or property as aforesaid, such innkeeper shall not be entitled to the benefit of this act in respect of such goods or property.

3. Every innkeeper shall cause at least one copy of the 1st section of this act, printed in plain type, to be exhibited in a conspicuous part of the hall or entrance to his inn, and he shall be entitled to the benefit of this act in respect of such goods or property only as shall be brought to his inn while such copy shall be so exhibited.

4. The words and expressions hereinafter contained, which in their ordinary signification have a more confined or a different meaning, shall in this act, except where the nature of the provision of the context of the act shall exclude such construction, be interpreted as follows—that is to say, the word "inn" shall mean any hotel, inn, tavern, public-house, or other place of refreshment, the keeper of which is now by law responsible for the goods and property of his guests; and the word "innkeeper" shall mean the keeper of any such place.

An Act for the further Security of the Persons of Her Majesty's Subjects from personal Violence. [13th July, 1863.]

Whereas by the 43rd section of the act of the session of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, it is provided, that "whosoever shall, being armed with any offensive weapon or instrument, rob, or assault with intent to rob, any person, or shall, together with one or more other person or persons, rob, or assault with intent to rob, any person, or shall rob any person, and at the time of or immediately before or immediately after such robbery shall wound, beat, strike, or use any other personal violence to any person;" and by the 21st section of the act of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, that "whosoever shall by any means attempt to choke, suffocate, or strangle any person, or by any means calculated to choke, suffocate, or strangle, attempt to render any person insensible, unconscious, or incapable of resistance, with intent in any of such cases thereby to enable himself or any other person to commit, or with intent in any of such cases to assist any other person in committing, any indictable offence, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement;" and whereas the punishment awarded by the said sections is insufficient to deter from crimes of violence: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. Where any person is convicted of a crime under either of the said sections, the court before whom he is convicted may, in addition to the punishment awarded by the said sections or any part thereof, direct that the offender, if a male, be once, twice, or thrice privately whipped, subject to the following provisions:—

(1). That in the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years the number of strokes at each such whipping do not exceed twenty-five, and the instruments used shall be a birch rod:

(2). That in the case of any other male offender the number of strokes do not exceed fifty at each such whipping:

(3). That in each case the court in its sentence shall specify the number of strokes to be inflicted and the instrument to be used:

Provided that in no case shall such whipping take place after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence; provided also, that every such whipping to be inflicted on any person sentenced to penal servitude shall be inflicted on him before he shall be removed to a convict prison with a view to his undergoing his sentence of penal servitude.

18. Recited act and this to be as one.

Whereas it is expedient to amend the Passengers Act, 1855, in the particulars hereinafter mentioned: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Section 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863."

2. This act shall come into operation on the 1st October, 1863.

3. The definition in the 3rd section of the Passengers Act, 1855, of the term "passenger ship," is hereby repealed; and for the purposes of the said act and of this act the term "passenger ship" shall signify every description of sea-going vessel, whether British or foreign, carrying, upon any voyage to which the provisions of the said Passengers Act, 1855, shall extend, more than fifty passengers, or a greater number of passengers than in the proportion of one statute adult to every thirty-three tons of the registered tonnage of such ships, if propelled by sails, or than one statute adult to every twenty tons, if propelled by steam.

4. So much of the 4th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, as exempts from the operation of the act any steam vessel carrying mails under contract with the Government of the State or colony to which such vessel may belong, is hereby repealed; and every steam vessel, whether British, foreign, or colonial, which shall carry passengers other than cabin passengers in sufficient number to bring such vessel within the definition of a passenger ship, as set forth in the 3rd section of this act, shall be subject to the provisions of the said act and of this act in like manner as any passenger ship not carrying a mail.

5. The first rule of the 14th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, which limits the number of persons to be carried in a passenger ship by her registered tonnage, together with so much of the concluding portion of the same section as relates to such rule, is hereby repealed, except so far as relates to any penalty incurred, or legal proceedings taken thereunder.

6. In the passenger lists required by the 16th and 17th sections of the Passengers Act, 1855, to be delivered by the master of every ship before demanding a clearance, there shall be set forth, in addition to the other particulars required by the Passengers Act, 1855, the names of all cabin passengers on board such ships, specifying whether they respectively are under or over twelve years of age, and at what place the passengers and cabin passengers respectively are to be landed, and the Schedule (B.) to the said act shall be altered accordingly.

7. The limit of the penalty imposed by the 18th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, on persons convicted of getting on board any passenger ship with intent to obtain a passage therein without the consent of the owner, charterer, or master thereof, and on persons aiding or abetting in such fraudulent attempt, shall be extended from 5l. to 20l.

8. Notwithstanding the prohibition contained in the 29th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, horses and cattle may be carried as cargo in passenger ships, subject to the following conditions:—

- (1.) That the animals be not carried on any deck below the deck on which passengers are berthed, nor in any compartment in which passengers are berthed, nor in any adjoining compartment, except in a ship built of iron, and of which the compartments are divided off by water-tight bulkheads extending to the upper deck;
- (2.) That clear space on the spar or weather deck be left for the use and exercise of the passengers, at the rate of at least ten superficial feet for each statute adult;
- (3.) That no greater number of passengers be carried than in the proportion of fifteen to every one hundred tons of the ships registered tonnage;
- (4.) That in passenger ships of less than five hundred tons registered tonnage, not more than two head of large cattle be carried; nor in passenger ships of larger tonnage, more than one additional head of such cattle for every additional two hundred tons of the ship's registered tonnage; nor more in all, in any passenger ship, than ten head of such cattle: the term "large cattle" shall include both sexes of horned cattle, deer, horses, and asses; four sheep of either sex, or four female goats, shall be equivalent to, and may, subject to the same conditions, be carried in lieu of one head of large cattle:

- (5). That proper arrangements be made, to the satisfaction of the emigration officer at the port of clearance, for the housing, maintenance, and cleanliness of the animals, and for the stowage of their fodder:
- (6). Not more than six dogs, and no pigs or male goats, shall be conveyed as cargo in any passenger ship: for any breach of this prohibition, or of any of the above conditions, the owner, charterer, and master of the ship, or any of them, shall be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding 300*l.*, nor less than 5*l.*

9. The requirements of the 35th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, that six ounces of lime juice should be issued weekly to each statute adult on voyages exceeding eighty-four days in duration for sailing vessels, or fifty days for steamers, shall be confined to the period when the ship shall be within the tropics; during the other portions of the voyage, the issue of lime juice shall be at the discretion of the medical practitioner on board; or, if there be no such practitioner on board, at the discretion of the master of the ship.

10. In addition to the substitutions in the dietary scales specified in the 35th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, soft bread baked on board may be issued, at the option of the master of any passenger ship, in lieu of the following articles, and in the following proportions; (that is to say), one pound and a quarter of a pound of such soft bread may be issued in lieu of one pound of flour, or of one pound of biscuit, or of one pound and a quarter of a pound of oatmeal, or of one pound of rice, or of one pound of peas.

11. The 48th section of the said Passengers Act, 1855, shall be applicable to cabin as well as to other passengers landed on account of sickness; and the passage money of all cabin or other passengers so landed may be recovered in the manner pointed out in the said act, upon the delivery up of their contract tickets, and notwithstanding that the ship may not have sailed: provided always, that in the case of cabin passengers so landed, one-half only of their passage money shall be recoverable.

12. The 12th, 51st, 53rd, and 54th sections of the said Passengers Act, 1855, shall be and the same are hereby repealed, except as to the recovery and application of any penalty for any offence committed against the said act, and except so far as may be necessary for supporting or continuing any proceeding heretofore taken, or hereafter to be taken thereunder; and in lieu of the enactments contained in such sections, the enactments in the four next following sections shall respectively be substituted; (that is to say),

13. If any passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea without the master having first obtained such certificate of clearance, or without his having joined in executing such bond to the Crown as by the said Passengers Act, 1855, are required, or if such ship, after having put to sea, shall put into any port or place in the United Kingdom in a damaged state, and shall leave, or attempt to leave, such port or place with passengers on board without the master having first obtained such certificate of clearance as is required by sect. 50 of the said Passengers Act, 1855, such ship shall be forfeited to the use of her Majesty, and may be seized by any officer of customs, if found, within two years from the commission of the offence, in any port or place in her Majesty's dominions; and such ship shall thereupon be dealt with in the same manner as if she had been seized as forfeited for an offence incurring forfeiture under any of the laws relating to the customs: provided that it shall be lawful for one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State to release, if he shall think fit, any such forfeited ship from seizure and forfeiture, on payment by the owner, charterer, or master thereof, to the use of her Majesty, of such sum, not exceeding 2000*l.*, as such Secretary of State may, by any writing under his hand, specify.

14. If any passenger ship shall be wrecked, or otherwise rendered unfit to proceed on her intended voyage, while in any port of the United Kingdom, or after the commencement of the voyage, and if the passengers, or any of them, shall be brought back to the United Kingdom, or if any passenger ship shall put into any port or place in the United Kingdom in a damaged state, the master, charterer, or owner shall, within forty-eight hours thereafter, give to the nearest emigration officer, or in the absence of such officer to the chief officer of customs, a written undertaking to the following effect; that is to say, if the ship shall have been wrecked, or rendered unfit as aforesaid to proceed on her voyage, that the owner, charterer, or master thereof shall embark and convey the passengers in some other eligible ship, to sail within six weeks from the date thereof, to the port or place for which their passages respectively had been previously taken; and if the ship shall have put into a port in a damaged state, then that she shall be made seaworthy, and fit in all respects for her intended voyage, and shall, within six weeks from the date of such undertaking, sail again with her passengers; in either of the above cases the owner, charterer, or master shall, until the passengers proceed on their voyage, either lodge and maintain them on board in the same manner as if they were at sea, or to pay to them subsistence money after the rate of 1*s.* 6*d.* a day for each statute adult, unless the passengers shall be maintained in any hulk or establishment under the superintendence of the Emigration Commissioners mentioned in the said Passengers Act, 1855, in which case the subsistence money shall be paid to the emigration officer at such port or place. If the substituted ship or damaged ship, as the case may be, shall not sail within the time prescribed as aforesaid, or if default shall be made in any of the requirements of this section, such passengers respectively, or any emigration officer on their behalf, shall be entitled to recover by summary process, as in the said Passengers Act, 1855, is mentioned, all monies which shall have been paid by or on account of such passengers, or any of them, for such passage, from the party to whom or on whose account the same may have been paid, or from the owner, charterer, or master of such ship, or any of them, at the option of such passenger or emigration officer: provided that the said emigration officer may, if he shall think it necessary, direct that the passengers shall be removed from such damaged "passenger ship," at the expense of the master thereof; and if after such direction any passenger shall refuse to leave such ship he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40*s.*, or to imprisonment not exceeding one calendar month.

15. If any passenger or cabin passenger of any passenger ship shall, without any neglect or default of his own, find himself within any colonial or foreign port or place other than that for which the ship was originally bound, or at which he or the Emigration Commissioners, or any public officer or other person on his behalf, may have contracted that he should land, it shall be lawful for the governor of such colony, or for any person authorised by him for the purpose, or for her Majesty's consular officer at such foreign port or place, as the case may be, to forward such passenger to his intended destination, unless the master of such ship shall, within forty-eight hours of the arrival of such passenger, give to the governor or consular officer, as the case may be, a written undertaking to forward or carry on, within six weeks thereafter, such passenger or cabin passenger to his original destination, and unless such master shall accordingly forward or carry him on within that period.

16. All expenses incurred under the last preceding section or under the 52nd section of the Passengers Act, 1855, or either of them, by or by the authority of such Secretary of State, governor, or consular officer, or other person, as therein respectively mentioned, including the cost of maintaining the passengers until forwarded to their destination, and of all necessary bedding, provisions, and stores, shall become a debt to her Majesty and her successors from the owner, charterer, and master of such ship, and shall be recoverable from them, or from any one or more of them, at the suit and for the use of her Majesty, in like manner as in the case of other Crown debts; and a certificate in the form in Schedule (A.) hereto annexed, or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit, purporting to be under the hand of any such Secretary of State, governor, or consular officer (as the case may be), stating the total amount of such expenses, shall in any suit or other proceeding for the recovery of such debt be received in evidence without proof of the handwriting or of the official character of such Secretary of State, governor, or consular officer, and shall be deemed sufficient evidence of the amount of such expenses, and that the same were duly incurred, nor shall it be necessary to adduce on behalf of her Majesty any other evidence in support of the claim, but judgment shall pass for the Crown, with costs of suit, unless the defendant shall specially plead and duly prove that such certificate is false or fraudulent, or shall specially plead and prove any facts shewing that such expenses were not duly incurred under the provisions of this act, and of the said Passengers Act, 1855, or either of them: provided nevertheless, that in no case shall any larger sum be recovered on account of such expenses than a sum equal to twice the total amount of passage money received or due to and recoverable by or on account of the owner, charterer, or master of such passenger ship, or any of them, for or in respect of the whole number of passengers and cabin passengers who may have embarked in such ship, which total amount of passage money shall be proved by the defendant, if he will have the advantage of this limitation of the debt; but if any such passengers are forwarded or conveyed to their intended destination under the provisions of the last preceding section, they shall not be entitled to the return of their passage money, or to any compensation for loss of passage under the provisions of the said Passengers Act, 1855.

17. In the case of a passenger ship, of which neither the owners nor charterers reside in the United Kingdom, the bond required to be given to the Crown by the 63rd section of the Passengers Act, 1855, shall be for the sum of: 5000*l.* instead of 2000*l.*; and an additional condition shall be inserted in such bond to the effect that the obligors therein shall, subject to the provisions and limitations hereinbefore contained, be liable for and shall pay to her Majesty and her successors, as a crown debt, all expenses which may be incurred under the provisions hereinbefore and in the Passengers Act, 1855, contained, in rescuing, maintaining, and forwarding to their destination, any passengers of such ships, who by reason of shipwreck or any other cause, except their own neglect or default, may not be conveyed to their intended destination by or on behalf of the owner, charterer, or master of such ship.

18. The said Passengers Act, 1855, and this act, shall be construed together as one act.

SCHEDULE (A.)

Form of Governor's or Consul's Certificate of Expenditure in the Case of Passengers shipwrecked, &c.

I hereby certify, that, acting under and in conformity with the provisions of the British Passengers Act, 1855, and of the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863, I have defrayed the expenses incurred in rescuing, maintaining, supplying with necessary bedding, provisions, and stores*, and in forwarding to their destination — passengers [including — cabin passenger†], who were proceeding from — to —, in the passenger ship —, which was wrecked at sea, &c.‡

52. Not to apply to London Artillery Company.
53. Extent of act.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the acts relating to the volunteer force in Great Britain: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Volunteer Act, 1863."

PART I.—ORGANISATION OF VOLUNTEER FORCE.

Acceptance of Service.

2. It shall be lawful for her Majesty to accept the services of any persons desiring to be formed under this act into a volunteer corps, and offering their services to her Majesty through the lieutenant of a county.

On such acceptance the proposed corps shall be deemed lawfully formed under this act as a corps of that county.

Permanent Staff.

3. Her Majesty may from time to time constitute for any volunteer corps a permanent staff, consisting of an adjutant commissioned by her Majesty, and of so many sergeant instructors as may seem fit, engaged and attested (according to regulations under this act) for a period not exceeding five years, or of such an adjutant, or of such sergeant instructors, alone.

For the purposes of this act, all such adjutants shall be deemed officers of the respective corps, and all such sergeant instructors shall be deemed to belong to the respective corps, on the permanent staff whereof they serve, and shall be deemed respectively officers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff; but nothing in this act shall be taken to exempt any officer or non-commissioned officer of the permanent staff of a volunteer corps from being subject to the orders of the officers of the corps, according to their rank and the laws and usages of her Majesty's forces.

If any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff inrols himself as a volunteer or substitute in the militia, or is attested to serve on the permanent staff thereof, or enlists in her Majesty's army, he may be tried and punished as a deserter; or, if he confesses his desertion, one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, instead of causing him to be tried and punished as a deserter, may, if it seems fit, cause him, in any such case, to be returned to his service on the volunteer permanent staff, and to be there put under stoppages until he has repaid the amount of any bounty received by him, and the expenses attending his enrolment, attestation, or enlistment; or, in case of enlistment in her Majesty's army, may cause him to be held to his service in her Majesty's army, with a direction, if it seems fit, that his time of service therein shall not be reckoned for pension until the time when his engagement on the volunteer permanent staff would have expired.

Any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff so inrolling himself, being attested, or enlisting, shall, nevertheless, be liable to deliver up in good order (fair wear and tear only excepted) all arms, clothing, and appointments issued to him as a non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff; and in case of his being either returned to his service on the volunteer permanent staff, or held to his service in her Majesty's army, one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may, if it seems fit, cause him to be put under stoppages until he has repaid the value of any such arms, clothing, or appointments not so delivered up.

Officers and Volunteers.

4. Every volunteer corps shall (except as to the officers of the permanent staff thereof) be officered by persons appointed with her Majesty's approval, and commissioned by the lieutenant of the county to which the corps belongs.

A commission issued in any case under this act by the lieutenant of a county shall not be deemed vacated by the revocation, expiration, or discontinuance of the commission by which such lieutenant was appointed.

5. Officers of the volunteer force shall rank with officers of her Majesty's regular and militia forces as the youngest of their respective ranks, and shall rank with officers of the yeomanry force according to the rank and date of their respective commissions in the respective forces.

Officers of the volunteer force, when not on actual military service, shall not be entitled to exercise any military command over any of her Majesty's other forces, and when on actual military service shall not be entitled to exercise any such command otherwise than as may be from time to time prescribed by the Mutiny Act or Articles of War.

The acceptance of a commission in the volunteer force by a member of the Commons House of Parliament shall not render his seat vacant.

6. Every officer shall, on receiving his commission, and every volunteer shall, on his enrolment in the muster roll of his corps, or in either case as soon afterwards as may be, take the oath set forth in the Schedule to this act, to be administered by the lieutenant of the county to which the corps belongs, or by a deputy lieutenant or justice of the peace for the county, or by an officer of the corps who has taken such oath.

7. Any volunteer may, except when on actual military service, quit his corps on complying with the following conditions—namely,

- (1.) Giving to the commanding officer of his corps fourteen days' notice in writing of his intention to quit the corps:
- (2.) Delivering up in good order (fair wear and tear only excepted) all arms, clothing, and appointments, being public property or property of his corps, issued to him:
- (3.) Paying all money due or becoming due by him, under the rules of his corps, either before or at the time or by reason of his quitting it:

And thereupon he shall be struck out of the muster roll of the corps by the commanding officer.

If any volunteer gives such notice, and the commanding officer refuses to strike him out of the muster roll, and the volunteer considers himself aggrieved thereby, the volunteer may appeal to two justices of the peace for the county to which the corps belongs, usually acting within the petty sessional division in which the head quarters of the corps are situate, and not being members of the corps, who shall hear and determine the appeal, and may, for the purposes thereof, administer oaths and examine any person as a witness; and if it appears to such justices that the arms, clothing, and appointments issued to the volunteer, being public property or property of his corps, have been delivered up in good order (fair wear and tear only excepted), or that he has paid, or is ready to pay, sufficient compensation for any damage that such articles may have sustained; and that all money due, or becoming due, by him under the rules of his corps, either before or at the time or by reason of his quitting it, has been paid, such justices may order the commanding officer forthwith to strike such volunteer out of the muster roll of his corps, and their determination shall be binding on all persons.

8. If any volunteer inrols himself as a volunteer or substitute in the militia, or is attested to serve on the permanent staff thereof, or enlists in her Majesty's army, he shall be deemed discharged from the volunteer force, and the commanding officer of his corps shall strike him out of the muster roll thereof.

He shall, nevertheless, be liable to deliver up in good order (fair wear and tear only excepted) all arms, clothing, and appointments, being public property or property of his corps, issued to him, and to pay all money due or becoming due by him, under the rules of his corps, either before or at the time, or by reason of his discharge. If such arms, clothing, and appointments are not so delivered up by him, or such money is not paid by him, then, without prejudice to any proceeding or remedy against him under this act, he may, under an order of one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, if it seems fit, be put under stoppages out of any bounty or pay receivable by him, or both, until the value of such arms, clothing, or appointments, not so delivered up, or such money (as the case may be), is fully paid.

General Command.

9. Whenever any volunteers are on actual military service, or are undergoing inspection, or are voluntarily doing any military duty, her Majesty may put them and their officers under the command of such general or field officers of her Majesty's army, senior in rank to every officer of the volunteer force, to be so put under their command, as her Majesty may appoint or designate; but so, nevertheless, that the volunteers put under such command shall be led by their own officers under such command.

Inspection.

10. An annual inspection of every volunteer corps shall be held by a general or field officer of her Majesty's army.

Efficiency.

11. Her Majesty in Council may from time to time declare what is requisite to entitle a volunteer to be deemed an efficient volunteer, by an Order in Council defining for that purpose the extent of attendance at drill to be given by the volunteer, and the course of instruction to be gone through by him, and the degree of proficiency in drill and instruction to be attained by him and his corps, such proficiency to be judged of by the inspecting officer at the annual inspection of the corps, or otherwise, as by Order in Council is from time to time directed.

The draft of any scheme to be from time to time submitted to her Majesty in Council for approval under the present section shall have been laid before both Houses of Parliament for one lunar month at least, either before or after, or partly before and partly after, the passing of this act, during the present or for the like period during any subsequent session of Parliament, before such scheme receives the approval of her Majesty in Council.

Disbanding of Corps.

12. Her Majesty may disband or discontinue the services of any volunteer corps, or any part thereof, whenever it seems to her Majesty expedient to do so.

Existing Corps.

13. It shall be lawful for her Majesty to continue the services of all volunteer corps whose services have been accepted before the passing of this act; and the services of every such corps shall be deemed to be continued by her Majesty, unless and until her Majesty thinks fit to exercise the power of disbanding or discontinuing the services of the corps.

The provisions of this act shall apply to every such corps, as if its services were accepted under this act, without prejudice to anything already done in relation to or by any such corps.

Administrative Organisation.

14. Where two or more separate volunteer corps are formed by the authority of one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State into a united body for military or administrative purposes, hereinafter called an administrative regiment, her Majesty may from time to time constitute for such regiment a permanent staff, consisting of an adjutant commissioned by her Majesty, and of so many sergeant instructors as may seem fit, engaged and attested (according to regulations under this act) for a period not exceeding five years, or of such an adjutant, or of such sergeant instructors, alone.

For the purposes of this act all such adjutants shall be deemed officers of the respective administrative regiments, and all such sergeant instructors shall be deemed to belong to the respective administrative regiments, on the permanent staff whereof they serve, but not to be officers of or to belong to any of the separate corps formed into those regiments, and shall be deemed respectively officers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff; but nothing in this act shall be taken to exempt any officer or non-commissioned officer of the permanent staff of such a regiment from being subject to the orders of the officers of the regiment and of the separate corps formed into the same, according to their rank, the laws and usages of her Majesty's forces, and any regulations under this act.

Every such regiment shall (except as to the officers of the permanent staff thereof, and except as to the officers of the separate corps formed into such regiment) be officered by persons appointed with her Majesty's approval, and commissioned as officers of such regiment by the lieutenant of the county within whose jurisdiction the head-quarters of the regiment are situate.

Notwithstanding the formation of any such regiment, the separate corps formed into the same shall be severally deemed volunteer corps for all the purposes of this act.

Courts of Inquiry.

15. The lieutenant of the county to which a volunteer corps belongs, or within whose jurisdiction the head-quarters of an administrative regiment are situate, may at any time assemble a court of inquiry to inquire into any matter relative to the corps or regiment, or to any officer or volunteer or non-commissioned officer of the permanent staff belonging thereto, and to record the facts and circumstances ascertained on such inquiry, and, if required, to report on the same, for the information and assistance of such lieutenant; such Court, where the inquiry is with reference to an officer, to be composed of officers of the volunteer force belonging to the county, and in other cases to be composed either of officers and volunteers belonging to the corps or regiment, or of such officers, or of such volunteers.

The commanding officer of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment may at any time assemble a court of inquiry, composed either of officers and volunteers belonging to the corps or regiment, or of such officers, or of such volunteers, to inquire into any matter relative to the corps or regiment, or to any volunteer or non-commissioned officer of the permanent staff belonging thereto, and to record the facts and circumstances ascertained on such inquiry, and, if required, to report on the same, for the information and assistance of the commanding officer; but nothing herein shall authorise any inquiry with reference to an officer otherwise than by a court assembled by direction of such lieutenant of the county as aforesaid, and composed exclusively of officers of the volunteer force belonging to such county.

Regulations.

10. One of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may from time to time make regulations respecting anything in this act directed or authorised to be done or provided by regulation, and also such regulations as may seem fit (not being inconsistent with any of the provisions of this act) respecting—

The appointment and promotion of officers; and

The assembling and proceedings of courts of inquiry to inquire into and report on any matter connected with the government or discipline of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment; and for the full execution of this act, and the general government and discipline of the volunteer force, and may alter or repeal any such regulations; and may call for such returns as may from time to time seem requisite.

PART II.—ACTUAL MILITARY SERVICE.

17. In case of actual or apprehended invasion of any part of the United Kingdom (the occasion being first communicated to both Houses of Parliament, if Parliament is sitting, or declared in Council, and notified by proclamation, if Parliament is not sitting), her Majesty may direct the lieutenants of counties throughout Great Britain, or such of them as her Majesty may judge necessary, to call out the volunteer corps of their respective counties, or any of them, for actual military service.

Every officer and volunteer, and every non-commissioned officer of the permanent staff belonging to every corps so called out, shall be bound to assemble as the lieutenant of the county directs, and to march according to orders, within Great Britain; and, from the time of his corps being so called out, shall, for the purposes of this act, be deemed on actual military service. If any such officer, volunteer, or non-commissioned officer, not incapacitated by infirmity for military service, refuses or neglects to so assemble or march, he shall be deemed a deserter.

18. Whenever a volunteer corps is called out for actual military service, the following provisions shall take effect:—

- (1). There shall be issued, in manner provided by regulation, the sum of 2*l.* 2*s.* for the use of every officer and volunteer and non-commissioned officer of the permanent staff belonging to and assembling with the corps (except such of them as do not desire to receive the benefit thereof); and each such sum, or so much thereof as the commanding officer of the corps thinks fit, shall be laid out, under the direction of the commanding officer, in providing necessaries for each such officer, volunteer, and non-commissioned officer; and within one month after receipt thereof, an account shall be settled with each such officer, volunteer, and non-commissioned officer, respecting the application thereof, and any unapplied residue thereof shall be paid to him:
- (2). Such officers, volunteers, and non-commissioned officers shall be entitled to receive pay, and to be billeted and quartered as the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers of her Majesty's army, and to have relief for their wives and families (being unable to support themselves) as the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the militia of England and Scotland respectively, according as the corps belongs to England or to Scotland:
- (3). On the release of the corps from actual military service there shall be paid, in manner provided by regulation, 1*l.* 1*s.* to every such officer, volunteer, and non-commissioned officer present with the corps at the time of such release (except such of them as do not desire to receive the same), in addition to his pay.

19. After a volunteer corps has been called out for actual military service, the corps shall be deemed released from actual military service only by an order in writing, signed by the lieutenant of the county to which the corps belongs, and addressed and delivered to the commanding officer of the corps; which order the lieutenant of the county shall issue upon and as soon as may be after a proclamation of her Majesty declaring the occasion to have passed, and not sooner or otherwise.

Before a volunteer corps is released from actual military service, the corps shall be returned to the county to which it belongs.

20. An officer of the volunteer force disabled on actual military service shall be entitled to half-pay, according to his rank; and the widow of such an officer killed on actual military service shall be entitled to the like pension for life as the widow of an officer of her Majesty's army.

A volunteer or non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff, disabled on actual military service, shall, according to his rank, be entitled to the like pension and other benefits, if any, as a soldier of her Majesty's army.

PART III.—DISCIPLINE.

Officers and Volunteers.

21. With respect to the discipline of officers (other than officers of the volunteer permanent staff) and volunteers, the following provisions shall take effect and be in force while they are not on actual military service:—

- (1). The commanding officer of a volunteer corps may discharge from the corps any volunteer, and strike him out of the muster roll, either for disobedience of orders by him while doing any military duty with his corps—or for neglect of duty, or misconduct by him, as a member of the corps—or for other sufficient cause—the existence and sufficiency of such causes respectively to be judged of by the commanding officer. The volunteer so discharged shall, nevertheless, be liable to deliver up in good order, fair wear and tear only excepted, all arms, clothing, and appointments, being public property or property of his corps, issued to him, and to pay all money due or becoming due by him, under the rules of his corps, either before or at the time or by reason of his discharge. But nothing herein shall prevent her Majesty from signifying her pleasure in such manner, and giving such directions, with respect to any such case of discharge, as to her Majesty may appear just and proper:
- (2). If any such officer as aforesaid or any volunteer, while under arms or on march or duty with the corps or administrative regiment to which he belongs, or any portion thereof—or while engaged in any military exercise or drill with such corps or regiment, or any portion thereof—or while wearing the clothing or accoutrements of such corps or regiment, and going to or returning from any place of exercise or assembly of such corps or regiment—disobeys any lawful order of any officer under whose command he then is, or is guilty of misconduct—the officer then in command of the corps or regiment, or any superior officer under whose command the corps or regiment then is, may order the offender, if an officer, into arrest, and if not an officer, into the custody of any volunteer belonging to the corps or regiment or of any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff—but so that the offender be not kept in such arrest or custody longer than during the time of the corps or regiment, or such portion thereof as aforesaid, then remaining under arms, or on march or duty, or assembled, or continuing engaged in any such military exercise or drill, as aforesaid.

Permanent Staff.

22. With respect to the discipline of officers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff, the following provisions shall take effect and be in force while they are not on actual military service:—

- (1.) All the provisions of the Mutiny Act (as far as they relate to Great Britain) shall extend to and apply to, and in the case of the officers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff, and those officers and non-commissioned officers shall be subject to, the Mutiny Act, and shall also be entitled to the benefits thereof, in all respects as the officers and soldiers of her Majesty's army for the time being are, and as if the volunteer permanent staff belonged to and formed part of her Majesty's army, subject only to the following variations and provisions:—

(i.) When the assembling of a court-martial for the trial of an officer or non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff becomes necessary, a general or district court-martial (as the case may require) shall be convened by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, authorised by commission or warrant under the royal sign manual to convene courts-martial under the present section; and such Secretary of State shall in all cases and for all purposes be substituted for the convening officer under the Mutiny Act, and shall cause every such court-martial to assemble with all practicable speed after it is convened; and a court-martial shall not sit in any case for the trial of an officer or non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff without being so convened:

(ii.) Every such general court-martial shall consist of not less than nine members, and every such district court-martial shall consist of not less than five members; and every such court-martial shall (except as to the president thereof) be composed of such officers of the volunteer permanent staff as the Secretary of State directs; and the president shall be a field officer of the volunteer force, appointed by the Secretary of State:

(iii.) Sentences of district courts-martial under the present section shall not be put in execution until confirmed by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, authorised in that behalf by warrant under the royal sign manual; and with respect to the execution of the sentence of any court-martial under the present section, one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall in all cases have the like powers as her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department, or the officer confirming the sentence of a court-martial, has in certain cases or events, with respect to the execution of the sentences of courts-martial under the Mutiny Act:

- (2.) Whenever a court-martial is ordered to assemble for the trial of a non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff, one of her Principal Secretaries of State may, if he thinks it expedient, issue his warrant under his hand for the apprehension of such non-commissioned officer, and also his warrant under his hand for the commitment of such non-commissioned officer for safe custody to a public prison, gaol, or house of correction near the place where the court-martial is to sit, which warrants respectively shall be in the forms set forth in the schedule to this act, with such variations as circumstances require:

- (3.) The keeper of such public prison, gaol, or house of correction, or his deputy, shall, on production of any such warrant of commitment, receive the non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff named therein into his custody, and shall keep him in safe custody in all respects as if he were committed by warrant of justices of the peace on a charge or suspicion of misdemeanour, or in Scotland of an offence, but without bail, until one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State orders the discharge of such non-commissioned officer, or until he is otherwise delivered from such custody by due course of law, or until he is delivered over to undergo any punishment imposed by sentence of a court-martial; and such keeper or deputy shall, in the meantime, from time to time as occasion requires, bring up such non-commissioned officer in custody before a court-martial sitting for his trial:

- (4.) If any keeper of a public prison, gaol, or house of correction, or his deputy, refuses or neglects to receive or keep any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff in manner hereinbefore prescribed, such keeper or deputy shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 100*l.*; to be recovered in England by action in a superior court of law at Westminster; in Scotland, by proceedings in the Court of Session; and in the Isle of Man, by proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction, and to be applied to the use of her Majesty.

Actual Military Service.

23. With respect to the discipline of officers of the volunteer force, and volunteers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff, the following provision shall take effect, and be in force, when they are on actual military service, namely:—All the provisions of the Mutiny Act (as far as they relate to Great Britain) shall extend to and apply to and in the case of all officers of the volunteer force and volunteers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff, and those officers, volunteers, and non-commissioned officers shall be subject to the Mutiny Act, and shall also be entitled to the benefits thereof, in all respects as the officers and soldiers of her Majesty's army for the time being are, and as if the volunteer force, including the volunteer permanent staff, belonged to and formed part of her Majesty's army, subject only to this variation—that a court-martial for the trial of an officer of the volunteer force, or volunteer or non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff, shall be composed of officers of the volunteer force only.

PART IV.—RULES AND PROPERTY OF CORPS.

24. The officers and volunteers belonging to a volunteer corps may from time to time make rules for the management of the property, finances, and civil affairs of the corps, and may alter or repeal any such rules; but any such rules shall not have effect unless and until the commanding officer of the corps thinks fit to transmit the same to the lieutenant of the county to which the corps belongs, and such lieutenant thinks fit to submit the same for her Majesty's approval, and such approval, signified through one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, is notified by such lieutenant to the commanding officer of the corps, to be by him forthwith communicated to the corps; whereupon the rules so approved shall be binding on all persons.

A copy of the rules in print or writing, or partly in print and partly in writing, certified under the hand of the commanding officer as a true copy of the rules whereof her Majesty's approval has been notified as aforesaid, shall be conclusive evidence of the rules of the corps.

25. All money subscribed by, or to or for the use of, a volunteer corps or administrative regiment, and all effects belonging to any such corps or regiment, or lawfully used by it, not being the property of any individual officer or volunteer, or non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff belonging to the corps or regiment, and the exclusive right to sue for and recover current subscriptions, arrears of subscriptions, and other money due to the corps or regiment, and all lands acquired by the corps or regiment, shall vest in the commanding officer of the corps or regiment for the time being, and his successors in office, with power for him and his successors to sue, to make contracts and conveyances, and to do all other lawful things relating thereto; and any civil or criminal proceeding taken by virtue of the present section by the commanding officer of a corps or regiment, shall not be discontinued or abated by his death, resignation, or removal from office, but may be carried on by and in the name of his successor in office.

26. The commanding officer of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment, receiving any arms, ammunition, or other stores, supplied at the public expense or by subscription, shall, subject to the approval of the lieutenant of the county to which the corps belongs, or in which the head-quarters of the administrative regiment are situated (as the case may be), appoint a proper storehouse for the depositing and safe keeping of such arms, ammunition, or stores. Every such storehouse shall be free from all county, parochial, or other local rates and assessments. All exemptions contained in the Gunpowder Act, 1860, or any act amending the same, relative to storehouses, magazines, or places belonging to or held for the service of the Crown, shall extend to any storehouse appointed under the present section with the approval of the lieutenant of a county, if also approved of by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, as a fit place for the storing of ammunition, but not otherwise.

27. If any person belonging or having belonged to a volunteer corps or administrative regiment neglects or refuses to pay any money subscribed or undertaken to be paid by him towards any of the funds or expenses of such corps or regiment, or due under the rules of such corps, and actually payable by him, or to pay any fine incurred by him under the rules of such corps—such money or fine shall (without prejudice to any other remedy) be recoverable from him, with costs, at any time within twelve months after the same becomes due and payable, as a penalty under this act is recoverable, and when recovered shall be applied as part of the general fund of the corps or regiment.

28. If any person designedly makes away with, sells, pawns, wrongfully destroys, wrongfully damages, or negligently loses, anything issued to him as a volunteer, or wrongfully refuses, or wrongfully neglects, to deliver up, on demand, anything issued to him as a volunteer,—the value thereof shall be recoverable from him, with costs, as a penalty under this act is recoverable; and he shall also for every such offence of designedly making away with, selling, pawning, or wrongfully destroying as aforesaid, be liable, on the prosecution of the commanding officer of the corps or administrative regiment issuing the thing made away with, sold, pawned, or destroyed, to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

29. If any person knowingly buys or takes in exchange from any volunteer or any person acting on his behalf—or solicits or entices any volunteer to sell, or knowingly assists or acts for any volunteer in selling, or has in his possession or keeping, without satisfactorily accounting for,—any arms, clothing, or appointments, being public property, or property of any volunteer corps or administrative regiment, or any public stores or ammunition issued for the use of any such corps or regiment,—he shall, on the first commission by him of any such offence, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l*., and shall, on a second and every other subsequent commission by him of any such offence, and on being convicted thereof in the like course of proceeding as that in which any such penalty is recoverable, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l*., or less than 5*l*., with or without imprisonment, for any term not exceeding six months, with or without hard labour.

The justices, before whom any person is convicted of any offence under the present section, shall transmit the conviction to the next court of general or quarter sessions held for the county or place where the conviction is had, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the court; and on the prosecution of any person for any subsequent offence under the present section, a copy of such conviction, certified by the proper officer of the court, or proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove a conviction for the former offence, and such conviction shall be presumed not to have been quashed on appeal until the contrary is shown.

30. If any person wilfully commits any damage to any butt or target belonging to, or lawfully used, by any volunteer corps or administrative regiment, or, without the leave of the commanding officer of the corps or regiment, searches for bullets in, or otherwise disturbs the soil forming such butt or target, he shall for every such offence be liable, on the prosecution of the commanding officer, to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

PART V.—ACQUISITION OF LAND FOR RANGES.

31. Subject to the provisions of this part of this act, any volunteer corps may, with the assent of one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, purchase, take on lease, or otherwise acquire, any land, or easement in land, for rifle or artillery practice, and for the erection of butts, targets, batteries, and other accommodations for the use of the corps when practising with rifles or artillery.

Before giving his assent, the Secretary of State shall send an inspector to the land for the purpose of ascertaining its capabilities for being converted into a rifle or artillery practice ground with due regard to the safety and convenience of the public, and shall give or withhold his assent accordingly.

32. So much of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and of the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, and of any act amending the said acts, as relates to the purchase of land by agreement, shall be incorporated with this part of this act.

In the construction of this part of this act with the said incorporated provisions, this part of this act shall be deemed the special act; and the volunteer corps, desirous of purchasing land, shall be deemed the promoters of the undertaking; and under the term land, a permanent right of shooting and drilling, or any other interest or easement in land, shall be included, and may be alone conveyed, while the fee simple or other interest in such land is reserved.

33. Any person seized or entitled in fee tail or for life of or to any manor or lands of freehold, copyhold, or customary tenure, and having the beneficial interest therein, or in Scotland, being the proprietor under entail, and in possession for the time being, may, by way of gift, grant, convey, or enfranchise in fee simple, or for a term of years, any quantity not exceeding four acres of such land, or any limited right over land to any extent not exceeding twenty acres, to any volunteer corps, to be used by the corps for the purposes of this part of this act; but so that any such grant, conveyance, or enfranchisement made by any person seized or entitled for life only of or to any such manor or lands, shall not be valid beyond his own life, unless the person next entitled in remainder, in fee simple, or fee tail (if legally competent) is a party to, and joins in such grant, conveyance, or enfranchisement:

Provided, that in the event of any land granted, conveyed, or enfranchised as aforesaid, ceasing to be used for the purposes of this part of this act, the same shall thereupon immediately revert to and become a portion of the estate of which it formed part before the grant, conveyance, or enfranchisement was made.

34. The Chief Commissioner of her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings may grant to any volunteer corps the right to use, for the purpose of rifle practice or drill, any portion of such royal parks, gardens, and possessions as are under his management, upon such terms, for such time, not exceeding twenty-one years, and subject to such other conditions, as he thinks fit; but any such grant shall be at all times revocable by her Majesty.

35. A license to use, for the purposes of this part of this act, any portion not exceeding four acres of the lands hereinafter mentioned, may be granted to any volunteer corps as follows:—

(1). In the case of lands belonging to the Crown—

By the Commissioners of her Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues, or either of them, on behalf of her Majesty, with the consent of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury:

(2). In the case of lands forming part of the possessions of the Duchy of Lancaster—

By the Chancellor and Council of the Duchy by deed under the hand and seal of the Chancellor, attested by the clerk of the Council:

(3). In the case of lands forming part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall—

By the Duke of Cornwall or other the persons for the time being, having power to dispose of lands belonging to the Duchy:

Provided—

First, that no such license shall be granted for a longer term than twenty-one years; but any license, when granted, may be renewed by the same authority that would have power to grant the same:

Secondly, that in the event of any land to which any such license relates ceasing to be used for the purposes of this part of this act, that license shall thereupon cease absolutely.

36. Any corporation, ecclesiastical or lay, sole or aggregate, any officer, justices of the peace, trustees, or commissioners holding land for public, ecclesiastical, or parochial purposes, may grant, and from time to time renew, any license for the use, during any term not exceeding twenty-one years, by any volunteer corps, for the purposes of this part of this act, of any land not exceeding four acres vested in such corporation, officers, justices, trustees, or commissioners, subject to the following provisions:—

- (1). That an ecclesiastical corporation sole below the dignity of a bishop shall not make such a grant without the consent, in writing, of the bishop to whose jurisdiction he is subject, and of the patron of the preferment to which the land belongs, or the guardians or trustees of such patron:
- (2). That such a license shall not be granted in respect of parochial property without the consent of the majority of the ratepayers and owners of property in the parish to which the same belongs, assembled at a meeting convened according to the mode pointed out by the act of the session of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 69, "to facilitate the conveyance of work-houses and other property of parishes, and of incorporations or unions of parishes, in England and Wales," and of the Poor Law Commissioners, testified by their seal being affixed to the deed of grant, and of the guardians of the poor of the union within which the parish is comprised, or of the guardians of the poor of the parish where the administration of the relief of the poor therein is subject to a board of guardians, testified by such guardians being the parties to make the grant:
- (3). That where any officers, trustees, or commissioners, other than parochial trustees, make any such grant, it shall be sufficient if a majority or quorum authorised to act of such officers, trustees, or commissioners assembled at a meeting duly convened, assent to such grant, and execute the deed of grant, although they do not constitute a majority of the actual body of such officers, trustees, or commissioners:
- (4). That the justices of the peace may give their consent to the making of any such grant in respect of land belonging to any county, riding, or division, by vote at their general quarter sessions, and may direct the same to be made in the manner directed to be pursued on the sale of the sites of gaols by the act of the 7 Geo. 4, c. 18, "to authorise the disposal of unnecessary prisons in England:"
- (5). That in the event of any land to which any such license relates ceasing to be used for the purposes of this part of this act, that license shall thereupon cease absolutely.

37. Where a footpath crosses or runs inconveniently or dangerously near to any land purchased or acquired, or in respect of which any license is granted, for the purposes of this part of this act, such footpath may, with the consent of the vestry of the parish in which the same is situate, and upon the certificate of two justices that the footpath to be substituted is convenient for the public, be stopped up or diverted. All proceedings to obtain such certificate, and to stop up or divert such footpath, shall be taken in the manner in which proceedings are directed to be taken by the act of the session of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, "to consolidate and amend the laws relating to highways in that part of Great Britain called England," in cases where a person other than the inhabitants in vestry, is desirous of stopping up, diverting, or turning a highway, or as near thereto as circumstances admit; with this exception, that the certificate of the justices shall be conclusive in cases where it states the fact of their having viewed the footpath to be stopped up or diverted, and that the proposed new footpath is convenient for the public.

38. One of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, with a view to the safety and convenience of the public, may make by-laws for the regulation of shooting on grounds purchased, acquired, or used by any volunteer corps under this part of this act, and for the prevention of intrusion thereon during the times of shooting. Any such by-laws may impose a reasonable pecuniary penalty, not exceeding 5*l.*, for any breach of a by-law, so that the by-law be so framed as to admit a part only of the maximum penalty being ordered to be paid; such penalties to be recoverable and applicable as penalties imposed by this act are recoverable and applicable.

39. Any land purchased or acquired, or in respect of which any license is granted under this part of this act, shall be deemed to have ceased to be used for the purposes of this part of this act where there has not been any such use by the corps by which the land was purchased or acquired, or to or for which the license was granted, for a period of one year, and a certificate of the fact of such non-user is given by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State; and such certificate shall be conclusive evidence of such fact as against all persons and in all courts of justice.

40. This part of this act shall not extend to the Isle of Man, except that the power of granting licenses, given in this part of this act to the Commissioners of her Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues, shall extend to any allotment that may be made to, and any land that may be purchased on behalf of, her Majesty, under the provisions of an act of Tynwald, intitled "The Isle of Man disafforesting Act, 1860."

PART VI.—EXEMPTIONS.

41. Every officer of the volunteer force, and every efficient volunteer, and every non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff, shall be exempt from liability to serve personally or to provide a substitute in the militia of England or of Scotland.

In the case of a volunteer, such exemption shall cease on his ceasing to be enrolled in the corps in connexion with which he becomes entitled to be deemed efficient, unless he quits such corps on account of his changing his place of residence, in which case the exemption shall revive if within ten days after quitting such corps he is enrolled in another volunteer corps.

The certificate of the commanding officer of a volunteer corps (in the form set forth, in the Schedule to this act, with such variations as circumstances may require) certifying that the person named therein is a volunteer enrolled in that corps, and is exempt as aforesaid, shall be conclusive evidence thereof.

42. Horse duty shall not be payable for any horse used six days or upwards within the period of twelve months, ending on the 5th April preceding the year of assessment, as follows—namely,

- (1). Used on duty by any officer of the volunteer force or volunteer or non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff required to use a horse on duty:
- (2). Used for conveying any gun, or any waggon or other military carriage, in the service of the volunteer force:

such horse, in every such case, being either the property of such officer, volunteer, or non-commissioned officer, or of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment, or gratuitously furnished for such use.

A certificate, signed by the commanding officer of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment, certifying that the horse therein specified has been used as aforesaid for the said number of days, shall be evidence thereof.

43. If any commanding officer of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment knowingly gives any false certificate under this act, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*0*l., to be recovered in England by action in a superior court of law at Westminster, in Scotland by proceedings in the court of session, and in the Isle of Man by proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction, and to be applied to the use of her Majesty.

44. Notwithstanding anything in the rules of any friendly or benefit society, any person shall not lose any interest in the society by reason of his enrolment or service in the volunteer corps, or his engagement or service on the volunteer permanent staff; and any dispute arising between such society and person by reason of such enrolment, engagement, or service shall be deemed a dispute directed by the rules of the society to be decided by justices of the peace, according to the acts for the time being in force relative to friendly or benefit societies.

45. Any duty or toll leviable, under any act of Parliament passed or to be passed, at any pier, wharf, quay, landing place, or bridge, or at any turnpike gate or bar, or at any other gate or bar on a public road, shall not be demanded or taken for—

- (1). Any officer of the volunteer force, or any volunteer, or any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff, being on march or duty, or going to or returning from the place appointed for, and on the day for, exercise, inspection, review, or other public duty, and being in uniform:
- (2). Any horse ridden or used by any officer, volunteer, or non-commissioned officer as aforesaid, being on march or duty, or going or returning as aforesaid, and being in uniform:
- (3). Any cart, waggon, or carriage, public or private, employed only in carrying or conveying, or returning empty from carrying or conveying, having been employed only in carrying or conveying, any officer, volunteer, or non-commissioned officer as aforesaid, being on march or duty, or going or returning as aforesaid, and being in uniform, with or without any conductor or driver of such cart, waggon, or carriage, or domestic servant of such officer or volunteer:
- (4). Any cart, waggon, or carriage, public or private, employed only in carrying or conveying, or returning empty from carrying or conveying, having been employed only in carrying or conveying, any arms or baggage of any officer, volunteer, or non-commissioned officer as aforesaid, being on march or duty, or going to or returning from the place appointed for exercise, inspection, review, or other public duty, or any military stores belonging to or for the use of, or any gun belonging to or used by, the volunteer force:
- (5). Any horse or other beast drawing any such cart, waggon, or carriage as aforesaid.

If any person demands or takes any duty or toll in contravention of the present section, or if any person makes any false representation respecting himself or any other person, or any animal or thing, with intent to obtain for himself or otherwise, or fraudulently obtains for himself or otherwise, any exemption under the present section, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

PART VII.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

46. The lieutenant of the county to which a volunteer corps belongs, or within whose jurisdiction the head quarters of an administrative regiment are situate, may require the commanding officer of that corps or regiment to make to him from time to time such returns of the strength and efficiency of the corps or regiment as may seem requisite.

47. The several clerks of general meetings of Lieutenancy in Great Britain shall be entitled to receive the sums specified in the Schedule to this act for their pains and trouble in and about the execution of the provisions of this act. The said clerks shall send to the Secretary of State such accounts, returns, and statements as he from time to time requires.

48. Any pecuniary penalty under this act, the mode of recovery of which is not otherwise expressly provided for by this act, and any money or fine by this act made recoverable as a penalty under this act is recoverable, may be recovered as follows:—

In England, in a summary way before two or more justices of the peace having jurisdiction where the offence is committed, or where the offender happens to be, in manner directed by the act of the session of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, "to facilitate the performance of the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions, within England and Wales, with respect to summary convictions and orders;" or in case of proceedings in the city of London, or in the metropolitan police district, in manner directed by the respective enactments for the time being in force relative to summary proceedings there:

In Scotland, in manner directed by the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, with respect to penalties imposed by that act, the recovery of which is not otherwise provided for:

In the Isle of Man, by proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction, and in the manner in which penalties of like amount are recoverable by the laws of the Isle of Man, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

In England, where the sum adjudged to be paid on a summary conviction or adjudication, inclusive of any costs, exceeds 5*l*., or the imprisonment awarded exceeds one month, and the person who is convicted, or against whom the adjudication is made, thinks himself aggrieved by the conviction or adjudication, the following provisions shall take effect:—

- (1). Such person may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions held not less than twelve days after the day of such conviction or adjudication for the county or place where the conviction or adjudication is had:
- (2). The appellant shall, within three days after the day of the conviction, and seven clear days at least before the sessions to which the appeal is to be made, give to the complainant a notice in writing of the appeal, and of the ground thereof:
- (3). The appellant may enter into a recognisance, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice of the peace, conditioned to appear personally at the sessions and try the appeal, and abide the judgment of the court thereon, and pay any costs awarded by the court; or where the appeal is against a conviction imposing only a pecuniary penalty, or against an adjudication for the payment of money, the appellant may deposit with the clerk of the convicting justices such sum of money as those justices deem sufficient to cover the amount of the penalty, or money adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction or adjudication, and of the appeal:
- (4). On such notice being given, and such recognisance being entered into, or such deposit being made, the appellant shall be liberated, if in custody:
- (5). The court of general or quarter sessions shall hear and determine the appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, as to the court seems fit; and, in case of affirmance of the conviction or dismissal of the appeal, shall adjudge the appellant to be punished according to the conviction, or to pay the money according to the adjudication, and to pay such costs as are awarded, and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing such judgment:
- (6). Where any such deposit as aforesaid is made, and the conviction or adjudication is affirmed, or the appeal is dismissed, the court may order the amount of the penalty or other money adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction or adjudication and of the appeal, to be paid out of the deposit, and the residue thereof, if any, to be returned to the appellant, and in any other case shall order the deposit to be returned to the appellant:
- (7). Where on appeal a conviction is quashed, the proper officers shall forthwith indorse on the conviction a memorandum that it has been so quashed; and whenever any copy or certificate of such conviction is made, a copy of the memorandum shall be added thereto, which shall be sufficient evidence of the conviction having been quashed in all cases where a copy or certificate would be sufficient evidence of the conviction.

But nothing in the present section respecting appeals shall affect any enactments relative to appeals in cases of summary convictions or adjudications in the city of London or the metropolitan police district.

In Scotland and the Isle of Man, in like cases as in England, an appeal shall lie, in manner in that behalf provided by the law of Scotland and of the Isle of Man respectively.

A summary conviction or adjudication under this act in England, or an adjudication made on appeal therefrom, shall not be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari; and a warrant of commitment on any such conviction shall not be held void by reason of any defect therein, if it is therein alleged that the person therein named has been convicted, and there is a good conviction to sustain the same.

Any pecuniary penalty recovered summarily under this act on the prosecution of the commanding officer of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment shall (notwithstanding anything in any act relating to municipal corporations, or to the metropolitan police, or in any other act contained) be paid to the commanding officer, and be applied as part of the general fund of the corps or regiment.

49. In this act—

The term "Lieutenant" of a county includes vice-lieutenant, and, as to the city of London, the commissioners of lieutenancy for the same:

The term "volunteer" means a non-commissioned officer or private belonging to a volunteer corps, exclusive of the permanent staff thereof:

The term "person" includes (where the case requires) a body of persons, corporate or unincorporate:

The term "Mutiny Act," means the act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters, for the time being in force, and includes the articles of war made under the authority of that act for the time being in force.

The term "appointments," includes accoutrements and equipments of every kind other than clothing.

If at any time her Majesty thinks fit to appoint on the permanent staff of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment a quartermaster and a paymaster, or either of such officers, commissioned by her Majesty—or if at any time any non-commissioned officer or man engaged and attested (according to regulations under this act) for a period not exceeding five years, is appointed on the permanent staff of a volunteer corps or administrative regiment, to serve in any other capacity than that of sergeant instructor—then and in such cases all the provisions of this act relating to adjutants and sergeant instructors, and to officers and non-commissioned officers of the volunteer permanent staff, shall apply to such quartermasters and paymasters, and to such other non-commissioned officers and such men, respectively.

All the provisions of this act relating to an administrative regiment, shall apply to any united body formed of two or more separate volunteer corps for military or administrative purposes by the authority of one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, whether the corps so united are formed into a regiment, or a brigade, or a battalion, or any other body.

50. For the purposes of this act the Isle of Wight shall be deemed to be a county of itself, and the governor thereof, or the person for the time being performing the duties of governor, shall be deemed to be the Lieutenant of such county: the Cinque Ports, two ancient towns, and their members, shall be deemed to be a county of themselves, and the warden thereof, or in his absence his lieutenant or lieutenants, shall be deemed to be the Lieutenant of such county; every riding, stewardry, city, or place for which her Majesty constitutes a lieutenant, shall be deemed to be a county of itself, and the lieutenant appointed for the same shall be deemed to be the lieutenant of such county, and the Isle of Man shall be deemed to be a county of England, and the lieutenant governor thereof, or the person for the time being performing the duties of lieutenant governor, shall be deemed to be the lieutenant of such county.

51. The enactments described in the Schedule to this act shall be repealed to the extent therein specified; but this repeal shall not affect the past operation of any such enactment, or anything already done, or any right, title, obligation, or liability already accrued thereunder, or any remedy or proceeding affecting the same.

52. Nothing in this act shall apply to the Honourable Artillery Company of London.

53. This act shall not extend to Ireland.

20. Limitation of time for obtaining loans.

21. Extent of act same as that of Union Relief Aid Acts.

22. Interpretation.

23. Short title.

Whereas, by an act of the last session of Parliament (which was extended for a further period by an act of the present session), rectifying, that by reason of the closing of mills and factories in certain parts of the country great numbers of the labouring and manufacturing classes had been thrown out of employment, provision was made to enable boards of guardians of certain unions to obtain temporary aid to meet the extraordinary demands for relief therein: and whereas great numbers of the same classes still remain out of employment in the parts of the country aforesaid, and it is expedient to make provision for better enabling local authorities therein to give employment by the execution of works of public utility and sanitary improvement: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

SECT. 1. For the purposes of loans under this act, the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury may from time to time, by warrant under the hands of two or more of them, cause to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or the growing produce thereof, to the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole 1,900,000*l.*, such money to be applied exclusively under this act, and to be at the disposal of the Public Works Loan Commissioners in like manner in all respects as money placed at their disposal under the act of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 80, and the acts therein recited, subject, nevertheless, to the provisions of this act, which provisions shall have full effect, notwithstanding anything in the Public Works Loan Act, 1853, to the contrary contained.

2. All the several clauses, powers, authorities, provisos, enactments, directions, regulations, restrictions, privileges, priorities, advantages, penalties, and forfeitures contained in, and conferred and imposed by, the said acts, or any of them, so far as the same can be made applicable, and are not varied by this act, shall be taken to extend to this act, and to everything to be done in pursuance of this act, and as if the same were herein repeated and set forth.

3. For the purposes of such works as are hereinafter mentioned, the Public Works Loan Commissioners may, out of the money for the time being at their disposal under this or any other act, from time to time lend to any such local board or local or other authority as hereinafter described, namely,

Any local board acting under the Local Government Act, 1858;

Any local authority invested with powers of town government and rating under any local act, by whatever name such local authority may be called;

Any commissioners or body of persons or other authority having power to levy rates for general or special purposes; or Any guardians of the poor authorised to borrow as hereinafter provided;

and any such local board or local or other authority may from time to time borrow from the Public Works Loan Commissioners accordingly, such sum or sums of money as may be required, subject and according to the following provisions:—

(1.) Any such loan may be made for the purposes of any permanent works which the local board obtaining the loan is authorised to execute under the powers of the Local Government Act, 1858, or this act, or (as the case may be) which the local or other authority obtaining the loan is authorised to execute under the powers of any local act or this act, or otherwise:

(2.) Any such loan may be made to any such local or other authority, whether such local or other authority has or has not power to borrow under any local act or otherwise, independently of this act:

(3.) Any such loan may be made to any such local board or local or other authority, to the amount authorised by this act, notwithstanding any limitation of the amount to be borrowed by such local board or local or other authority imposed by any local act or otherwise, but so that nothing in this act shall be deemed to give to any loan made under this act equality as to order of charge, or of payment of interest or principal, with any loan made or to be made under any local act, except only as to such portion (if any) of the money raised under this act as might have been raised under the local act, independently of this act:

(4.) The total amount to be lent under this act to any local board or local or other authority shall not exceed such amount as would be equal to one year's rateable value of the property assessable within the district or place in respect of which any such loan under this act may be made:

(5.) The interest payable in respect of every such loan under this act shall be at the rate of 3*l.* 10*s.* per per centum per annum:

(6.) The repayment of every such loan shall be made by such number of equal annual instalments, not exceeding thirty, as the Poor-law Board specify in their order sanctioning the same; but that board may, if they think fit, authorise the postponement of the payment of any instalment becoming due within the first three years for a period not exceeding two years:

(7.) The repayment of any such loan, with the interest thereon, shall be secured by the local board or local or other authority to whom the loan is made, by a mortgage of, or charge upon, all or any of the rates leviable by such local board or local or other authority, either alone or together, with such other property or income as may be agreed on between such local board or local or other authority and the Public Works Loan Commissioners; and in the case of guardians, upon the security of the rates for the relief of the poor, or to be raised by the overseers in manner hereinafter provided; and it shall not be incumbent on those commissioners to require any other security:

(8.) Every local board or local or other authority obtaining any such loan shall have power by virtue of this act to give such security as aforesaid, and to charge such rates, property, or income as aforesaid accordingly; and every such local board or local or other authority shall have power by virtue of this act, and is hereby required, to levy such rates, or to make such orders, for contributions respectively as may be requisite for the purposes of any such security, notwithstanding any limitation of the amount of rates to be levied by such local board or local or other authority, imposed by any local or other act, or otherwise; and in the case of any local board or local authority having rating powers under the Local Government Act, 1858, or any general or local act, such rates may be included in and levied with the general district rate under that act, or any rate levied under any general or local act:

(9.) The provisions of sects. 57 and 78 of the Local Government Act, 1858, and any provisions relative thereto in the same or any other act contained, shall not apply to any loan under this act:

(10.) Every loan under this act shall be made with the authority of an order of the Poor-law Board, which order that board may make if satisfied that the circumstances of the district for which the loan is required, in reference to the charge for the relief of the poor, are such as to render the loan expedient, and that all the conditions of this act have been complied with on the part of the local board or local or other authority desiring to obtain the loan; and any such order of the Poor-law Board shall be sufficient to authorise the Public Works Loan Commissioners to make any such loan, and shall not be liable to be questioned in any court of law or equity.

4. Any local board or local or other authority obtaining a loan under this act, shall apply the whole of the money borrowed exclusively for the purposes of such permanent works as aforesaid, and shall not apply any part thereof in or towards paying off any debt or charge existing at the time of the making of such loan other than such as may be due in respect of such works.

5. The money borrowed shall be advanced by the Public Works Loan Commissioners in such instalments as the Poor-law Board shall from time to time by any order direct; and the payment by the Public Works Loan Commissioners of any such instalment may be postponed or withheld on a notice from the Poor-law Board certifying that the works in respect of which the loan was authorised are not being proceeded with, in conformity with the plan proposed, to the satisfaction of the Poor-law Board.

6. One of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may, upon the application of the Poor-law Board, appoint from time to time an engineer or engineers to report to that board upon any works proposed to be executed, or in the course of being executed or completed, by means of a loan under this act, and the engineer or engineers so appointed shall have full power and authority, at all reasonable times, to examine the plans, specification, and estimates of such works, to enter upon and survey such works or the site thereof, and to inspect the accounts of any local board or local or other authority in relation thereto.

7. For facilitating the adoption of the Local Government Act, 1858, the following provisions shall, until the 1st July, 1864, take effect and be in force:—

- (1). Sect. 12 of that act, and any provision relative thereto, shall be read and construed as if the words "a week's" were substituted in that section for the words "a month's:—"
- (2). Sect. 17 of that act, and any provision relative thereto, shall be read and construed as if the words "fourteen days" were substituted in that section for the words "twenty-one days," and as if the words "seven days" were substituted in that section for the words "fourteen days:—"
- (3). Sect. 20 of that act, and any provision relative thereto, shall be read and construed as if the words "twenty-one days" were substituted throughout that section for the words "two months:—"
- (4). Sect. 3 of the Local Government Act Amendment Act, 1863, shall not apply to appeals against resolutions of adoption in cases coming within the operation of this act.

8. Where any local authority acquires under this act any powers by virtue of sect. 15 of the Local Government Act, 1858, which are repugnant to or inconsistent with those of the local act, the local authority shall proceed under the powers and provisions of the Local Government Act, 1858; and wherever in any such case the last-mentioned act and the local act contain provisions for effecting the same or a similar object, but in different modes, the local authority may proceed under the Local Government Act, 1858, or under the local act.

In every such case of acquisition of powers under this act, sect. 12 of the Local Government Act, 1858, and any provision relative thereto, shall be read and construed as if the words "a week's" were substituted in that section for the words "a month's."

9. Sect. 4 of the Local Government Act Amendment Act, 1863, shall apply to any place which may adopt the Local Government Act, 1858, under this act, notwithstanding the population of such place is more than 3000.

10. With respect to any works to be executed in exercise of the powers contained in sect. 69 of the Public Health Act, 1848, and sect. 38 of the Local Government Act 1858, by means of any loan under this act:—

- (1). The notice required to be given prior to the execution of such works by the local board or local authority may be in the form prescribed by the Local Government Amendment Act, 1861, or to the like effect, and may be served by delivering the same to, or at the residence or place of business of, the person or persons to whom it is addressed, or by delivering the same to some person upon the premises in respect of which the works are required, or, if there be no person upon the premises who can be so served, by fixing such notice upon some conspicuous part of the premises, or advertising the same in one or more of the newspapers circulated in the place:
- (2). Specifications and estimates of the works, certified by the surveyor of the local board or local authority, shall be deposited for inspection, with the plan and sections, in the manner required by the Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Act, 1861; and when the works affect the property of more than one person, the estimates shall shew the proposed apportionment of the expenses of the works in respect of such properties respectively:
- (3). Any person to whom such notice as aforesaid has been given may, before the expiration of the period limited thereby for the execution of the works mentioned therein, object to the execution of such works in the manner specified, and to the proposed apportionment of the expenses of executing the same, and may give notice in writing within the period aforesaid to the local board or local authority of the matters objected to:

In default of giving the notice lastly required, it shall not be competent for such person to question the validity of any rate or charge made by the local board or local authority, for defraying or securing the expenses incurred by them in executing such works, except on the ground that the same have not been executed in conformity with the plan, section, specification, or estimates thereof:

- (4). In case of notice of objection as aforesaid, the local board or local authority may thereupon require that the several matters objected to shall be referred to arbitration in the manner prescribed by the Public Health Act, 1848, before they proceed to execute the works in question, and the result of such arbitration shall be final:
- (5). The charge upon any property affected by the works executed under this section in respect of the expenses incurred by any local board or local authority in the execution of such works, shall have priority over any mortgage or other incumbrance upon such property, and shall be recoverable in the manner provided by the Public Health Act, 1848, and the Local Government Act, 1858, for the like purpose.

11. No objection shall be allowed at the hearing of any information or other proceeding under this act on the ground of any alleged defect in substance or in form in any notice, summons, complaint, or order made or issued under this act, or on account of any variance between such notice, summons, complaint, or order, and the evidence adduced at the said hearing, unless it shall appear to the justices present and acting at the said hearing, that the said alleged defect or variance has misled the person by or on whose behalf the said objection is taken; but if the said justices shall be of opinion that the said alleged defect or variance has misled such person, it shall be lawful for the said justices to amend the same, and to adjourn the hearing of such information or proceeding to such time and on such terms as they shall think fit.

12. Any local board or local or other authority (except guardians) shall have power to execute, by means of any loan under this act, all or any of the following works, subject to the restrictive and saving clauses and provisions contained in the Local Government Act, 1858, so far as the same are applicable to the execution of any such works, in addition to the works authorised by the Local Government Act, 1858, or any local act; that is to say, any such local board, or local or other authority, shall have power—

To acquire, drain, lay out, plant, or otherwise improve any common or other lands used, or intended to be used, as places of public recreation; to construct, improve, or enlarge any reservoir for water supply, and to lay down or extend the requisite pipes for such reservoir;
To widen, deepen, cleanse, embank, straighten, or otherwise improve any river, stream, or brook; and also to enter into any agreement respecting the execution of any such work, or the apportionment of the cost thereof, with any person or authority interested in any such lands, river, stream, or brook, or in any property adjoining thereto, or likely to be beneficially or otherwise affected by any such work.

13. Any local board or local or other authority may agree, but in the case of guardians not without the approval of the Poor-law Board, with the owner of any lands in or adjoining to or near their district, to make any road, or to execute any work of drainage, or of private improvement, through, in, or on such lands, at the expense of the owner, and may allow the owner time for repayment of the amount expended, and receive the same by annual instalments, not being less than one-thirtieth part of the entire sum, with interest, at not less than the rate of 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum per annum upon the sum from time to time remaining unpaid.

Where such owner has a limited estate or interest only in such lands, he may, by an instrument in the form set forth in the Schedule to this act, with such variations as circumstances may require, charge the inheritance of such lands with the amount so expended, and with the amount of the costs incurred by the local board or local or other authority, and by such owner, in relation to the security to be given by him, together with interest for the aggregate of those amounts, at the rate aforesaid; and may, by the same instrument, declare the manner and times of the payment of such interest, and of the instalments aforesaid; and all the provisions of the Local Government Act, 1858, with respect to the recovery and redemption of private improvement rates shall apply, as far as may be, to every such charge.

Provided, that no such instrument shall operate so as to charge the estate or interest of any person taking in succession after such limited estate or interest, until a certificate, signed by an engineer to be appointed as aforesaid, has been indorsed thereon, to the effect, that in the opinion of such engineer the works in respect of which such charge is intended to be created have been duly executed, and will effect such a permanent increase in the yearly value of the lands to be charged as will render the amount expended an outlay beneficial to the inheritance; and every such certificate, so signed, shall be conclusive evidence that the engineer by whom the same is given has been duly appointed for the purpose aforesaid.

In this section the term "owner" means the person who is for the time being in receipt, whether on his own account or as trustee for any other person, of the rackrent of the lands affected by such works; or who, if such lands were let to a tenant at rackrent, would for the time being be entitled to the receipt thereof, whether on his own account or as trustee for any other person: provided that any person holding any lands under a lease shall not be entitled to be deemed the owner thereof within the meaning of this section unless he holds the same for a term whereof thirty years at least are unexpired at the passing of this act, or for lives whereof two at least are subsisting at the passing of this act, and where such years or lives are not unexpired or subsisting, the person entitled to the reversion immediately expectant on the determination of such lease shall be deemed the owner within the meaning of this section.

14. If the guardians of any union, pariah, or township should, at a meeting held after special notice in writing sent to every elected and ex-officio guardian of the union, determine that it would contribute to the health or convenience of the inhabitants of any place for which such guardians are the local authority for executing the powers of the Nuisances Removal Acts that any of the following works should be executed, viz.

That any pond, pool, open ditch, sewer, or drain should be drained, cleansed, covered, or filled up;

That any highway or public road or footpath should be made, levelled, or improved;

That any river, stream, or brook should be widened, deepened, cleansed, embanked, straightened, or otherwise improved;

That a sewer or drain should be made or improved;

That a well should be dug;

That a reservoir for water supply should be constructed, improved, or enlarged, or the requisite pipes connected with any reservoir for water supply be laid down, improved, or extended;

That any common or other lands used or intended to be used as places of public recreation should be drained, laid out, planted, or otherwise improved; or

That any other work of public utility or sanitary improvement should be executed;

such guardians may procure a plan of such works, and an estimate of the cost thereof, and lay the same before the Poor-law Board, who, upon being satisfied that such works may be properly undertaken and executed, may, by an order, authorise the guardians to borrow, and thereupon the Public Works Loan Commissioners may lend to the guardians, subject and according to the provisions hereinbefore contained, such money as the Poor-law Board may consider necessary for the works so approved, the repayment of such money, with interest at the rate aforesaid, to be secured by the guardians by a mortgage of or charge upon the rates raised or to be raised in manner hereinafter mentioned; the guardians shall cause such works to be executed, subject to the restrictive and saving clauses and provisions contained in the Local Government Act, 1858, so far as the same are applicable to the execution of any such works, paying the cost thereof out of the money so borrowed, with power nevertheless, if they think fit, from time to time to appoint a committee or committees of their own body, of which committee the elected guardian or guardians of any such place and the justices of the peace resident therein shall ex officio be members, if not otherwise elected, to act in and for one or more of the places for which the guardians are the local authority; and every committee so appointed shall have the full power to direct and superintend the execution of such works within the specified place or places for which the committee is appointed.

15. The instalments of principal in repayment of any loan under this act to guardians shall, with the interest on so much of the loan as from time to time remains unpaid thereon, be contributed and raised in manner hereinafter mentioned—that is to say,

(1). Where the works for which the loan has been advanced shall be undertaken for a place maintaining its own poor, the instalments and the interest shall be contributed by the overseers upon the order of the guardians out of the poor's rate, in like manner as the other claims of the guardians upon them:

(2). Where the works shall be undertaken for two or more such places, the instalments and the interest shall be apportioned by the guardians between such places in proportion to the costs of the works undertaken therein respectively, as set forth in the estimate for the same, approved of by the Poor-law Board, and the instalments and interest when so apportioned shall be contributed by the overseers of such places respectively upon the order of the guardians as aforesaid:

(3). Where the works shall be undertaken for a place, for part only of which the guardians are the local authority, the instalments and the interest shall be contributed by the overseers upon the order of the guardians, but the overseers shall raise the amount from time to time as required by a rate upon all the rateable property within that part of such place within which the guardians are the local authority, as if such part were a separate place maintaining its own poor; and such rate shall be made and enforced in like manner in every respect as a rate for the relief of the poor:

(4). Where the works shall be undertaken for one or more places maintaining their own poor, and also for one or more such places, for part only of which the guardians are the local authority, the instalments and the interest shall be apportioned by them between such places and parts of places respectively, and shall be contributed and collected by the overseers in manner hereinbefore provided with respect to contributions from such places and parts of places respectively.

16. The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and any act amending the same, except with respect to the taking of lands otherwise than by agreement, shall be incorporated with this act; and for the purposes of those acts this act shall be deemed the special act, and the local board or local or other authority exercising the powers of this act shall be deemed the promoters of the undertaking.

17. The clauses of the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to the mortgages to be executed by the commissioners, except so far as the same may be inconsistent with the provisions of the said act of the session of the 34 & 35 Vict. c. 80, or of any of the acts therein re-enacted, shall be incorporated with this act; and in the construction of this act, and of the said incorporated clauses, this act shall be deemed the special act, and the local board or local or other authority to which a loan is made shall be deemed to be the commissioners.

18. Every mortgage for securing money lent under this act purporting to be executed by any such local board or local or other authority as hereinbefore described, except guardians, in manner provided by the clauses of the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847, herein incorporated, and every like mortgage purporting to be executed by the guardians of any union, pariah, or township as aforesaid, shall constitute a complete and valid security on the rates, property, and income thereby expressed to be mortgaged, and shall give to and impose on the local board or local or other authority intrusted with the levying of the rates thereby expressed to be mortgaged, or authorised to make calls for contributions as hereinbefore mentioned, the power and obligation from time to time to levy such rates, or to make and enforce such calls, as the case may be, to an amount sufficient to maintain any such works, and to discharge, in manner provided by such mortgage, the principal and interest expressed to be thereby secured, notwithstanding any defect or irregularity in the election, appointment, constitution, or proceedings of such local board or local or other authority, and notwithstanding any vacancy in the number of persons, or any disqualification of any person or persons being a member of or constituting such local board or local or other authority, and notwithstanding that any person or persons may have assumed to act as member or members of such local board or local or other authority, or as such authority, though not legally elected, appointed, constituted, or qualified as such member, members, or authority.

19. Where the Public Works Loan Commissioners make a loan in pursuance of any such order of the Poor-law Board as hereinbefore mentioned, and take a mortgage for securing repayment of the same, purporting to be made under the authority of this act, they shall not be bound to require proof that any condition imposed by this act has been duly complied with; and in every such case the local board or local or other authority shall have full power, and is hereby required, to levy the rates mortgaged, or to make and enforce such calls for contributions as aforesaid, as the case may be, for repayment of the money borrowed, with interest, notwithstanding that any such condition may not have been complied with; and it shall not be competent to any ratepayer or other person to question the validity of any such mortgage or rate on the ground that any such condition had not been complied with.

20. The Poor-law Board shall not make an order for a loan under this act in any case after the 1st July, 1864, unless they think fit to make an order after that day with a view to the completion of works then already begun.

21. This act shall extend and apply only to boroughs, parishes, towns, districts, and places within or comprising the unions situate wholly or in part in the counties of Chester, Lancaster, and Derby.

22. The word "overseers" shall include churchwardens in the case of any parish to which this act applies.

23. This act may be cited as "The Public Works (Manufacturing Districts) Act, 1863."

8. Remuneration to the Bank.

9. General regulations with respect to certificates of title.

10. Income tax.

11. Unclaimed dividends.

12. Shares in India Stock outstanding to cease to be transferable &c.

13. Punishment of forgery.

14. Punishment of personation.

15. Punishment of engraving &c.

16. As to the signature and counter-signature of documents in the Department of the Secretary of State for India.

Whereas the Secretary of State in Council of India is empowered, under the provisions of certain acts of Parliament passed in sessions holden in the 22 & 23 Vict. [c. 39], 23 & 24 Vict. [c. 130], and 24 & 25 Vict. [c. 25], respectively, to raise money in the United Kingdom, not exceeding such amount as is in the said acts prescribed, and is further empowered, upon or for the repayment of any principal money secured under the authority of the said acts respectively, to borrow or raise by the like method all or any part of the amount of principal money so repaid or to be repaid: and whereas capital stock has been and may be from time to time created and issued under the authority of the said acts respectively, and it is expedient to give further facilities to the holders of such stock in respect of the transfer thereof, and the receipt of the dividends thereon: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sec. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The India Stock Certificate Act, 1863."

2. In this section, and elsewhere in this act, the following expressions have the meanings here assigned to them:—

"The Bank" shall, with reference to the stocks created and issued under the said acts transferable at the Bank of England, and certificates issued under this act in respect thereof, and the coupons of such certificates, mean the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and shall, with reference to the said stocks transferable at the Bank of Ireland, and certificates issued under this act in respect thereof, and the coupons of such last-mentioned certificates, mean the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland:

"India Stock" shall mean any stocks which have been or may be created and issued under the acts aforesaid, transferable in the books of the Bank, and "share in India Stock" shall include any part of a share:

"Person" shall include corporation.

3. With the exception and subject to the conditions hereinafter mentioned, every person who now is, or may hereafter be, inscribed in the books of the Bank of England or of the Bank of Ireland as proprietor of a share in India Stock may obtain a certificate or certificates of title to the said share, or to any part thereof, having annexed coupons entitling the bearer to the dividends payable in respect of that share or part of a share.

4. No trustee of any share in the said stock shall apply for or hold a certificate of title to that share, unless he is authorised so to do by the terms of his trust; and any contravention of this section by a trustee shall be deemed to be a breach of trust, and be punishable accordingly; nevertheless, this section shall not impose on the Bank any obligation to inquire whether a person applying for a certificate of title under this act is or is not a trustee, nor subject them to any liability in the event of their granting a certificate of title to a trustee, nor invalidate any certificate of title if granted.

5. No certificate shall be granted in respect of any sum of stock being other than 100*l.*, or 500*l.*, or 1000*l.*

The coupons annexed to an India Stock certificate shall comprise the dividends payable in respect of the stock described in the certificate. At the expiration of the period for which the coupons shall have been issued, fresh coupons shall be issued for further successive periods during the continuance in force of the stock certificate; but the Bank may, if they think fit, in lieu of issuing fresh coupons in respect of a certificate, give in exchange a fresh certificate with coupons attached thereto.

Coupons shall be payable at the chief establishment of the Bank at the expiration of three clear days from the day of presentation.

The payment to the bearer of any coupon of the amount expressed therein shall be a full discharge to the Bank of all liability in respect of that coupon and the dividend represented thereby.

If any India Stock certificate or coupon issued under this act is lost or destroyed, and such loss or destruction proved in such manner as may from time to time be directed by the Bank, the Bank shall grant a new certificate or coupon, on receiving indemnity to their satisfaction against the claims of all persons deriving title under the certificate or coupon so lost or destroyed.

No notice of any trust in respect of any stock certificate or coupon issued under this act shall be receivable by the Bank.

An India Stock certificate shall entitle the bearer to the stock therein described, and shall be transferable by delivery.

6. The bearer of an India Stock certificate may, on delivery up to the Bank of his certificate and of all unpaid coupons belonging thereto, and on compliance with any regulation made in pursuance of this act, require to be registered in the books of the Bank as a holder of the stock described in the certificate under which he derives title, and thereupon the stock shall be re-entered in the books kept by the Bank for the entry of transferable stock, and become transferable, and the dividends payable, as if no certificate had been issued in respect of such stock.

7. No fees shall be charged on the grant of a stock certificate to bearer in exchange for a like certificate, but there shall be charged with respect to the several other proceedings in relation to stock authorised by this act the fees specified in the schedule hereto, or such less fees as may be determined by the Secretary of State in Council.

All fees received in pursuance of this act shall be paid to the "Account of the Secretary of State for India in Council of India."

No stamp duty shall be payable in respect of any certificate or coupon issued in pursuance of this act.

8. There shall be paid to the Bank of England, by the Secretary of State in Council, on account of the additional trouble, expense, and responsibility, if any, imposed on it by this act, in addition to the remuneration otherwise payable to it in respect of the management of the Indian Debt, such remuneration as may be agreed upon between the Bank of England and the said Secretary of State in Council.

9. The Bank of England and the Bank of Ireland, with the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council, may from time to time issue any forms that may be required for carrying into effect the provisions of this act, and also from time to time make any regulations that are not inconsistent with this act relative to the following things:—

- (1). The time for which coupons are to be given:
- (2). The authority under which and the mode in which the Bank is to act in issuing India Stock certificates, or registering in their books the holders of such stock certificates, or taking any other proceedings in relation to India Stock authorised to be taken under this act:

- (3). The mode of proving the title of or identifying any person applying for an India Stock certificate, or deriving any title under a stock certificate issued under this act:

- (4). With respect to any other matter necessary to carry this act into effect:

And any regulation so made shall be deemed to be part of this act, in the same manner as if it were herein enacted.

10. The income tax shall be deducted from any coupons payable under this act in the same manner and subject to the same regulations in and subject to which it may, in pursuance of any law for the time being in force, be deducted from the dividends payable at the Bank in respect of the stock of proprietors inscribed in the books of the Bank: provided always, that such deduction of income tax shall be made, although the half-yearly payment on any coupon shall not amount to 50*s.*, anything in any former act to the contrary notwithstanding.

11. All sums due and not demanded on any coupons issued under this act shall for all purposes be dealt with as if they were dividends due and not demanded in respect of the stock of proprietors inscribed in the books of the Bank.

12. When any certificate of title issued under this act in respect of any share in India Stock is outstanding, the stock represented thereby shall cease to be transferable in the books of the Bank.

Save in so far as relates to the mode of transfer and payment of dividends thereon, any India Stock described in a stock certificate issued under this act shall be deemed to be charged on the same securities, and to be subject to the same powers of redemption, and to the same incidents in all respects, including the remuneration payable to the Bank, as if it had continued registered in the books of the Bank as stock transferable therein.

13. Whosoever shall forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any India Stock certificate or coupon, or any document purporting to be any India Stock certificate or coupon, issued in pursuance of this act, or shall demand or endeavour to obtain or receive any share or interest of or in India Stock, or to receive any dividend or money payable in respect thereof, by virtue of any such forged or altered certificate or coupon, or document purporting as aforesaid, knowing the same to be forged or altered, with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to defraud, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

14. Whosoever shall falsely and deceitfully personate any owner of any share or interest of or in India Stock, or of any India Stock certificate or coupon issued in pursuance of this act, and shall thereby obtain or endeavour to obtain any such India Stock certificate or coupon, or receive or endeavour to receive any money due to any such owner, as if such offender were the true and lawful owner, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

15. Whosoever, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused, shall engrave or make upon any plate, wood, stone, or other material any India Stock certificate or coupon purporting to be an India Stock certificate or coupon issued or made under and in pursuance of this act, or to be a blank India Stock certificate or coupon issued or made as aforesaid, or to be a part of such a stock certificate or coupon, or shall use any such plate, wood, stone, or other material for the making or printing any such India Stock certificate or coupon, or any such blank India Stock certificate or coupon, or any part thereof respectively, or knowingly have in his custody or possession any such plate, wood, stone, or other material, or shall knowingly offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, or have in his custody or possession, any paper upon which any such blank India stock certificate or coupon, or part of any such India Stock certificate or coupon, shall be made or printed, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than three years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

16. And whereas it is expedient that there should be uniformity of practice in respect of the signature and countersignature of documents by the Secretary and Under-Secretaries of State and Members of the Council of India: be it enacted, that wherever, by reason of the provisions of any act of Parliament or otherwise, it is required that any deeds, contracts, bonds, debentures, cheques, drafts, or orders for money, or other documents, shall be signed by any number of members of the Council of India, and countersigned by the Secretary of State or one of his Under-Secretaries, any such deed, contract, bond, debenture, cheque, draft, or order for money, or other document, may be signed by two members of the said Council, and countersigned by the Secretary of State or one of his Under-Secretaries, or by his Assistant Under-Secretary.

CAP. LXXIV.

An Act to enable Her Majesty to declare Gold Coins to be issued from Her Majesty's Branch Mint at Sydney, New South Wales, a legal Tender for Payments; and for other Purposes relating thereto. [28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Power to her Majesty to declare gold coins made at the Branch Mint at Sydney a legal tender in the United Kingdom.

2. Power to her Majesty to impose a charge on coin-ing gold.

3. Short title.

Whereas by an act of the 56 Geo. 3, c. 68, intituled "An Act to provide for a new Silver Coinage, and to regulate the Currency of the Gold and Silver Coins of this Realm," it is, amongst other things, provided, that after the date of the passing of that act the gold coin of the realm should be the only legal-tender for payments (except the silver coin of the realm to the extent of 40s.) within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland: and whereas by the same act it is declared that the gold coin of the realm should hold such weight and fineness as are prescribed by an indenture therein referred to, and made with his Majesty's master and worker of the Mint for making gold monies at his Majesty's Mint in London, and with such allowance called the remedy as is given to the said master by the said indenture, which weight and fineness are by the said act declared to be the standard of the lawful gold coin of the realm, so far as relates to the gold coins of the denominations in use at the time of the passing of the said act and specified in the said indenture: and whereas gold cold coins of the weight and fineness and of the denominations mentioned in the said act, and specified in the said indenture, have from the date of the said act up to the present time continued to be issued from her Majesty's Mint in London, and to be the only legal tender for payments, except as aforesaid, within the United Kingdom: and whereas her Majesty has by proclamation established at Sydney, in New South Wales, a branch of the Royal Mint for making gold coins of the same weight and fineness, and of the same denominations as the gold coin issued by her Majesty's Mint in London, and has appointed a deputy master of the said Branch Mint; and it is expedient that power should be given to her Majesty to make the gold coin so issued by her Majesty's Mint at Sydney a legal tender for payments in the United Kingdom: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. It shall be lawful for her Majesty, by proclamation issued with the advice of her Privy Council, to declare that, after a date specified in such proclamation, gold coins made at the said Branch Mint, of designs approved by her Majesty, at Sydney aforesaid, and being of the same weight and fineness as are required by law with respect to gold coins of the same denominations made at her Majesty's Mint in London, are to be a legal tender for payments within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland; and upon such proclamation being issued, gold coins made of such designs, and being of such weight and fineness as aforesaid, shall be a legal tender for payments accordingly.

2. 'It shall be lawful for her Majesty, by proclamation issued with such advice as aforesaid, from time to time to impose on the coinage of gold at the said Branch Mint at Sydney a charge sufficient to defray the expenses of coinage, over and above the expenses of assay and refining; and it shall be incumbent on the said deputy master to coin gold at the charge so imposed.

3. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Sydney Branch Mint Act, 1863."

An Act to determine the Time at which Letters-patent shall take effect in the Colonies. [28th July, 1863.]

- Sec. 1. Existing letters-patent not to take effect in colonies till published or acted on. Acts done under such letters-patent valid.
- 2. Future letters-patent not to take effect in colony till publication.
- 3. Appointments by letters-patent to be void, unless published within six or nine months.
- 4. Stat. 9 & 10 Vict. c. 91, repealed.
- 5. Period of act coming into operation.

Whereas her Majesty hath from time to time caused to be made, under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, divers letters-patent intended to take effect within her Majesty's colonies and possessions beyond the seas; and whereas doubts are entertained respecting the period at which such letters-patent have taken, or may hereafter take, effect within such colonies and possessions, and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Sec. 1. No such letters-patent heretofore made shall (unless otherwise provided therein, or by other lawful authority) be deemed to have taken or shall take effect in any such colony or possession as aforesaid until the same were or shall be publicly made known or acted upon therein: provided that any act or thing heretofore done, or purporting to have been done, in pursuance or under authority of such letters-patent, shall be as valid and effectual as if the same letters-patent had taken effect at the date of the making thereof.

2. No such letters-patent hereafter to be made shall (unless otherwise provided therein, or by other lawful authority) take effect in any such colony or possession until the making of the same shall have been signified therein by proclamation or other public notice.

3. Any such letters-patent by which any person may be hereafter appointed to any office or employment within any of such colonies or possessions shall (unless otherwise provided therein, or by other lawful authority) become null and void in respect of such colony, unless the same shall be so signified as aforesaid within the following period—that is to say, within nine calendar months, in case such colony or possession shall be to the eastward of Bengal, in the East Indies, or to the west of Cape Horn, in South America; or in any other case within six months after the making thereof.

4. The act of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 91, intituled "An Act to continue certain Patent Commissions until the Exhibition of the Commissions revoking them," is hereby repealed.

5. This act shall take effect in each of her Majesty's colonies and possessions so soon as the same shall be proclaimed therein by the officer administering the government thereof.

CAP. LXXVII.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Jurisdiction of Justices residing or being out of the County for which they are Justices. [28th July, 1863.]

Whereas by the 6th section of an act of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary Convictions and Orders" (which act is hereinafter referred to as the principal act), it is enacted, that such of the provisions contained in the act passed in the same session of Parliament, the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales with respect to Persons charged with indictable Offences," whereby a justice of the peace for one county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough, or place may act for the same whilst residing or being in an adjoining county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough or place of which he is also a justice of the peace, or whereby a justice of the peace for any county at large, riding, division, or liberty may act as such within any city, town, or precinct next adjoining thereto or surrounded thereby, being a county of itself, or otherwise having exclusive jurisdiction, as are applicable to the provisions of the principal act shall be deemed to be incorporated with the principal act, and to extend to all acts required of or to be performed by justices of the peace under or by virtue of the principal act in as full and ample a manner as if the said provisions and enactments were repeated and made parts of that act: and whereas by the 35th section of the principal act it is provided, that nothing in that act contained shall extend to certain cases therein mentioned: and whereas it is apprehended that the provisions of the said 6th section of the principal act are controlled by the 35th section of the same act, and that justices cannot act under the first-mentioned of the said two sections in the cases mentioned in the said 35th section: and whereas it is expedient that the principal act should be amended as hereinafter provided: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sec. 1. The 35th section of the principal act shall not apply to or control the 6th section of the same act, and such last-mentioned section shall be construed as if the 35th section were not and never had been contained in the principal act; and any acts done or orders made by justices previously to the passing of this act which would have been valid if this act had been passed at the respective dates of such acts being done or orders made, shall be and are hereby declared to be valid accordingly.

CAP. LXXIX.

An Act for the Amendment of the Law relating to the Religious Instruction of Prisoners in County and Borough Prisons in England and Scotland. [28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Act to apply to all gaols, &c.
3. Power to appoint additional ministers to prisons. Regulation as to admission of ministers.
4. Keepers of prisons to register religion of prisoners.
5. So much of sect. 30 of the 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, as provides for visits of chaplains not to apply to prisoners visited by other ministers.

Whereas it is expedient to amend the law relating to prisoners in England and Scotland with respect to the religious instruction of the prisoners confined therein: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all the purposes as "The Prison Ministers Act, 1863."

2. This act shall apply in England to all gaols, prisons, and houses of correction (hereinafter included under the term "prisons") that are maintained at the expense of any county, riding, division, or liberty of a county, or of any county of a city, county of a town or borough, and in Scotland to all local prisons as defined by the Prisons (Scotland) Administration Act, 1860.

3. Where the number of prisoners confined in any prison to which this act applies, and belonging to some church or religious persuasion differing, if in England, from the Church of England, and if in Scotland, from the Church of Scotland, is so great as, in the opinion of the justices, county board, or other persons having the appointment of chaplain in the said prison, to require the ministrations of a minister of their own church or persuasion, the said justices, county board, or other persons may appoint a minister of such last-mentioned church or persuasion to attend at the said prison on the prisoners of his own church or persuasion, and they may, if they think fit, award to him a reasonable sum as a recompense for his services, such sum to be deemed a part of the expenses of the prison to which he is appointed, and to be paid out of the funds legally applicable to the payment of such expenses.

The visiting justices of any prison may, if they think fit, without a special request being made by, but not against the will of, any prisoner of a church or religious persuasion differing from that of the Established Church, permit a minister of the church or persuasion to which such prisoner belongs (if no appointment of such a minister has been made under this act) to visit such prisoner at proper and reasonable times, under such restrictions imposed by them as may guard against the introduction of improper persons, and may prevent improper communications; provided that any prisoner shall, on request, be allowed, subject to the rules of the gaol, to attend the chapel or to be visited by the chaplain of the gaol. Every minister appointed or permitted to visit prisoners under this act shall hold his appointment or permission to visit during the pleasure of the authority by whom he was appointed or permitted to visit, and shall conform in all respects to the regulations of the prison at which he attends. No minister shall be appointed under this act for any prison in which there is not a chaplain of the Established Church.

4. The keeper or other person performing the duties of keeper of a prison on receiving into his custody any prisoner shall enter his name in a book to be provided for the purpose, with the addition of the church or religious persuasion to which the prisoner shall declare himself to belong, and the said keeper or other person shall from time to time give to any minister appointed or permitted to visit prisoners in the prison a list of the prisoners so declared to belong to the church or persuasion of such minister, and no such minister shall be permitted to attend or visit any prisoner belonging to any religious persuasion differing from that to which such minister belongs.

5. So much of the 30th section of the said act passed in the 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, as provides "that the chaplain shall frequently visit every room and cell in the prison occupied by prisoners, and shall direct such books to be distributed and read, and such lessons to be taught, in such prison, as he may deem proper for the religious and moral instruction of the prisoners therein, and that he shall visit those who are in solitary confinement," shall not apply to any prisoner who is attended or visited by a minister of a church or persuasion differing from the Church of England, except when the visits of any such minister shall have been discontinued for the period of fourteen days; and no prisoner belonging to any church or religious persuasion shall be compelled to attend any religious service held or performed by any chaplain, minister, or religious instructor of a church or religious persuasion to which the said prisoner does not belong.

CAP. LXXX.

Sect. 1. The sum of 650,000*l.* to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund towards expenses after mentioned.

2. Appropriation of the money so issued to the expenses of constructing fortifications, and providing a central arsenal.

3. Treasury to raise 650,000*l.* by creating annuities for a term not exceeding thirty years.

4. Treasury to fix the term and amount of annuity to be granted to contributors for every 100*l.*, and terms of payment of subscriptions.

5. Power to guardians, &c., to subscribe for infants.

6. Time at which annuities may be transferred.

7. Contributors may anticipate payments.

8. Annuities payable, &c., at the Bank.

9. Money to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund for payment of annuities and charges, and shall be charged upon the said fund.

10. Bank of England to appoint a cashier and an Accountant-General, and Treasury to order money to be issued on the cashier for payment of annuities.

11. Cashier to give receipts for subscriptions, and pay the money he receives into the Exchequer.

12. The money paid into the Exchequer to form part of the Consolidated Fund.

13. A book to be kept in the Accountant-General's office for entering contributors' names, and a duplicate to be transmitted to the Exchequer.

14. Subscriptions paid in part, and not completed, forfeited.

15. Annuities to be deemed personal estate.

16. Accountant-General to keep books for entering transfers. Transfers not liable to stamp duties.

17. Power to Treasury to add annuities created under this act to stock of existing terminable annuities of like duration.

18. Allowance to Bank of England for the expense of management.

19. Fortifications, &c., to be executed under the direction of the Secretary of State for War.

20. Accounts to be laid before Parliament.

21. Persons counterfeiting receipts for contributions, &c., guilty of felony.

22. Bank to continue a corporation till the annuities hereby granted cease.

CAP. LXXXI.

An Act to amend, so far as regards Advances for the Purposes of the Harbours and Passing Tolls, &c. Act, 1861, certain of the Acts authorising the Advance of Money out of the Consolidated Fund for carrying on Public Works and Fisheries and Employment of the Poor.

[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Public Works Loan Commissioners empowered to grant priority of security in respect of loans to harbour authorities by other persons.

2. Such priority not to give validity to any security which could not have been given if this act had not passed.

3. How priority may be granted.

4. Harbour authorities empowered to borrow money to pay off debts having priority over security for loans by Public Works Loan Commissioners.

5. Short title.

CAP. LXXXII.

An Act to empower the Bishops of Welsh Dioceses to facilitate the making Provision for English Services in certain Parishes in Wales.

[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Power to bishops of Welsh dioceses to license chapels for performance of divine service in English, and nominate minister thereto.

2. As to cases in which incumbent refuses or fails to nominate.

3. Licensed building not to be a parochial chapel without assent of incumbent.

4. Incumbent's rights not to be affected.

Whereas in all parishes in Wales in which Welsh is the tongue commonly spoken by the people, it is required by law that the whole divine service shall be used and said by the minister and curates throughout all Wales, within the said dioceses where the Welsh tongue is commonly used, in the British or Welsh tongue: and whereas it is expedient to authorise the performance in certain parishes in Wales of divine service, preaching, and administration of the sacraments, according to the use of the United Church of England and Ireland, in the English tongue, upon such application and subject to such conditions as are hereinafter mentioned: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. That wherever any ten or more inhabitants in any parish, district, or place in Wales shall certify in writing to the bishop of the diocese within which such parish, district, or place is situate, that they are desirous of having divine service performed and the sacraments administered in the English language, and that they, or some of them, will undertake to provide a building to be used as a chapel for the performance of the divine service in the English tongue, and to provide for a spiritual person who may officiate therein, and for all other expenses incident thereto, and shall apply to such bishop to give the necessary licenses for the purposes aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such bishop, if it shall appear to him that sufficient provision is not already made for such English service, on the nomination by the incumbent of the said parish, district, or place of a fit and proper person as minister to such chapel, to license from year to year, or for any term not exceeding two years, such building in any part of such parish, district, or place as a chapel for the performance of divine service, preaching, and administration of the sacraments, according to the use of the United Church of England and Ireland, in the English tongue, and to license such minister to perform such of the said services and offices as may be specified in the said license.

2. Provided, however, that in case the said incumbent shall fail or refuse to nominate a fit and proper person as minister to such chapel, or in case any disagreement or dispute shall arise between the persons so applying and the incumbent, either in respect of the sufficiency of the said services, or of the provision for the performance of such services, or for the minister, or in respect of the competency of the minister to be nominated, then the bishop of such diocese (after the expiration of three calendar months from the receipt of such application as aforesaid, due notice of such application having been given by the persons so applying to the incumbent) may signify in writing to the incumbent the name of the minister whom it is his intention to nominate as the officiating minister of such chapel; and in case the incumbent shall not, within fourteen days from such last notification, signify in writing his dissent to such nomination, it shall be lawful for the bishop to nominate and license such minister: provided, nevertheless, that in case the incumbent shall, within the same fourteen days, signify his dissent therefrom, such nomination shall be referred by the said bishop to the archbishop of the province in which such diocese shall be situated, and such license shall not be granted without the approval in writing of the said archbishop.

3. The said licensed building shall not, without the assent of the incumbent, be, nor be held to be, a parochial chapel; and nothing contained in this act shall give the minister of the said licensed building any power or authority to perform any pastoral or ministerial functions other than are specified in the said license.

4. Nothing herein contained shall affect the right of the incumbent of the said parish, district, or place in which the said licensed building shall be situated in respect of the publication of banns, or the solemnisation of marriages, or the performance of burials, or his right to any offertory, or any fees, dues, or emoluments to which he may be at the passing of this act legally entitled.

CAP. LXXXIII.

An Act to define the Boundaries of the Colony of British Columbia, and to continue an Act to provide for the Government of the said Colony.

[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Sect. 1 of recited act repealed.

2. Remaining sections of recited act continued.

3. Boundaries of British Columbia.

CAP. LXXXIV.

An Act to confirm certain Acts of Colonial Legislatures.

[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. As to terms "colonial legislature" and "governor."

2. Confirmation of certain acts of colonial legislatures.

Whereas doubts are entertained respecting the validity of divers acts passed by the Legislature of South Australia for the purpose of altering the constitution of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly of the said colony, and respecting the power of colonial legislatures to make laws for the above purpose; and it is expedient to remove such doubts: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. In this act of Parliament the term "colonial legislature" shall mean the authority (other than her Majesty in Council) competent to make laws for any of her Majesty's possessions abroad, except India, the Channel Islands, and the Isle of Man:

The term "governor" shall mean the officer lawfully administering the government of any colony.

2. All laws heretofore passed or purporting to have been passed by any colonial legislature with the object of declaring or altering the constitution of such legislature, or of any branch thereof, or the mode of appointing or electing the members of the same, shall have and be deemed to have had, from the date at which the same shall have received the assent of her Majesty, or of the governor of the colony on behalf of her Majesty, the same force and effect for all purposes whatever as if the said legislature had possessed full powers of enacting laws for the objects aforesaid, and as if all formalities and conditions by act of Parliament or otherwise prescribed in respect of the passing of such laws had been duly observed.

68. Act not to affect post-office savings banks, or powers of Commissioners for Reduction of National Debt.

Whereas numerous banks for savings have been established under the authority of the acts now in force for the safe custody and increase of small savings: and whereas it is expedient to amend such laws, and to consolidate the same in one act: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

SECT. 1. That the acts and parts of acts set forth in the schedule to this act marked A., to the extent to which they are herein expressed, and all other acts and parts of acts which are inconsistent with this act, relating to savings banks established under such acts, are repealed from and after the 20th November, 1863, except in so far as is provided by the last section of this act: provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall invalidate or annul any payments, receipts, or appointments made, or proceedings had, or bonds or securities taken or entered into, or drafts, powers of attorney, certificates, orders, or other instruments whatsoever executed, under the authority of any of the said acts or parts of acts hereby repealed: provided also, that the provisions of an act passed in the 59 Geo. 3 [c. 62], intitled "An Act for the Protection of Banks for Savings in Scotland," shall continue in force as to all savings banks established under it before the passing of this act, unless and until they shall conform to and be established under the provisions of this act.

2. And whereas it is expedient to give protection to such savings banks already established as aforesaid, and the funds thereof, and to afford encouragement to the formation and establishment of like institutions: be it therefore enacted, that if any number of persons have formed, or shall form, any society in any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining any institution in the nature of a bank to receive deposits of money for the benefit of the persons depositing the same, to accumulate the produce of so much thereof as shall not be required by the depositors, their executors or administrators, at compound interest, and to return the whole or any part of such deposit, and the produce thereof, to the depositors, their executors or administrators (deducting out of such produce so much as shall be required for the necessary expenses attending the management of such institution), but deriving no benefit whatsoever from any such deposit, or the produce thereof, and shall be desirous of having the benefit of the provisions of this act, such persons shall cause the rules and regulations established, or to be established, for the management of such institution to be entered, deposited, and filed, in manner hereinafter directed, and thereupon shall be deemed to be entitled to, and shall have the benefit of, the provisions contained in this act: provided always, that the privilege of paying money into the Banks of England or Ireland, and of receiving receipts for the same, shall be, and the same is hereby declared to be, extended to all such savings banks as may have formed, or may hereafter form, their rules and regulations according to the provisions of this act; and it shall and may be lawful for the trustees of such savings banks respectively to invest any funds already accumulated by such savings banks, and which shall not have been invested at the time of the passing of this act, and to receive receipts for the same, in manner authorised by this act: provided nevertheless, that no such savings bank to be hereafter formed shall have or be entitled to the benefits of the provisions in this act contained, unless the formation of the same shall have been sanctioned and approved of by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, or, on their behalf, by the comptroller-general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners.

3. No such savings bank as aforesaid shall have the benefit of this act unless the rules and regulations for the management thereof shall be entered in a book or books to be kept by an officer of such savings bank to be appointed for that purpose, and which book or books shall be open at all reasonable times for the inspection of the persons making deposits in the funds of such savings bank. But, nevertheless, nothing herein contained shall extend to prevent any alteration in or amendment of any such rules or regulations, or repealing or annulling the same or any of them in the whole or in part, or making any new rules or regulations for the management of such savings bank in such manner as by the rules and regulations of such savings bank shall from time to time be provided; but such new rules or regulations, or such alterations in or amendments of former rules or regulations, or any order annulling or repealing any former rule or regulation in the whole or in part, shall not be in force until the same respectively shall be entered in such book or books as aforesaid.

4. Two written or printed copies of all rules or alterations of rules made for the management of any savings bank requiring the benefits of this act, signed by two trustees, shall with all convenient speed after the same shall be made, altered, or amended, and so from time to time after every making, altering, or amending thereof, be submitted by the trustees and managers for the time being of such savings bank to the barrister-at-law appointed by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the said rules, or alterations or amendments thereof, are in conformity to law and with the provisions of this act; and the said barrister shall give a certificate on each of the said written or printed copies that the same are in conformity to law, or point out in what part or parts the said rules, alterations, or amendments are repugnant thereto; and the fee to be paid to such barrister for perusing the rules, alterations, or amendments of the rules of such savings bank, and giving such certificate as aforesaid, shall not at any one time exceed the sum of one guinea; and one of such written or printed copies, when certified by the said barrister, shall be returned to the trustees of the said savings bank, and the other of such written or printed copies shall be transmitted by such barrister to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; and all rules, alterations, and amendments thereof from the time when the same shall have been certified by the said barrister shall be binding on the trustees, managers, and officers of the said savings bank and the depositors therein, and their representatives, and the copy of such rules deposited with the said commissioners, or a true copy thereof examined with the original and proved to be a true copy, shall be received as evidence of such rules respectively in all cases, and no certiorari shall be brought or allowed to remove any such rules into any of her Majesty's courts of record; provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to require any rule making any alteration in the days or hours of attendance at any such savings bank as aforesaid to be laid before such barrister.

5. Every savings bank established or to be established under the provisions of the said hereby repealed acts or this act shall be certified under the provisions of this act by the title of "savings bank certified under the act of 1863;" and if any other bank, association, or company, or any other person, shall use or adopt such title as their or his designation, or in carrying on business, the members of every such association or company, or any of them, or any such person respectively, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and on conviction thereof shall be punishable accordingly.

6. No savings bank, subject to the proviso hereinafter contained with respect to the branch offices or local receivers of any savings bank, shall have the benefit of this act unless in the rules and regulations for the management thereof it shall be expressly provided—

(1). That no person or persons being treasurer, trustee, or manager of such savings bank, or having any control in the management thereof, shall derive any benefit from any deposit made in such savings bank, save only and except such salaries and allowances or other necessary expenses as shall according to such rules and regulations be provided for the charges of managing such savings bank, and for remuneration to officers employed in the management thereof, exclusive of the treasurer or treasurers, trustee or trustees, manager or managers, or other persons having direction in the management of such savings bank, who shall not directly or indirectly have any salary, allowance, profit, or benefit whatsoever therefrom beyond their actual expenses for the purposes of such savings bank:

(2). That not less than two persons, being either trustees, managers, or paid officers appointed for that specific purpose, and where two only, except in the case of savings banks which are open for more than six hours in every week, one such person to be a trustee or manager, be present on all occasions of public business, and be parties to every transaction of deposit and repayment, so as to form at least a double check on every such transaction with depositors:

(3). That the depositor's pass-book shall be compared with the ledger on every transaction of repayment, and on its first production at the bank after each 20th November:

(4). That every depositor in a savings bank established under this act shall once at least in every year cause his deposit book to be produced at the office of the said savings bank for the purpose of being examined:

(5). That no money be received from or paid to depositors except at the office or branch offices where the business of the savings bank is carried on under the authority of the board of managers, and during the usual hours for public business:

(6). That a public accountant, or one or more auditors, be appointed by the trustees and managers, but not out of their own body, to examine the books of the bank, and to report in writing to the board or committee of management the result of such audit, not less than once in every half year; also to examine an extracted list of the depositors' balances made up every year to the 20th November, and to certify as to the correct amount of the liabilities and assets of the bank:

(7). That a book containing such extracted list of every depositor's balance, omitting the name, but giving the distinctive number and separate amount of each, and shewing the aggregate number and amount of the whole, checked and certified by such public accountant or auditors, be open at any time during the hours of public business for the inspection of every depositor, as respects his own account, to examine his own deposit book therewith, and the general results of the same:

(8). That the trustees and managers, or committee of management, shall hold meetings once at least in every half year, and shall keep minutes of their proceedings in a separate book provided for that purpose:

(9). Provided, that where savings banks are established, with agents or local receivers elsewhere than at the head office, the rules shall provide for the due receipt of, and accounting for, all monies by such agents or local receivers on account of such savings banks respectively, and also for the presence of a second party in every transaction when money is paid or received, and also for the periodical examination of the depositors' books with the ledger once at least in every year.

7. The trustees and managers of every savings bank shall transmit weekly returns to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, in such form and giving such particulars as the said commissioners may direct, shewing the amounts of the week's transactions of such savings bank, and the amount of the cash balances remaining in the hands of the treasurer, or any other person, on account of such savings bank.

8. Every treasurer, actuary, or cashier who shall be entrusted with the receipt or custody of any sum of money subscribed or deposited for the purpose of such savings bank, or any interest or dividend from time to time accruing therefrom, and every officer or other person receiving any salary or allowance for his services from the funds of any savings bank (except in the cases of supernumerary assistants employed at the periods of balancing the accounts), unless he shall already have given good and sufficient security, shall give good and sufficient security, to be approved of by not less than two trustees and three managers of such savings bank, for the just and faithful execution of such office or trust; and such security, when given by an actuary or cashier, or officer, or other person, receiving any salary or allowance for his services as aforesaid, shall be given by bond or bonds, with one or more sureties, to the Comptroller-General of the National Debt Office for the time being, without fee or reward; and in case of forfeiture, it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers for the time being of such savings bank to sue upon such bond or bonds, in the name of such Comptroller-General for the time being, and to carry on such suit at the costs and charges and for the use of the said savings bank, fully indemnifying and saving harmless such Comptroller-General from all costs and charges in respect of such suit, and such bond shall, when executed, be deposited with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and the said commissioners may, upon application signed by not less than two trustees and three managers, in such form as the said commissioners shall direct, deliver up to the trustees of the savings bank any such bond or bonds which may have been, or shall hereafter be, deposited with them for the purpose of being cancelled.

9. If any actuary, cashier, secretary, officer, or other person holding any situation or appointment in any savings bank shall receive any sum or sums of money from, or on account of, any depositor or person desirous of becoming such, or on account of such savings bank, and shall not forthwith, or in the case of local receivers acting on behalf of any savings bank within the time specified in the rules of the said savings bank, duly account for and pay over the same to the trustees or managers thereof, or to such person as may be directed by the rules of the said savings bank, such actuary, cashier, secretary, officer, or local receiver, or other person as aforesaid, on being convicted thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour.

10. All monies, goods, chattels, and effects whatever, and all securities for money, or other obligatory instruments and evidences or muniments, and all other effects whatever, and all rights or claims belonging to, or had by, such savings bank, shall be vested in the trustee or trustees of such savings bank for the time being, for the use and benefit of such savings bank, and the respective depositors therein, their respective executors or administrators, according to their respective claims and interests, and after the death or removal of any trustee or trustees shall vest in the succeeding trustee or trustees for the same estate and interest as the former trustee or trustees had therein, and subject to the same trusts without any assignment or conveyance whatever, and also shall, for all purposes of action or suit, as well criminal as civil, in law or in equity, in anywise touching or concerning the same, be deemed and taken to be, and shall in every such proceeding (where necessary) be stated to be, the property of the person or persons appointed to the office of trustee or trustees of such savings bank for the time being in his, her, or their proper name or names, without further description, and such person or persons shall, and they are hereby respectively authorised to, bring or defend, or cause to be brought or defended, any action, suit, or prosecution, criminal as well as civil, in law or equity, touching or concerning the property, right, or claim aforesaid, of or belonging to, or had by, such savings bank; and such person or persons so appointed shall and may, in all cases concerning the property, right, or claim aforesaid of such savings bank, sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, in his or their proper name or names as trustee or trustees of such savings bank, without other description; and no such suit, action, or prosecution shall be discontinued or abate by the death of such person or persons, or his or their removal from the office of trustee or trustees as aforesaid; but the same shall and may be proceeded in by the succeeding trustee or trustees in the proper name or names of the person or persons commencing the same, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding, and such succeeding trustee or trustees shall pay or receive like costs as if the action or suit had been commenced in his or their name or names for the benefit of, or to be reimbursed from, the funds of such savings bank.

11. No trustee or manager of any savings bank (subject to the provision hereinafter contained in respect to savings banks in Ireland) shall be personally liable, except—

- (1). For monies actually received by him on account of or for the use of such savings bank, and not paid over and disposed of in the manner directed by the rules of the savings bank;
- (2). For neglect or omission in complying with the rules and regulations required by this act to be adopted as hereinbefore is provided in the maintenance of checks, the audit and examination of accounts, the holding of meetings, and keeping minutes of proceedings thereat;
- (3). And also for neglect or omission in taking security from officers, as is hereinbefore provided.

12. Any trustee or manager of a savings bank in Ireland who has declared, or shall declare, in writing under his hand deposited with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, that he is willing to be answerable for a specific amount only, such amount being in no case less than 100*l.*, shall not be liable to make good any deficiency which may thereafter arise in the funds of such savings bank beyond the amount specified in such writing: provided always, that the trustee and manager of every savings bank in Ireland shall be personally liable for all monies actually received by him on account of, or to and for, the use of such savings bank, and not paid over and disposed of in the manner directed by the rules of the said savings bank; and an extract of this provision shall be enrolled as one of the rules of every such savings bank in Ireland, and printed and affixed in every office or place where deposits are received, with the names and places of residence of the trustees and managers for the time being, and the amount (if any) to which they have collectively or individually limited their responsibility.

13. Every person who shall have or receive any part of the monies, effects, or funds of or belonging to any savings bank availing itself of the provisions of this act, or who shall in any manner have been or shall be entrusted with the disposition, management, or custody thereof, or of any securities, books, or papers, or property relating to the same, his executors, administrators, and assigns, shall, upon demand made in pursuance of any order of not less than two trustees and three managers of such savings bank, or at any general meeting of the trustees or managers thereof, give in his or their account or accounts to the said trustees or managers, or to such general meeting of such savings bank, or to such other person or persons as shall be nominated to receive the same, to be examined and allowed or disallowed by the said trustees or managers respectively, and shall on the like demand pay over all the monies remaining in his or their hands, and assign and transfer or deliver all securities and effects, books, papers, and property in his or their hands or custody to such person or persons as the said trustees or managers shall appoint; and in case of any neglect or refusal to deliver such account, or to pay over such monies, or to assign, transfer, or deliver such securities, effects, funds, books, papers, or property in manner aforesaid, it shall be lawful to and for the trustee or trustees of such savings bank for the time being to exhibit a petition to the justices of the peace at their general or quarter sessions of the peace, or at any adjournment thereof, for the county, riding, division, or place wherein such savings bank shall be established, who shall and may proceed thereupon in a summary way, and make such order therein, upon hearing all parties concerned, as to such court in their discretion shall seem just, which order shall be final and conclusive, and all assignments, sales, and transfers made in pursuance of such order shall be good and effectual in law to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

14. If any person already appointed, or who may hereafter be appointed, to any office in a savings bank, and being intrusted with the keeping of the accounts, or having in his hands or possession, by virtue of his said office or employment, any monies or effects belonging to such savings bank, or any deeds or securities relating to the same, shall die, or become a bankrupt or insolvent, or have any execution or attachment or other process issued against his lands, goods, chattels, or effects, or make any assignment thereof for the benefit of his creditors, his executors, administrators, or assigns, or other persons having legal right, or the sheriff or other officer executing such process, shall, within forty days after demand made by two of the trustees of the said savings bank as aforesaid, deliver and pay over all monies and other things belonging to such savings bank to such person as the said trustees shall appoint, and shall pay, out of the estates, assets, or effects of such person, all sums of money remaining due, which such person received by virtue of his said office or employment, before any other of his debts are paid or satisfied, or before the money directed to be levied by such process as aforesaid is paid over to the party issuing such process, and all such assets, lands, goods, chattels, estates, and effects, shall be bound to the payment and discharge thereof accordingly.

15. The several sums of money belonging to any savings bank which the trustees of such savings bank respectively are authorised to invest under this act, or under any rules or regulations of any such savings banks, shall, except as hereinafter is excepted, be paid into and invested in the Bank of England or the Bank of Ireland, as the case may require, in the names of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, according to the provisions of this act enabling such trustees to make investments in the names of the said commissioners; and no such sum or sums shall be paid or laid out by the trustees of such savings bank in any other manner, or upon any other security whatever, except as aforesaid, and except such sums of money as from time to time shall necessarily remain in the hands of the treasurer or treasurers of such savings bank to answer the exigencies thereof: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall restrain or prevent any depositor, or any trustee or trustees acting on behalf of any depositor or depositors of any friendly society, or any charitable or provident institution or society, or penny savings bank, from withdrawing from any such savings bank any sum or sums of money which shall have been deposited by such depositor, friendly society, charitable or provident institution or society, or penny savings bank, and investing the same in any other securities: provided always, that the trustees of any savings bank already established, or which shall take the benefit of this act in manner hereinbefore provided, shall be and they are hereby empowered to pay into the Bank of England or Ireland (as the case may be) any sum or sums of money, not being less than 50*l.*, to the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, upon the declaration of the trustees of such savings bank, or any two or more of them, that such monies belong exclusively to the savings bank for which such payment is intended to be made, whether such monies shall have been deposited therein before the passing of this act or thereafter shall be deposited therein; and the cashier or cashiers of the Banks of England and Ireland respectively are hereby required to receive all such monies, and to place the same into the account raised, in the names of the said commissioners, in the books of the Banks of England and Ireland respectively, denominated "The Fund for the Banks for Savings;" provided nevertheless, that previous to any payment being made into the Banks of England or Ireland as aforesaid, the person or persons applying for that purpose shall in all cases produce to the officer of the said commissioners, at their office in London or Dublin (as the case may be), an order, under the hands of two of the trustees of such savings bank, on the account of which such payment is to be made.

16. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to prevent the trustees of any savings bank, already established or to be established, receiving any sum or sums of money from any depositor for any purpose, except to be paid into the Bank to the account of the Commissioners for Reduction of the National Debt; and it shall be lawful for such trustees to apply any such sum or sums of money in any other manner, for the benefit of the several depositors, according to the rules and regulations of such savings banks respectively, anything in the said hereby repealed acts or in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

17. In cases where any savings banks have been or shall be established in any town or place, and other smaller banks have been or shall be established in the neighbourhood of such town or place as branch banks thereof, and such branch banks, by their treasurers, have paid or shall pay any sums into the bank in any such town or place as a central bank, it shall and may be lawful for the said trustees of any such central bank, or any two of them, to pay into the Bank of England or Ireland, in manner prescribed by this act, along with the monies belonging to such central bank, any sum or sums of money belonging to and on account of any such branch bank: provided always, that the treasurer of such branch banks shall certify to the treasurer of such central bank, that the amount contributed by any one depositor in any such branch bank in any one year does not exceed the limit of deposits authorised by this act.

18. If any order or declaration produced to the said officer for the purpose of paying monies into the Banks of England or Ireland to the account of the said commissioners as aforesaid shall contain any matter or thing which be false or untrue, then and in every such case the sum so paid shall be forfeited to the said commissioners.

19. The said commissioners shall cause all the monies paid into the Banks of England and Ireland respectively, and placed to their account in pursuance of the provisions of this act, to be invested from time to time in their names and to be carried to the account hereinbefore provided, under such regulations as the said commissioners shall direct, in the purchase of Bank Annuities or Exchequer Bills or parliamentary securities of whatsoever kind, created or issued, or which may hereafter be created or issued, under the authority of any act or acts of Parliament, for the interest on which provision is made by Parliament, or any stock or debenture or other securities expressly guaranteed by authority of Parliament, and the interest which shall from time to time arise and become due thereon shall in like manner be invested in the purchase of such Government Annuities or Exchequer Bills or securities aforesaid.

20. It shall be lawful for any three or more of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt for the time being to execute and do all matters and things which the said commissioners are required or empowered to do in the execution of this act.

21. From and after the 20th November, 1863, all receipts issued prior to that day to the trustees of savings banks established under the said hereby repealed acts by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt shall carry interest at the rate of 3l. 5s. per centum per annum; and from and after the said 20th November, 1863, upon the payment of any sum or sums of money into the Banks of England or Ireland to the account of the said commissioners by the trustees of any savings bank established under the said hereby repealed acts or this act, it shall be lawful for the officer or officers of the said commissioners in that behalf, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and empowered to issue, upon every such payment being made, a receipt, signed by one of the cashiers of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England or Ireland, as the case may be, for the amount of such payment, carrying interest at the like rate of 3l. 5s. per centum per annum from the day of such payment inclusive, payable with the principal at the Banks of England and Ireland respectively whenever the same shall be required or drawn for in manner directed by this act, and such receipt shall be dated on the day on which the payment of any such sum or sums of money shall be made respectively, and every such receipt shall be in such form as shall be from time to time directed by the said commissioners, and the principal and interest of all sums mentioned in any receipt shall be charged and chargeable upon, and the same are hereby charged and made payable out of, all or any monies standing in any account in the names of the said commissioners, or out of any monies produced by the sale of any stock, or annuities, funds, or Exchequer Bills or other securities standing in their names in the books of the Banks of England and Ireland respectively, as the said commissioners shall from time to time direct: provided always, that no fractional part less than one penny shall be allowed or paid as interest upon the principal sum contained in any receipt issued under the provisions of this act.

22. All interest which shall become due and payable upon any sum of money mentioned in any such receipt upon the 20th November and the 20th May in every year next after the date of any such receipt shall be from time to time calculated and computed by the officer of the said commissioners, and shall in each and every year be placed to the credit of the savings bank on whose account any such sum of money was paid within six weeks from such 20th November and 20th May respectively, and shall be carried to and written on the account of such savings bank, and shall become principal, and shall from thenceforth carry interest as principal money paid into the said Bank of England or Ireland, as the case may be, on the account of such savings bank; and a receipt according to such form as the said commissioners shall approve shall be signed by the officer of the said commissioners, and shall be issuable by the said officer half-yearly within sixty days from and after such 20th November and 20th May respectively (and such receipts shall bear date the 21st November and the 21st May respectively), for the amount of such interest so credited and made principal as aforesaid as if the amount thereof had been a payment made by the trustees of such savings bank to the account of the said commissioners: provided always, that no interest shall be computed or calculated on any fractional part of a pound of the half-yearly balance standing in the books of the said commissioners on account of any savings bank on any 20th November or the 20th May respectively.

23. It shall be lawful for the trustees and managers of any such savings bank, if they shall so think fit, to direct that all interest which shall be payable to the depositors in such savings bank shall yearly, or twice in each and every year, be calculated and computed by the trustees of such savings bank, or such person or persons as they shall appoint, and shall be carried to the credit of such depositors respectively, and shall become principal, and shall from thenceforth carry interest in all respects as other principal money deposited in the said banks, or as if the said sum of interest so credited to the said depositors respectively had actually been paid to the said depositors, and by them repaid to the said trustees and managers, any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that from and after the 20th November, 1863, the interest payable to depositors by the trustees and managers of any savings banks shall not exceed the rate of 3l. 0s. 10d. per cent. per annum.

24. Before trustees of any savings bank shall make any order or draft for payment by the said commissioners of any sum or sums of money under this act, the trustees of such savings bank shall make, give, sign, and execute an appointment under the hands and seals of not less than two of such trustees, and the execution of which shall be attested by two managers of the same savings bank, empowering and authorising some person or persons named in such appointment to be agent or agents for receiving all and every such sum and sums of money as such trustees shall from time to time require to be paid by such commissioners, and every such appointment shall be produced by or on behalf of the person or persons named therein to the officer of the said commissioners fourteen days at least before the payment of any sum or sums of money on account of such savings bank; and such appointment shall remain deposited in the office of the said commissioners; and every such appointment shall be made in such form and under such regulations as shall from time to time be directed, or required, or approved of by the said commissioners or their officer: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the trustees of any savings bank by whom any such appointment shall be made, given, signed, and executed, or for the survivors or survivor of such trustees, to revoke such appointment by any certificate or other instrument under the hands and seals or hand and seal of such trustees or trustee attested by two managers of such savings bank, and in such form and under such regulations as shall be directed, or required, or approved of by the said commissioners or their officer; and in case of the decease of every such trustee except one it shall be lawful for the surviving trustee, together with any other trustee or trustees, being not less than two, of the said savings bank, and in case of the decease of all such trustees, or in case all such trustees shall decline or refuse to act, it shall be lawful for not less than two other trustees of the said savings bank from time to time to make, give, and execute an appointment in manner aforesaid reappointing the person or persons named in such appointment, or any other person or persons in his or their room or stead, to be the agent or agents of such trustees, and every such certificate or instrument of revocation, and every such new appointment, shall be produced to the officer of the said commissioners by the person or persons named in such new appointment fourteen days at least before the payment of any sum or sums of money to the person or persons named in such new appointment, and shall remain deposited in the office of such officer.

25. It shall be lawful for the trustees of any such savings bank from time to time (by any draft or order in writing under the hands of any two trustees of such savings bank, attested by two other trustees or managers, or by any two credible witnesses, according to such form as the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt shall from time to time direct) to require that the whole or any part of the principal sum or sums of money standing in the books of the said commissioners to the credit of the trustees of such savings bank shall be paid to such person or persons as such trustees shall from time to time require, being the agent or agents named in some appointment executed under this act, or the said hereby repealed acts, and lodged with the officers of the said commissioners as hereinbefore mentioned and then remaining in force, and every such draft or order shall be addressed to the said commissioners, and upon the same being produced to the officer of the said commissioners, the said officer shall, within five days after the production thereof, upon the back of such draft or order indorse and sign an order in such form as shall from time to time be directed and required by the said commissioners for the payment of the sum mentioned in the draft or order of such trustees, together with the amount of all interest due on such sum up to the day immediately preceding the day of the date of the order of such officer, and which order of such officer previously to the issuing thereof shall be entered and countersigned by the clerk or other proper officer making such entry, and shall be addressed to the cashiers of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England or Ireland, as the case may be, and such cashiers or one of them shall, upon the production of such order, pay the sum mentioned therein to the person or persons mentioned in the draft or order of the said trustees, and the signature of such person or persons, jointly or severally, shall be a sufficient discharge to the said commissioners and to the said governors and company respectively, and all payments made in pursuance of such draft or order respectively shall be deemed and taken to be payments made by the said commissioners to the trustees of such savings banks respectively according to the numerical order and priority of date in which the original receipts of money deposited on account of such savings banks respectively shall have been issued to the trustees thereof respectively in manner hereinbefore mentioned.

26. Whenever the sum to be drawn for by the trustees of any savings bank shall exceed 5000*l.*, the draft or order for that purpose shall be signed by not less than four such trustees, and the signature of each and every of the said four trustees shall be separately attested by at least one manager of such savings bank, or some one other credible person; and any manager or other person attesting the signature of any one of the said four trustees shall not be an attesting witness to the signature of any other of such four trustees: provided also, that whenever the sum or sums drawn for by one or more drafts by the trustees of any savings bank, or by the trustees of any friendly society, shall exceed the sum of 10,000*l.*, the amount of such draft or drafts (if more than one) shall not be payable by the officer of the said commissioners until the expiration of fourteen days next after the day when the draft or drafts for such sum or sums shall be produced to the said officer.

27. Such officer shall be and he is hereby restrained from issuing any order or orders for payment as aforesaid, bearing the same date, upon any one day, on account of the same savings bank, exceeding in amount the principal sum of 10,000*l.*, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

28. In case any one or more trustee or trustees of any savings bank, who shall have made, given, signed, and executed any such appointment, shall at any time appear in person at the office of the said commissioners in England or Ireland respectively, and require payment of any sum or sums of money which might be required by the person or persons authorised to receive the same by such appointments, or if any trustee or trustees of any savings bank shall appear in person where no appointment shall have been made, and if such trustee or trustees so appearing shall produce a draft or order signed by any two or more trustees of such savings bank for any sum under 5000*l.*, or by any four or more trustees for sums exceeding 5000*l.*, no such trustee or trustees being himself or themselves a party or parties who signed such draft or order, and if the identity of the person of the trustee or trustees so appearing shall be ascertained to the satisfaction of the said commissioners or their officer, it shall be lawful for the said officer to direct payment to be made to such trustee or trustees so appearing of any sum or sums required to be paid by such order or draft, in like manner as if the person or persons authorised by such appointment to receive the same had required such payment, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding: provided nevertheless, that notwithstanding the payment made to such trustees or trustee appearing in person on the appointment of such person or persons as aforesaid, the appointment shall remain in full force and virtue until revoked by the trustees, as hereinbefore mentioned.

29. In all cases where the joint stock or property of any savings bank arising from deposits made under the said hereby repealed acts or this act shall, from and after the 20th November, 1863, be increased by the interest received beyond the rate of interest payable to the depositors by the rules and regulations of such savings bank, or by any other means, the said trustees or managers of such savings bank, after deducting all such expenses as they may deem proper, shall, within six months after the 20th November in each year, ascertain, certify, and pay over to the said commissioners the amount of such increased stock and property, reserving such portion as may appear necessary to meet current expenses, and the amount of such surplus which shall be ascertained, certified, and paid over (after such deduction as aforesaid) shall be discharged from the account of such savings bank standing in the books of the said commissioners; and the said commissioners shall keep a separate and distinct account of such surplus so discharged from the account of the said savings banks respectively as aforesaid, and apply the same in such manner and under such regulations from time to time as any other monies under the provisions of this act: provided nevertheless, that it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers of the said respective savings banks, for the purposes of such savings banks respectively, to claim and receive of and from the said commissioners (who are hereby required to pay the same upon such certificate as they may appoint) all or any part of the principal monies which may have been already or may be hereafter so discharged from the account of such savings banks respectively as aforesaid under the provisions of the said hereby repealed acts or of this act.

30. In case the trustees or managers of any savings bank shall receive or shall have received any deposit of money from or for the benefit of any person under the age of twenty-one year, it shall be lawful for the trustees or managers of such savings bank to pay such person his or her share and interest in the funds of such savings bank, and the receipt of such person shall be a sufficient discharge, notwithstanding his or her incapacity or disability in law to act for himself or herself.

31. It shall be lawful for the trustees and managers of any savings bank to pay any sum of money in respect of any deposit already made or to be made by married women, or by women who may marry after such deposit, to any such woman, unless the husband of such woman shall give to such trustees or managers notice in writing of his marriage with such woman, and shall require payment to be made to him.

32. It shall be lawful for the trustees or treasurers of any charitable or provident institution or society, or charitable donation or bequest for the maintenance, education, or benefit of the poor, or of any penny savings bank within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to invest, with the approval of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt or the Comptroller-General acting under them, and under such regulations as shall be prescribed by them in that respect, the funds of such institution or society, without restriction as to amount, into the funds of any savings bank established under the provisions of the said hereby repealed acts or of this act, and also without such approval of the said commissioners to invest from time to time, if the trustees and managers of such savings bank shall be willing to receive the same, any part of the funds of such institution or society or penny savings bank to the amount of 100*l.* per annum: provided in such last cases the amount of the sum to be invested by any such institution or society or penny savings bank shall not at any time exceed the sum of 300*l.* in the whole, exclusive of interest.

33. It shall be lawful for the trustees or treasurers of any friendly society legally enrolled or certified in the manner required by the acts in force relating to friendly societies to invest any sum of money the property of such society, without restriction as to amount, into the funds of any savings bank established under the provisions of the said hereby repealed acts or of this act, and which shall be willing to receive the same, under such terms and conditions as shall be specially provided for that purpose by the rules, orders, and regulations of such savings bank.

34. The receipt of the treasurer, trustee, or other officer for the time being of any such charitable or provident institution or society, penny savings bank, or friendly society, for any money paid according to the requisition of such treasurer, trustee, or other officer apparently authorised to require such payment, shall be a sufficient discharge for the same, and the savings bank paying such money, and the trustees, managers, and officers thereof, shall not be responsible for any misapplication or for any want of authority of the person or persons requiring or receiving payment of such money.

35. No person who is or shall be a member of any friendly society established or to be established under and by virtue of any act or acts relating to friendly societies, or a member of any of the charitable institutions or penny savings banks hereinbefore mentioned, shall, by reason of such person being or becoming a depositor in any savings bank taking the benefit of this act, be considered as subject or liable to any penalty, forfeiture, or disability declared, or expressed, or intended so to be, by or in the rules, orders, or regulations of such friendly society, charitable institution, or penny savings bank respectively, any rules, orders, or regulations of such friendly society, charitable institution, or penny savings bank made or hereafter to be made to the contrary notwithstanding: provided also, that no depositor shall be subject or liable to any penalty or forfeiture on account of his belonging to or being interested in the funds of any friendly society, or charitable institution, or penny savings bank deposited in the same or any other savings bank.

36. No sum shall be paid into any savings bank by any person or persons by ticket or number or otherwise, without disclosing to the trustees and managers of such savings bank his or her name, together with his or her profession, business, occupation, calling, and residence, and the trustees and managers of every savings bank are hereby required to cause the name of such depositor, together with his or her profession, business, occupation, calling, and residence, to be entered in the books of the savings bank.

37. It shall be lawful for the trustees and managers of any savings bank to receive from any person or persons acting as trustee or trustees on behalf of any depositor or depositors, whether such person or persons be or are himself or themselves a depositor or depositors in the same or any other savings bank or not, any sum or sums not exceeding the annual amount hereinafter mentioned, provided that such trustee or trustees shall make such declaration on behalf of such depositor or depositors, and subject to the like conditions as by this act is required in the case of any person or persons making any deposit on his or her own account, and all deposits made by any such trustee or trustees shall be inserted in the books of such savings bank in the joint names of such trustees or trustee, and of the person or persons in whose account such sum shall be so deposited, and the receipt and receipts of such trustee or trustees, or the survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of any sole trustee or surviving trustee, with or without the receipt of the person or persons on whose account such sum may have been deposited, shall, provided such account shall have been opened before the 9th August, 1844, be a good and valid discharge to the trustees and managers of the savings bank: provided always, that in respect to all such deposits made after the said 9th August, 1844, repayment of the same, or any part thereof, shall not be made by the trustees and managers of any savings bank without the receipt and receipts of the said trustee and the person on whose account such deposit may have been made, or the survivor or survivors, or the executors or administrators of such survivor, whose receipt and receipts, either in person, or by agent appointed by power of attorney, which power of attorney shall be valid if executed by an infant of or exceeding the age of fourteen years, shall alone be a good and valid discharge to the said trustees and managers, except in case of the insanity or imbecility of the party on whose behalf the deposit has been made, upon proof of which, to the satisfaction of the said trustees and managers, repayment may be made to the said trustee, and an abstract of the above provisions shall be enrolled as one of the rules of all savings banks.

38. It shall not be lawful for any person or persons who shall have made any deposit in, or who shall be entitled to any benefit from the funds of any savings bank (unless such benefit shall be derived solely as executor, administrator, or other personal representative of any deceased depositor in the same or any other savings bank) to make any deposit in any other account at the same or any other savings bank; and that every person desirous of making any deposit in any savings bank, shall at the time of the making of the first deposit in any savings bank, and at such other time or times as such depositor shall be required so to do by the trustees and managers of any such savings bank, make a declaration signed either by themselves, or, in case of infants under the age of seven years, by some person to be approved by the trustees and managers, or by such other person as they shall appoint, in such form as shall be directed or approved of by the commissioners or other proper officer, that the person or persons on whose behalf any such first deposit shall be required to be made is not, or are not, entitled to any deposit, or any such subsequent deposit, in, or any benefit from, the funds of any savings bank other than that into which such deposit shall be made, or any other funds in the said savings bank; and in case any such declaration shall not be true, or if any person shall at any time have or hold, or be possessed of, any deposit or funds in more than one savings bank within the United Kingdom, except as aforesaid, every such person shall, if in the opinion of the barrister-at-law such deposit was made with a fraudulent intention, forfeit and lose all right and title to any deposit in or to any funds of any and every such savings bank, and the trustees and managers of such savings bank shall, and they are hereby required in such case to, close the account of such depositor, and to cause the sum or sums so forfeited to be forthwith paid into the Bank of England or Bank of Ireland, as the case may be, to the account of the commissioners standing in the books of the Governors and Company of the said Bank respectively, under the title of "The account of the commissioners for applying certain sums of money annually to the reduction of the national debt," and the cashier or cashiers of the said governors and company respectively is and are hereby required to receive all such sums, and to place the same to the said account, to be applied in like manner as all other money placed to the said account; and every such declaration so made shall be filed and kept and preserved by the trustees of every such savings bank, and a printed notice of such regulation and prohibition shall be affixed in the office or place appointed for the receiving of deposits of any savings bank in such form as the said commissioners, or their proper officer, shall from time to time direct, or require, or approve; and a copy of such declaration, with notice of the penalty attached thereto (if false), shall also be annexed to or printed at the beginning of the deposit book.

39. It shall not be lawful for the trustees of any savings bank to receive from any one present or future depositor, within any one year ending on the 20th November (whether any sum or sums of money had been previously withdrawn or not), any sum or sums exceeding in the whole 30*l.*, exclusive of compound interest, nor to receive from any depositor any sum or sums of money whatever which shall make the sum to which such depositor shall be entitled exceed the sum of 150*l.* in the whole, exclusive of interest as aforesaid: provided always, that, except in the cases hereinafter provided, whenever the sum or sums standing in the name of any depositor shall amount in the whole to 200*l.* principal and interest included, thenceforth no interest shall be payable on any such deposit so long as it shall continue to amount to the said sum of 200*l.*: provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall prevent, or be construed to prevent, the trustees of any savings bank from paying interest to any depositor whose deposit on the 28th July, 1828, amounted to, and has since continued to amount to or exceed, the sum of 200*l.*; nor to prevent any depositor, having closed his or her account in any savings bank, from making a deposit in the same or any other savings bank, not exceeding the limit allowed to be received in any one year from any new depositor.

40. If any depositor in any savings bank shall desire to transfer the amount of his deposit to any other savings bank, he shall, upon application at the savings bank in which his account shall be open, be furnished with a certificate stating the whole amount which may be due to him, with interest; and thereupon his account at such savings bank shall be closed, and upon delivery of such certificate to the trustees or managers of the savings bank to which it is proposed by the depositor to transfer such deposit, they shall forthwith, upon such depositor signing such declaration as is required in the case of a new depositor, open an account for the amount stated in such certificate for such depositor, and the amount stated in such certificate shall, upon such certificate being forwarded to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, be transferred, in the books of the said commissioners, from their account with the trustees of the savings bank issuing such certificate to the credit of the said commissioners' account with the trustees of the savings bank receiving such certificate; and every such certificate for transfer, for the purpose aforesaid, shall be in such form as is set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed, marked B.

41. In case any depositor in the funds of any savings bank taking the benefit of this act shall die leaving any sum or sums of money in the said funds, or any dividends or interest due thereon, belonging to him or her at the time of his or her death, exceeding in the whole the sum of 50*l.*, the same shall not be paid to any person or persons as representative or representatives of such depositor, but upon the probate of the will of the deceased depositor, or letters of administration of his or her estate and effects: provided always, that where the whole estate or effects of any such deceased depositor, for or in respect of which any probate or letters of administration respectively shall be granted, shall not exceed the value of 50*l.*, no stamp duty shall be chargeable thereon, nor upon any legacy or residue or part thereof bequeathed, nor upon any share or part of the estate or effects to be paid or distributed by or under such probate or letters of administration: provided also, that in every such case, the person or persons claiming such probate or letters of administration free from stamp duty under this act shall, in such case, exhibit to the court or person having authority to grant the probate or letters of administration, a certificate of the amount of the principal money and interest which the deceased depositor had in the funds of the said savings bank, which certificate shall be granted in such form and manner as shall have been settled by the rules or regulations of the savings banks respectively, and shall be signed or testified by such person or persons as shall be directed therein; and every such certificate shall be taken and received by the court or person having authority to grant such probate or letters of administration as evidence of the amount of the deposit and interest of the deceased depositor in the funds of the said savings bank.

42. In all cases where the whole estate and effects of any deceased depositor, for or in respect of which letters of administration shall be granted, shall not exceed the value of 50*l.* sterling, no stamp duty shall be chargeable upon the bond required to be given by the administrator for the due administration of the effects of such deceased depositor, nor upon any affidavit or document leading to or connected with such administration; but every such bond and affidavit shall be exempted from stamp duty, in like manner and under the like regulations as are provided in and by this act with respect to such letters of administration.

43. In case any depositor in any such savings bank shall die leaving any sum of money in the said savings bank belonging to him or her at the time of his or her death, not exceeding in the whole the sum of 50*l.*, exclusive of interest, and probate of the will of the deceased depositor, or letters of administration of his or her estate and effects, is not produced to the trustees and managers of the said savings bank, or if notice in writing of the existence of a will and intention to prove the same, or to take out letters of administration, is not given to the said trustees and managers within the period of one month from the death of the said depositor; and in the latter case, unless such will is proved, or letters of administration taken out, within the period of two months from the death of the said depositor, it shall be lawful for the said trustees and managers of any savings bank to pay and divide the same to or amongst any person or persons who shall appear to such trustees and managers to be the widow, or entitled to the effects of such deceased depositor, according to the Statute of Distribution, or according to the rules of the said savings bank.

44. The payment of any such sum of money shall be valid and effectual with respect to any demand of any other person or persons as next of kin of such deceased depositor, or as the lawful representative or representatives of such depositor, against the funds of such savings bank, or against the trustees and managers thereof; but, nevertheless, such next of kin or representatives shall have remedy for recovery of such money so paid as aforesaid against the person or persons who shall have received the same.

45. Payment of any money by any such savings bank as aforesaid to any person or persons having had granted to him any letters of administration to the effects of a depositor, or probate of his will, or testamentary disposition granted by any ecclesiastical court, and appearing to be in force, shall be valid and effectual with respect to any demand of any other person or persons as the lawful representative or representatives of such depositor against the funds of such savings bank, or against the trustees and managers thereof; but, nevertheless, such lawful representative or representatives shall have remedy for such money so paid as aforesaid against the person or persons who shall have received the same.

46. If any depositor in any such savings bank, being illegitimate, shall die intestate, leaving any person or persons who but for the illegitimacy of such depositor would be entitled to the money due to such deceased depositor, it shall be lawful for the trustees and managers of such savings bank, with the authority in writing of the barrister appointed to certify the rules of savings banks, to pay the money due to such deceased depositor to any one or more of such persons as in their opinion would have been entitled to the same according to the Statute of Distribution if the said depositor had been legitimate; or if there be no such persons, then that it shall be lawful for the said trustees or managers, with the authority in writing of the said barrister, to pay the amount due to such deceased depositor to such person or persons as shall be approved by the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, such approval to be signified to the trustees and managers of the savings bank by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt.

47. Where this act provides for payments made or to be made to any of the relations of any deceased intestate depositor according to the Statute of Distribution, the provisions thereof shall be held in Scotland to apply to payments made or to be made to persons appearing to be next of kin according to the law of Scotland; and where this act refers to probate of the will of the deceased or letters of administration of his or her estate and effects, the said provisions shall in Scotland be held to apply to confirmation by the law of Scotland.

48. If any dispute shall arise between the trustees and managers of any savings bank and any individual depositor therein, or any executor, administrator, next of kin, or creditor or assignee of any depositor who may become bankrupt or insolvent, or any person claiming to be such executor, administrator, next of kin, creditor, or assignee, or to be entitled to any money deposited in such savings bank, then and in every such case the matter in dispute shall be referred in writing to the barrister-at-law appointed under the said hereby repealed acts or this act, who shall have power to proceed ex parte on notice in writing to the said trustees or managers left or sent through the post-office by the said barrister to the office of the said savings bank, and whatever award, order, or determination shall be made by the said barrister shall be binding and conclusive on all parties, and shall be final to all intents and purposes, without any appeal.

49. On any such reference it shall be lawful for the said barrister and he is hereby authorised to inspect any book or books belonging to the said savings bank relating to the matter in dispute, and to administer an oath to any witness appearing before him, or to take the affirmation in cases where affirmation is allowed by law instead of oath; and if upon such oath or affirmation any person making the same shall wilfully and corruptly give any false evidence, every person so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of perjury, and shall be prosecuted and punished accordingly.

50. No power, warrant, or letter of attorney granted to or to be granted by any person or persons, or trustee or trustees of any savings bank as aforesaid, nor any power, warrant, or letter of attorney given by any depositor or depositors in the funds of any such savings bank to any other person or persons authorising him, her, or them to make any deposit or deposits of any sum or sums of money in the said funds on behalf of the said depositor or depositors, or to sign any document or instrument required by the rules or regulations of such savings bank to be signed on making such deposits, or to receive back any sum or sums of money deposited in the said funds, or the dividends or interest arising therefrom, nor any receipt nor any entry in any book or receipt for money deposited in the funds of any such savings bank, nor for any money received by any depositor, his or her executors or administrators, assigns, or attorneys, from the funds of such savings bank, nor any draft or order, nor any appointment of any agent or agents, nor any certificate or other instrument for the revocation of any such appointment, nor any surety-bond, nor any submission to, or award, order, or determination of the said barrister, nor any other instrument or document whatever required or authorised to be given, issued, signed, made, or produced in pursuance of this act, shall be subject or liable to or charged with any stamp duty or duties whatsoever.

51. The trustees of each savings bank in Ireland shall, as soon as conveniently may be after the passing of this act, and from time to time in case of a vacancy, appoint an auditor or auditors to audit the accounts of the said savings bank, as well as to examine and inspect the books of the several depositors, and the said trustees shall, immediately after such appointment, transmit the signature, name, and address of the said auditor or auditors to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt: and the trustees of every such savings bank in Ireland shall cause the annual and other statements required to be transmitted under this act to be certified and verified by the auditor or auditors appointed by the said trustees, in addition to the attestation by trustees and managers, as also required by this act, and shall also cause a certificate from the said auditor or auditors, as to the result of his or their examination of such of the depositors books as may have been produced to him or them for examination, to be transmitted with the said annual statement to the said commissioners: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the trustees of any such savings bank in Ireland to agree with the trustees of any other such savings bank or banks in Ireland as to the appointment of a common auditor or auditors, and the auditor or auditors so appointed for all the said banks shall be deemed and taken, as soon as the signature, name, and address shall have been transmitted by each such bank to the said commissioners, to be the auditor or auditors of each such bank.

52. Every depositor in every savings banks in Ireland on his first deposit shall be furnished with a deposit book, in which shall be printed at length a copy of the certified rules of the savings bank in which he shall make such deposit; and a duplicate copy of the certified rules, and of every alteration and amendment thereof, and a duplicate copy of every annual statement or account required by and furnished to the said commissioners, signed by two trustees or managers of any such savings bank, shall be from time to time exhibited in the office of such savings bank, and shall be open to the inspection of every depositor or person intending to be such.

53. The rules of every savings bank in Ireland shall specify a number of days, not less than two in every year, ending on the 20th November, in which the book of each depositor shall be produced at the office of the said savings bank for the purpose of being inspected, examined, and verified with the books of the savings bank by the auditor or auditors.

54. If it shall appear to the satisfaction of the said commissioners that the clauses of this act, or the orders, directions, and regulations of the said commissioners signified by the comptroller-general to the trustees of any savings bank in Ireland, have not been complied with by the trustees or managers of any savings bank in Ireland, it shall and may be lawful for the said commissioners, if they shall so think fit, to close the account of the said savings bank, and to discontinue the keeping any further account with the trustees thereof, and to direct that no further sum shall be received at the Bank of Ireland from the trustees of such savings bank to the account of the commissioners until such time as such commissioners shall think proper: provided always, that the said commissioners may re-open and allow the growing interest of such accounts during the time of such discontinuance, and authorise the receipt of money at the Bank of Ireland, whenever the said commissioners shall think fit so to do, upon such trustees complying with the directions of such commissioners; and the said commissioners shall forthwith publish a notification of such account being closed, or of the same being re-opened, in the Dublin Gazette, and also in some newspaper published in the county in which the said savings bank shall be established.

55. For the more effectually ascertaining from time to time the actual and progressive state of the several savings banks inrolled under the provisions of this act, the trustees and managers of every such savings bank shall annually cause a general statement of the funds of such savings bank, invested in the Bank of England or the Bank of Ireland, in the names of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, to be prepared up to the 20th November in each year, shewing the balance or principal sum due to all the depositors collectively in such savings bank, and a statement of the expenses incurred, and stating in whose hands such balances shall then be remaining; and every such annual statement shall be attested by two managers or two trustees, or by one manager and one trustee, of such savings bank, and every such annual statement shall be countersigned by the secretary or actuary of such savings bank, and all such annual statements shall be transmitted to the office of the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt in London or Dublin (as the case may be) within nine weeks after the 20th November in each year; and in case the trustees of any such savings bank shall neglect or refuse to make out and transmit such accounts as aforesaid, or in case any such trustees shall at any time neglect or refuse to obey any orders or directions given by the said commissioners, or through their officer, pursuant to the directions of this act, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to close the account of the trustees of such savings bank, and to discontinue the keeping any further account with the trustees of such savings bank, and to direct that no further sum shall be received at the Bank of England, or at the Bank of Ireland, from the trustees of such savings bank, to the account of the said commissioners, until such time as such commissioners shall think fit: provided always, that it may be lawful for the said commissioners to re-open such account, and to allow the growing interest of such account during the time of such discontinuance, and to authorise the receipt of money at the Bank of England or Ireland, whenever such commissioners shall think fit to do so, upon such trustees complying with the directions of such commissioners or their officer.

56. If the annual statements directed by this act to be prepared and transmitted by the trustees of a savings bank, shall not be prepared and transmitted to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt within the time limited by this act, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, or for the comptroller-general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners, and they and he are and is hereby severally required, forthwith to publish in the London Gazette, and also in any newspapers published in the county in which the savings bank is established, the name of every such savings bank so neglecting or making default in transmitting such annual statement as aforesaid, in such form and words for the information of the depositors, and under such regulations, as the said commissioners or the said comptroller-general or assistant comptroller shall from time to time think fit.

57. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, or the comptroller-general or assistant comptroller acting under the said commissioners, if they or he shall think fit, to require from time to time, of and from the trustees and managers of any savings bank, a detailed statement of all the expenses whatever incurred by the said trustees and managers in the management or otherwise of the said savings bank.

58. Whenever it shall appear, in any annual statement, that any sum of money or of belonging to a savings bank is in the hands of any treasurer or other person, the said annual statement shall be accompanied with a certificate, signed by such treasurer or other person, that the sum of money therein mentioned is in his possession.

59. The trustees and managers of every such savings bank shall cause a duplicate of every such annual statement, accompanied by a list of the trustees and managers of such institution for the time being, attested and countersigned as aforesaid, to be publicly affixed and exhibited in some conspicuous part of the office or place where the deposits of such savings bank are usually received, for the information of all parties making deposits therein; and every such duplicate shall from time to time remain so affixed and exhibited until the ensuing annual statement shall, in like manner, be affixed and exhibited as aforesaid; and every depositor shall be entitled to receive from the said savings bank a printed copy of such annual statement on payment of one penny.

60. From and after the passing of this act, the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt shall, at the close of every year ending on the 20th November, make to the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury the following accounts:—First, of the gross amount of all sums received and credited, including interest, and of all sums paid, including interest, from the 6th August, 1817, up to such 20th November, by the said commissioners, on account of the trustees of the several savings banks in Great Britain and Ireland, and also on account of any friendly societies in Great Britain respectively, and of the gross amount of all sums, stock, funds, annuities, and Exchequer bills, and other securities standing in the names of such commissioners on the 20th November, on account of any such savings banks or friendly societies respectively, and the sums paid for the purchase of such stocks, funds, Exchequer bills, or other securities, and the gross amount of the interest or dividends received thereon by the said commissioners, and the gross amount of the interest paid by such commissioners, up to such 20th November, on all receipts issued to the trustees of such savings banks or friendly societies in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, and also an account of all expenses incurred by the said commissioners for salaries of clerks, or other incidental charges during the preceding year; secondly, an account of the whole of the several transactions set forth in detail which shall have taken place during the course of the previous year, in the investment of all monies coming into their hands for savings banks and friendly societies, and of the variations, if any, which have taken place during such year in the securities held by the said commissioners for those institutions; and, thirdly, an account, showing the aggregate amount of the liabilities of the Government to the trustees of savings banks and friendly societies respectively, and the nature, amount, and value of the securities (taken at the price of the day) held by the said commissioners to meet the same, stating the amount of surplus or deficiency, as the case may be, thereon; distinguishing in each of such accounts hereby required to be rendered as aforesaid the funds of savings banks from the funds of friendly societies; and copies of all such accounts shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament, not later than the 15th February, if Parliament shall be then sitting, and if not then sitting then within ten days after the next re-assembling of Parliament.

61. In every such account so to be made to the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury as hereinbefore is provided, a distinct account shall be shown of the aggregate amount of the separate surplus funds of all savings banks made up to such 20th November, and of the gross amount of all sums transferred to or paid out of such surplus fund in the course of the previous year, and of the balance of such account then remaining in the hands of the said commissioners.

62. For the purpose of rendering the accounts of the several savings banks in Great Britain and Ireland uniform and correspondent with the accounts of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, the interest payable to the depositors in such savings banks in Great Britain and Ireland shall, from and after the 20th November, 1863, be computed half-yearly to the 20th May and the 20th November, or yearly to the 20th November in each year, as the case may be, and to no other periods.

63. It shall be lawful for the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, if they shall so think fit, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, to pay into the Bank of England from time to time any sum or sums of money to be placed to their credit in account with the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland on account of the fund for the banks for savings, under such regulations as shall be agreed upon from time to time between the said commissioners and the said Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, and all sums of money so placed to the said commissioners credit as aforesaid shall be carried to the account of the said commissioners by the cashiers of the said Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, standing in the books of the said bank under the title of "The Funds for the Banks for Savings," and shall be subject and shall be applied to the several purposes hereinbefore mentioned, as if every such sum and sums of money had been originally paid into the Bank of Ireland to the said account under the provisions of this act.

64. All receipts, orders, certificates, indorsements, accounts, returns, or instruments, or other matters or things whatsoever which shall be required for carrying into execution this act, shall be made in such form and manner, and containing such particulars, and under such regulations as shall from time to time be directed or required or approved of by the said commissioners or their officer or officers.

65. This act shall be a full and sufficient indemnity and discharge to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England and Bank of Ireland respectively, and their officers, for all things to be done or required or permitted to be done pursuant to this act.

66. It shall be lawful for the said Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and they are hereby authorised and empowered to appoint a barrister-at-law, and employ such and so many of the clerks and other officers as shall be necessary for carrying into execution the purposes of this act, and it shall be lawful for the Lord High Treasurer or the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, and he or they is or are hereby authorised and empowered, to settle and appoint such allowances as shall be proper for the services, pains, and labour of such clerks or other persons to be appointed and employed by the said commissioners in manner and for the purposes aforesaid, and out of the fund upon which the establishment of the said commissioners is chargeable by any act now in force to pay and discharge all such allowances and all other incidental charges which shall necessarily attend the execution of this act in such manner as to them shall seem just and reasonable.

67. This act shall, except as hereinafter is excepted, extend to all savings banks established or hereafter to be established in England, Scotland, or Ireland, and Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, and Isle of Man.

68. This act shall not be held to repeal any of the now existing statutes relating to savings banks in so far as relates to post-office savings banks established or to be established under the 24 Vict. c. 14, nor to repeal any of the powers and authorities now vested by those acts in the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt in regard to the control, management, investment, conversion, and regulation of the funds remitted by the trustees of savings banks or by the trustees of friendly societies to the said commissioners.

CAP. LXXXIX.

An Act for the further Amendment of the Law relating to the Removal of poor Persons, Natives of Ireland, from England. [28th July, 1863.]

- Sect. 1. So much of sect. 4 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 76, as authorises conveyances, other than in warrant, repealed.
2. Sect. 3 of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 117, extended to Ireland.
3. Sect. 4 of the same act repealed.
4. Penalty imposed upon wilful desertion of pauper on the journey.
5. Penalty for violating sect. 6 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 76.
6. New forms of warrant supplied.
7. Institution of preliminary inquiry and appeal.

Whereas it is expedient that the law for the removal of poor persons, natives of Ireland, from England, should be amended: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. That so much of the fourth clause of the act of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 76, as authorises the conveyance of any poor person to any other place than that mentioned in the warrant of removal, shall, at the expiration of one month from the date hereof, be repealed.

2. Sect. 3 of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 117, shall be deemed to have applied and to apply to Ireland as well as to England.

3. Sect. 4 of the same act is hereby repealed.

4. Any person being employed in the execution of a warrant, duly issued under the authority of the said acts, or either of them, who shall wilfully desert any person mentioned therein, before he or she shall have been conveyed to the place of destination, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and upon conviction thereof shall be liable to a fine not exceeding 10*l.*, and, in default of payment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

5. Any person guilty of violating the provision contained in the 6th section of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 76, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, to be recovered on a summary conviction before two justices or a police or stipendiary magistrate, and the offence shall be deemed to have been committed at the port where the poor person shall be landed.

6. Instead of the forms set forth in the Schedule (C.) an-nexed to the said act of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 117, the forms contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, or to the like effect, shall be sufficient in regard to poor persons removed to Ireland, with such changes in the names and descriptions of persons and places as the circumstances of the case may render necessary; and except where this act makes any alteration it shall be deemed to be incorporated with acts herein referred to.

7. If the board of guardians of any union in Ireland think themselves aggrieved by the removal of any poor person, and if they forward to the Poor-law Commissioners for Ireland a statement of the grounds for concluding that such poor person is legally settled in any parish or township in England, or was not in law liable to be removed to Ireland, and if such board of guardians, or any person on their behalf, shall agree to pay all costs which may be incurred in any necessary preliminary inquiry, and in the appeal against the warrant for the removal of such poor person, such commissioners, if satisfied that it will be expedient to do so, may appoint some person to make a preliminary inquiry into the circumstances attending such removal, and after such inquiry may, if they think fit, appeal on behalf of the guardians so aggrieved to the court of quarter sessions held for the county or borough within which the parish or township from which such removal was made is situate, at any time within six months after such removal was completed; and such commissioners shall, at least twenty-one days before the holding of such sessions, send by post to the guardians or overseers on whose application such warrant was obtained notice in writing purporting to be signed by their secretary or chief clerk of their intention to appeal against such warrant, containing a statement in writing of the grounds of such appeal, and such court of quarter sessions shall hear and determine such appeal; and if the warrant of removal be reversed or declared illegal by such court, the guardians or overseers on whose application the same was obtained shall pay the costs and expenses incurred by or on account of such board of guardians, both for the preliminary inquiry and the appeal, and for the maintenance of such poor person, and for conveying such person back to the parish or township in England from which the removal was made; and if such guardians or overseers neglect or refuse to pay such costs and expenses within seven days after demand thereof, the guardians on whose behalf such appeal was made, or any person authorised by them, may recover the same as a debt in a court of law in England: provided always, that the said guardians or overseers may, at any time after such notice of appeal, send by post notice in writing under the hands of any two or more of them to the said commissioners that they abandon such warrant, and thereupon such warrant shall be of no effect; and such guardians or overseers shall pay to the guardians on whose behalf such notice of appeal was given, or to some person authorised by them, the expenses incurred by them or on their account by reason of such warrant, and of the preliminary inquiry, and of any proceedings consequent thereon, and the actual expenses and charges of maintaining such poor person, and of conveying such poor person back to such parish or township, and if they do not pay the same within seven days after demand the same may be recovered as a debt in a court of law in England: provided also, that if on the hearing of the appeal judgment shall be given against the appellants, the respondents shall be entitled to recover the costs which they have incurred in and about the appeal from such appellants.

3. Interpretation of terms.

4. Act to extend to Ireland only.

5. Registrar-general to furnish to boards of guardians notices setting forth acts required to be done under this act.

6. Register books to be provided.

7. Registrars, under Registration of Births, &c. Act, to be registrars for purposes of this act.

8. Lord-lieutenant, or registrar-general with his approbation, may alter boundaries of districts.

9. Registrar of marriages may, subject to approval of registrar-general, appoint a deputy.

10. Registrars under said act to act for purposes of this act.

11. Provision for marriages not within provisions of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81.

12. Persons unable to write may sign by making a cross.

13. Particulars of certificates to be entered in register books. Correction of erroneous entries.

14. Certified copies of entries of marriages to be sent quarterly, and the register books, when filled, to the superintendent registrar.

15. Superintendent registrars to send certified copies of registers of marriages to registrar-general.

16. Abstract of registers to be laid annually before Parliament.

17. Indexes to be kept at general register office. Searches allowed, and certified copies given.
18. Indexes to be made at every superintendent registrar's office, and persons allowed to search them.
19. Persons entitled to register books.
20. Superintendent registrars to be paid for the certified copies sent to general register office.
21. Registrars to make out an account of number of marriages four times yearly.
22. Persons making false statements for entry on register to be subject to penalties for perjury.
23. Secls. 36 and 37 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, incorporated with act.
24. Penalty for neglect of registrar to register marriages, &c.
25. Penalty for omission to deliver registers to superintendent registrar or registrar-general.
26. Penalties how recoverable.
27. Not to affect law of marriage in Ireland.

Whereas it is expedient that a system of registration of such marriages as are not within the provisions of an act of the session holden in the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, should be established and maintained in Ireland: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sec. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Registration of Marriages (Ireland) Act, 1863."

2. This act shall commence and take effect from and after the 1st January, 1864.

3. The following words and expressions in this act shall have the meanings hereby assigned to them; that is to say—

"Lord-lieutenant" shall mean the lord-lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland:

"General search" shall mean a search during any number of successive days, not exceeding six, without stating the object of search:

"Particular search" shall mean a search over any period not exceeding five years for any given register of marriages.

4. This act shall extend to Ireland only.

5. The registrar-general of marriages appointed under the provisions of the said first-recited act shall, in sufficient time before the 31st December, 1863, furnish to the guardians of every union printed notices, which the said guardians shall, on or before the said 31st December, cause to be fixed or placed on the outside of the several church and chapel doors, or other public and conspicuous buildings or places within their respective unions, and which said notices shall specify the several acts required to be done for the purpose of registering any marriage under the provisions of this act.

6. The registrar-general shall cause to be provided such number of register books and forms as shall be necessary to the execution of this act; and the said register books shall be of durable materials, and in them shall be printed on each side of every leaf the heads of information herein required to be known and registered in respect of marriages, and every page of each of such books shall be numbered progressively from the beginning to the end of the book, beginning with number one, and every place of entry shall be also numbered progressively from the beginning to the end of the book, beginning with number one, and every entry shall be divided from the following entry by a printed line; and the registrar-general shall furnish for the use of the registrars a sufficient number of register books of marriages and such other forms as may from time to time be required for the purposes of this act.

7. The several superintendent registrars and registrars districts which shall from time to time be made under the provisions of the Registration of Births and Deaths (Ireland) Act shall be the superintendent registrars and registrars districts for the purposes of this act.

8. The lord-lieutenant, or the registrar-general with his approbation, shall have power, from time to time as may be deemed expedient, to alter the boundaries of the districts formed under the provisions of the said recited act passed in the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, and to form new districts, and, in the event of any new district being so formed, to appoint fit persons to be registrars for such districts; and every such registrar shall hold his office during the pleasure of the registrar-general.

9. Every registrar of marriages, appointed under the said recited act or this act, shall have the power, subject to the approval of the registrar-general, to appoint, by writing under his hand, a fit person to act as his deputy in case of the illness or absence of such registrar; and every such deputy registrar while so acting shall have all the powers and duties, and be subject to all the provisions and penalties, declared by the said recited act and this act concerning registrars of marriages, and, in case of the death of the registrar, shall act as registrar until another be appointed, and every registrar shall be civilly responsible for the acts and omissions of his deputy.

10. The several superintendent registrars and registrars of the several districts, and their respective deputies, appointed from time to time, and acting under the provisions of the said last-recited act, shall from time to time be the superintendent registrars and registrars of their respective districts for the purposes of this act, if they think fit to accept such office; and in the event of their refusal to act, the guardians of the union shall appoint a person, with such qualifications as the registrar-general may declare to be necessary, to be the superintendent registrar or registrar under this act; and every such superintendent registrar and registrar shall hold his office during the pleasure of the registrar-general.

11. In all cases of marriages which may be legally solemnised in Ireland, and which do not come within the provisions of the said act of the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 81, or any act amending the same, the parties about to contract any such marriage shall produce to the clergyman celebrating the marriage a certificate, according to the Form (A.) in the schedule hereunto annexed, which certificate shall be procured by the parties contracting the marriage, previous to its solemnisation, from the registrar of the district appointed under this act within which such marriage is intended to be solemnised, who shall be bound, as far as possible, without fee or reward, to fill up the said schedule, and it shall be signed by the parties contracting the marriage, and by the witnesses present thereat, not being less than two, and also by the said clergyman; and the parties contracting the marriage shall, within three days thereafter, either deliver or send by post such certificate to the registrar of marriages appointed under this act for the district wherein the marriage was solemnised; and the husband shall, in case of failure so to deliver or send such certificate, be liable in a penalty not exceeding 10*l.*, to be recovered as hereinafter provided.

12. In case of the inability to write of any person whose signature is required or necessary under this act, it shall be lawful for such person to make such signature by making a cross or other mark, which shall be made in the presence of the clergyman or two witnesses, who shall attest the same, and such mark shall be in all respects as binding and effectual as the signature of such person, if capable of writing, would have been.

13. Every registrar, on receipt of any such certificate, shall forthwith enter the particulars thereof in the register book: provided always, that if any error shall be discovered to have been committed in the entry of marriage in any register, the person discovering the same shall forthwith give information thereof to the justice or justices at the petty sessions of the district within which such marriage shall have been solemnised, or, if within the Dublin metropolitan police district, to a divisional justice or justices within the said district; and it shall be lawful for the said justice or justices, and they are hereby authorised and required, thereupon, or upon otherwise coming to the knowledge of such erroneous entry, to summon before them the person who made, and any person concerned in making, such erroneous entry, or having any knowledge regarding the same, and also any person interested in the effect of such erroneous entry, and to examine all such persons on oath; and if the said justice or justices shall be satisfied that any error has been committed in any such entry, such justice or justices shall, by authority in writing under his or their hands, direct the registrar to correct the erroneous entry; and it shall be lawful for the registrar, and he is hereby required, thereupon to correct the erroneous entry, according to the truth of the case, by entry in the margin, without any alteration of the original entry; and such marginal entry shall contain a reference to the deposition upon which the said justice or justices directed the correction to be made, and shall be dated on the day on which it is made, and signed by the parties applying for the correction and by the registrar; and in every case the registrar shall make the like alteration in the certified copy of the register book to be made by him as hereinafter provided; provided that in case such certified copy shall have been already made, he shall make and deliver, in like manner, a separate certified copy of the original erroneous entry, and of the marginal correction therein made.

Returns.

14. In the months of April, July, October, and January, on such days as shall from time to time be appointed by the registrar-general, every registrar shall make and deliver to the superintendent registrar of his district, on durable materials, a true copy, certified by him under his hand, according to the Form (B.) in the schedule to this act annexed, of all the entries of marriages made during the quarter of a year last preceding the first day of each of the several months hereinbefore mentioned respectively in the register books kept by him, the first of such certified copies to be given in the month of April, 1884, and the superintendent registrar shall examine the same, and, if found to be correct, shall certify the same under his hand to be a true copy; if there shall have been no marriages registered since the delivery of the last certificate, the registrar shall certify the fact, and such certificate shall be delivered to the superintendent registrar as aforesaid, and be countersigned by him: the registrar shall keep safely the register book furnished to him, as hereinbefore mentioned, until it shall be filled, and shall then deliver it to the superintendent registrar, to be kept by him with the records of his office.

15. Every superintendent registrar shall four times in every year, on such days as shall be named for the purpose by the registrar-general, send to the registrar-general all the certified copies of the registers of marriages which he shall have received from the registrars of marriages as aforesaid for the quarter of a year last preceding the first day of each of the several months hereinbefore mentioned respectively in Form (B.) in the schedule to this act annexed: and the registrar-general, if it shall appear, by interruption of the regular progression of numbers or otherwise, that the copy of any part of any book has not been duly delivered to him, shall procure, as far as possible, consistently with the provisions of this act, that the same may be remedied and supplied. The certified copies so sent to the general register office shall be thereafter kept in the said office in such order and manner as the registrar-general, under the direction of the lord-lieutenant, shall think fit, so that the same may be most readily seen and examined.

16. The registrar-general shall once in every year transmit to the lord-lieutenant a general abstract of the numbers of marriages registered during the foregoing year, in such form and at such date as the lord-lieutenant shall from time to time prescribe; and every such annual general abstract shall be laid before Parliament within one month after receipt thereof, or, if Parliament shall not be then sitting, within one month after the commencement of the next session.

17. The registrar-general shall cause indexes of all the registers herein mentioned to be made and kept in the general register office; and every person shall be entitled to search the said indexes between the hours of ten in the morning and four in the afternoon of every day, except Sundays, Christmas-day, and Good Friday, and to have a certified copy of any entry in the said registers; and for every general search of the said indexes the sum of 20s., and for every particular search the sum of 1s., and for every such certified copy the sum of 2s. 6d., shall be paid to the registrar-general or such other officer as shall be appointed to receive such fees on his account, in addition to the stamp duty of 1d. imposed by an act passed in the 23 Vict. c. 15.

18. Every superintendent registrar shall cause indexes of the register books in his office to be made and kept with the other records of his office. Every person shall be entitled, on such days and at such reasonable hours as shall be directed by the registrar-general, to search the said indexes, and to have a certified copy of any entry or entries in the said register books, under the hand and seal of the superintendent registrar, on payment of the fees hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, for every general search the sum of 5s., and for every particular search the sum of 1s., and for every certified copy the sum of 2s. 6d., in addition to the stamp duty of 1d. imposed by an act passed in the 23 Vict. c. 15.

19. Every person shall be entitled, on such days and at such reasonable hours as shall be directed by the registrar-general, to search such entries in the register books in the custody of the registrars as shall not have been included in the last preceding return made by such registrar to his superintendent registrar, and to have a certified copy of any such entry or entries, under the hand and seal of the registrar, on payment of the fees hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, for every such search the sum of 6d., and for every certified copy the sum of 2s. 6d., in addition to the stamp duty of 1d. imposed by an act passed in the 23 Vict. c. 15.

Fees.

20. Every superintendent registrar shall make out an account four times in every year, on such days and for such periods as shall from time to time be appointed by the registrar-general, of the number of entries in such certified copies so sent by him to the registrar-general, as provided by this act, and shall send the said account to the registrar-general. If, on examination and comparison with the certified copies of the registers or certificates received by the registrar-general, such account shall be found correct, the superintendent registrar shall be entitled to receive 2d. from the registrar-general for every entry in such certified copies of registers of marriages, which shall be charged by the registrar-general to the general expenses of his office.

21. Every registrar shall make out an account four times in each year, on such days and for such periods as shall from time to time be appointed by the registrar-general, of the number of marriages which he shall have registered in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and the superintendent registrar shall verify and sign the same. The guardians of the union in which he shall be registrar, on production of the said account, so verified and signed, shall pay to the said registrar, out of the monies in their hands or power as such guardians, at the rate of 6d. for every entry of marriage included in such account, and the same shall be charged to the union at large, and such guardians shall be and they are hereby empowered to levy off the union at large such sums so paid by them, and such sums shall be included in the rates which such guardians are by law empowered to levy and raise.

22. Every person who shall wilfully make or cause to be made, for the purpose of being inserted in any register of marriages, any false statement touching any of the particulars herein required to be known and registered, shall be subject to the same pains and penalties as if he were guilty of perjury.

23. The 36th and 37th sections of an act passed in the 24 & 25 Vict. [c. 98], intitled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Statute Law of England and Ireland relating to indictable Offences by Forgery," shall be incorporated with and form part of this act.

24. Every registrar who shall refuse or without reasonable cause omit to fill up the certificate of marriage or register any marriage of which he shall have received a certificate, and every person having the custody of any register book or any part thereof who shall carelessly lose or injure the same, or carelessly allow the same to be injured whilst in his keeping, shall forfeit a sum not exceeding 10l. for every such offence.

25. Every person who under the provisions of this act is required to deliver the registers of marriages or copies of such registers to any superintendent registrar or to the registrar-general, and who, after duly being required to deliver such register or copies as aforesaid, shall refuse or during one calendar month neglect so to do, shall be liable for every such offence to forfeit a sum not exceeding 10l.

26. Any penalty recoverable under the provisions of this act shall be recoverable in a summary way, with respect to the police district of Dublin metropolis, subject and according to the provisions of any act regulating the powers and duties of justices of the peace for such district, or of the police of such district, and, with respect to other parts of Ireland, before a justice or justices of the peace sitting in petty sessions, subject and according to the provisions of the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851 [14 & 15 Vict. c. 93], and any act amending the same.

27. Nothing in this act contained shall affect the law of marriage in Ireland.

Whereas the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, respectively, were passed in order to comprise in one general act such provisions relating to railways in England or Ireland, or in Scotland respectively, as were at the times of the passing of those acts usually introduced into acts of Parliament authorising the construction of railways:

And whereas sundry provisions of the like nature, but not comprised in the said general acts respectively, are now frequently introduced into acts of Parliament relating to railways, and it is expedient to comprise such last-mentioned provisions also in one general act, such act to be applicable to England or Ireland, or to Scotland, as the case may require, and that as well for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of repeating such provisions in special acts relating to railways, as for insuring greater uniformity in the provisions themselves: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Railways Clauses Act, 1863."

2. This act shall be deemed to be divided into five parts, as follows:—

- Part I relating to construction of a railway;
- Part II relating to extension of time;
- Part III relating to working agreements;
- Part IV relating to steam vessels;
- Part V relating to amalgamation.

PART I.—CONSTRUCTION OF A RAILWAY.

3. This part of this act shall apply to the railway authorised to be constructed by any special act hereafter passed and incorporating this part of this act.

In this part of this act—

All terms used have the same meanings as the same terms have when used in the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, respectively:

The term "tidal river" means any part of the river within the flow and ebb of the tide at ordinary spring tides:

The term "tidal water" means any part of the sea or any part of a river within the flow and ebb of the tide at ordinary spring tides;

The term "tidal lands" means such parts of the bed, shore, or banks of a tidal water as are covered and uncovered by the flow and ebb of the tide at ordinary spring tides.

The provisions respecting the recovery of penalties contained in the said Railways Clauses Consolidation Acts respectively, as the case may require, shall be incorporated with this part of this act.

Alteration of Engineering Works.

4. Notwithstanding anything in the said Railways Clauses Consolidation Acts respectively contained, the company, in the construction of the railway, may deviate from the line or level of any arch, tunnel, or viaduct, described on the deposited plans or sections, so as the deviation be made within the limits of deviation shewn on those plans, and subject to the limitations contained in sects. 11, 12, and 15 of those acts respectively, and so as the nature of the work described be not altered, and may also substitute any engineering work not shewn on the deposited plans or sections, for an arch, tunnel, or viaduct, as shewn thereon; provided that every such substitution be authorised by a certificate of the Board of Trade; and the Board of Trade may grant such certificate in case it appears to them, on due inquiry, that the company has acted in the matter with good faith, and that the owners, lessees, and occupiers of the lands in which the substitution is intended to be made consent thereto, and also that the safety and convenience of the public will not be diminished thereby.

Provided that nothing in the present section shall affect any power given to the company or to the Board of Trade by sects. 11, 12, 14, or 15 of the last-mentioned acts respectively.

Level Crossings.

5. Where the company is authorised by the special act to carry the railway across a turnpike road or public carriage road on a level, it shall not be lawful for the company in shunting trains to pass any train over the level crossing, or at any time to allow any train, engine, carriage, or truck to stand across the same.

6. For the greater convenience and security of the public, the company shall erect and permanently maintain a lodge at the point where the railway crosses on the level the turnpike road or public carriage road; and the company shall be subject to and shall abide by all such regulations with regard to the crossing thereof on the level, or with regard to the speed at which trains may pass the level crossing, as may from time to time be made by the Board of Trade.

If the company fails to erect or to maintain such lodge, or to appoint or keep a proper person to watch or superintend the level crossing, or to observe or abide by any such regulation as aforesaid, they shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*, and also to a penalty of 10*l.* for every day during which the offence continues after the penalty of 20*l.* is incurred.

7. The Board of Trade may, if it appears to them necessary for the public safety, at any time after the passing of the special act, require the company, within such time as the Board of Trade directs, and at the expense of the company, to carry the turnpike road or public carriage road either under or over the railway by means of a bridge or arch, instead of crossing the same on the level, or to execute such other works as, under the circumstances of the case, may appear to the Board of Trade best adapted for removing or diminishing the danger arising from the level crossing.

Where the road is so carried either under or over the railway, it shall not be necessary for the company to erect or maintain a lodge at the point where the road is crossed, or to appoint a person to watch or superintend the crossing thereat, nor shall they be liable to any penalty for failure so to do.

8. If the Board of Trade certifies that the public safety requires that additional lands be taken by the company for the purpose of the work directed by the Board of Trade to be executed, the company may, subject to the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, or the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, as the case may require, enter upon, take, and use, all or any part of the lands specified in the certificate of the Board of Trade as being necessary for the purpose of the work; and the Board of Trade, before issuing the certificate, shall cause at least three months' notice to be given to any person who may be entitled to claim under the last-mentioned acts, or otherwise, compensation in respect of the taking of such lands or in respect of such work.

Junctions.

9. Where the company is authorised by the special act to make a junction between the railway and any other railway, then and in every such case all interferences with the works of the other railway, necessary or convenient for effecting the junction, shall be made under the superintendence and to the reasonable satisfaction of the engineer for the time being of the company or person to whom the other railway belongs; and in case of any difference arising as to the mode of effecting the junction, the same shall be determined by a referee to be appointed by the Board of Trade, on the application of either party, at the cost of the company making the junction.

10. With respect to any lands belonging to the company or person to whom the other railway belongs, which the company are by the special act authorised to use, enter upon, or interfere with, for the purposes of the junction, the company shall not, except by agreement, or unless otherwise provided in the special act, purchase and take the same, but the company may purchase and take, and such other railway company or person may and shall sell and grant accordingly, an easement or right of using the same for the purposes of the junction.

11. Nothing relative to the junction in this act contained shall be deemed to authorise the company, for the purposes of the junction, to take or enter upon any lands belonging to the company or person to whom the other railway belongs, or to alter or interfere with any railway, or any of the works thereof, further or otherwise than is necessary for making the junction and inter-communication between the railways, as shewn on the deposited plans and sections of the railway to which the special act relates, without the previous consent in writing, in every instance, of such other railway company or such person.

12. The company or person with whose railway the junction is made may from time to time erect such signals and conveniences incident to the junction, either on their or his own lands, or on the lands of the company making the junction, and may from time to time appoint and remove such watchmen, switchmen, or other persons, as may be necessary for the prevention of danger to, or interference with, the traffic at and near the junction. The working and management of such signals and conveniences, wherever situate, shall be under the exclusive regulation of the company or person with whose railway the junction is made; and all the expenses of erecting and maintaining those signals and conveniences, and of employing those watchmen, switchmen, and other persons, and all incidental current expenses, shall, at the end of every half-year, be repaid by the company making the junction, and in default thereof may be recovered from them in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Protection of Navigation.

13. Where the company is authorised by the special act to construct, alter or extend any work on, in, over, through, or across tidal lands or a tidal water, the company shall, on or near the work, during the whole time of the constructing, altering, or extending thereof, exhibit and keep burning at their own expense, every night from sunset to sunrise, such lights (if any) as the Board of Trade from time to time requires or approves; and (notwithstanding the enactments for the time being in force respecting lighthouses) shall also, on or near the work, when completed, always maintain, exhibit, and keep burning at their own expense, every night from sunset to sunrise, such lights (if any) for the guidance of ships as the Board of Trade from time to time requires or approves.

If the company fails to comply, in any respect, with the provisions of the present section, they shall, for each night in which they so fail, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 50*l*.

14. Where the company is authorised or required by the special act to construct a bridge over a navigable tidal water, and the special act does not make express provision respecting the span or spans thereof, then the company shall construct the same with a span or spans of such headway and waterway, and with such opening span or spans (if any), and according to such plan, as the Board of Trade directs or approves.

15. Where the company constructs a bridge with an opening span, it shall not be lawful for the company to detain any vessel, barge, or boat, at the bridge, for a longer time than may be necessary for admitting a carriage or engine traversing the railway and approaching the bridge to cross the bridge, and for opening the bridge to admit the vessel, barge, or boat to pass; and the company shall be subject to, and shall abide by, such regulations with regard to the user of the bridge, as may from time to time be made by the Board of Trade.

If the company detains a vessel, barge, or boat, longer than the time aforesaid, or fails in any respect to abide by any such regulation as aforesaid, they shall, for every such offence, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l*., without prejudice to any remedy against them for any loss or damage sustained by any person.

16. Where the railway cuts off access between the land and a tidal water or tidal lands, then and in every such case the company shall, during the construction of the railway, and from time to time thereafter, make, and shall permanently maintain, and allow to be used by all persons, at all times, free of toll or other charge, all such footways and carriageways over, under, or across the railway, or on a level therewith, as the Board of Trade from time to time directs or approves: provided always, as follows:—

- (1). The company shall not be obliged to make a footway or carriageway over lands, for the use of an owner or occupier who has agreed to receive, and has been paid, compensation for the severance thereof from the tidal water or tidal lands:
- (2). The company shall not be obliged to make, or to allow to be made, a footway or carriageway in such manner as would interfere with the working or using of the railway:
- (3). The expense of the making and maintenance of a footway or carriageway required to be made after the construction of the railway, shall be defrayed by the persons or body interested in the tidal water or tidal lands for whose benefit or convenience the same is required.

Where the footway or carriageway is made across the railway on the level, then the manner of the making and watching of the level crossing shall be subject to the approval of the Board of Trade; and where the level crossing is made after the construction of the railway, then all expenses attending the watching thereof shall be defrayed by the persons or body interested in the tidal water or tidal lands for whose benefit or convenience the same is required.

17. Where the company is authorised by the special act to construct a railway skirting a public navigable tidal river or channel, the company shall not make any deviation of the railway from the continuous centre line thereof marked on the plan deposited by them at the Board of Trade, even within the limits of deviation shown on that plan, in such manner as to diminish the navigable space, without the previous consent of the Board of Trade, or otherwise than in such manner as is expressly authorised by the Board of Trade.

If any deviation is made in contravention of the present section, the Board of Trade may abate and remove the work in the construction whereof the deviation is made, or any part thereof, and restore the site thereof to its former condition, at the expense of the company; and the amount of such expense shall be a debt due from the company to the Crown, and be recoverable accordingly with costs, or the same may be recovered, with costs, as a penalty is recoverable from the company.

18. If a work constructed by the company on, in, over, through, or across tidal lands or a tidal water is abandoned, or suffered to fall into decay, the Board of Trade may abate and remove the work, or any part of it, and restore the site thereof to its former condition, at the expense of the company; and the amount of such expense shall be a debt due from the company to the Crown, and be recoverable accordingly, with costs, or the same may be recovered, with costs, as a penalty is recoverable from the company.

19. If at any time the Board of Trade deems it expedient, for the purposes of the special act, or of this part of this act, to order a survey and examination of a work constructed by the company on, in, over, through, or across tidal lands or tidal water, or of the intended site of any such work, the company shall defray the expense of the survey and examination; and the amount thereof shall be a debt due from the company to the Crown, and be recoverable accordingly, with costs, or the same may be recovered, with costs, as a penalty is recoverable from the company.

PART II.—EXTENSION OF TIME.

20. Where a railway is authorised to be constructed by a special act passed either before or after the passing of this act, and the time limited by the special act for the exercise of powers of compulsory purchase of lands, or of powers for construction of the railway and works, is extended by a special act hereafter passed and incorporating this part of this act,—then and in every such case the justices, arbitrators, umpires, or juries, as the case may be, who award or assess the compensation to be made by the company to the owners or occupiers of, or other persons interested in, lands taken or used for the purposes of the railway and works, or injuriously affected by the construction thereof, shall, in estimating the amount of such compensation, have regard to, and assess compensation for, the additional damage (if any) sustained by those owners, occupiers, or other persons, by reason of the extension of time.

21. The extension of time shall not affect any contract entered into or notice given by the company before the passing of the special act granting the extension, for purchasing, taking, or using any lands which the company was entitled to purchase, take, or use; but every such contract and notice shall be construed and take effect, and the same proceedings may be had thereunder, and all parties thereto shall be entitled to the same rights and remedies in respect thereof, at law and in equity, as if the extension had not been granted.

PART III.—WORKING AGREEMENTS.

22. Where two or more companies are authorised by a special act hereafter passed and incorporating this part of this act, to agree among themselves with respect to all or any of the following purposes: namely,—

The maintenance and management of the railways of the companies respectively, or any one or more of them, or any part thereof respectively, and of the works connected therewith respectively, or any of them;

The use and working of the railways or railway, or of any part thereof, and the conveyance of traffic thereon;

The fixing, collecting, and apportionment of the tolls, rates, charges, receipts, and revenues levied, taken, or arising in respect of traffic;

then and in every such case the authority so to agree, or the agreement when entered into, shall not in any manner affect any of the tolls, rates, or charges which the companies parties thereto are from time to time respectively authorised to demand and receive from any person or from any other company; but all such persons and companies shall, notwithstanding the agreement, be entitled to the use and benefit of the railways of the several companies, parties to the agreement, on the same terms and conditions, and on payment of the same tolls, rates, and charges, as they would be if such authority had: not been given or the agreement had not been entered into.

23. The agreement shall not, save as far as its terms and conditions are authorised by the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, or by the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, as the case may require, or by any other general statute or law from time to time in force with respect to the companies parties to the agreement, have any operation unless and until it is sanctioned by such proportion of the votes of the shareholders and stockholders entitled to vote in that behalf at meetings of the several companies parties thereto, present (personally or by proxy) at a general meeting of each company specially convened for the purpose (in manner hereinafter mentioned), as is prescribed in this special act, and if no proportion is prescribed, then by three-fifths of such votes.

Every such meeting shall be convened by circular addressed to each such shareholder and stockholder, and served in the manner prescribed by the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, or the Companies Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, as the case may require, with respect to notices requiring to be served by the company upon the shareholders, and also by advertisement inserted once at least in each of two consecutive weeks in some newspaper published or circulating in the county prescribed in the special act, and if no county is prescribed, then in the county in which the head office of the company is situate, the last of such advertisements to be published not less than seven days before the meeting.

24. Before the companies enter into the agreement notice of their intention to do so shall be given by them or one of them, in a form to be approved by the Board of Trade, inserted once at least in each of three successive weeks in some newspaper published or circulating in the county prescribed in the special act, and if no county is prescribed, then in the county or one of the counties in which each railway to the maintenance, management, use, or working whereof the proposed agreement relates, or some portion of that railway, is situate; and the notice shall set forth within what time and in what manner any company or person aggrieved by the proposed agreement, and desiring to object thereto, may bring the objection before the Board of Trade.

25. The agreement shall not have any operation until it is approved by the Board of Trade; and the Board of Trade shall not approve the agreement without being satisfied of its having received such sanction of meetings of the respective companies as aforesaid.

26. The companies parties to the agreement may, in accordance therewith, and for the purposes thereof, appoint a joint committee, composed of such number of the directors of each company as the companies think proper, and from time to time may vary and renew the joint committee as occasion requires, and may regulate the proceedings of the joint committee, and may delegate to the joint committee all such of the powers of the companies as the companies think necessary for carrying into effect the purposes of the agreement; and the joint committee shall have and may exercise the powers so from time to time delegated to them in like manner as the same powers might be had and exercised by the companies respectively or their respective directors.

27. At the expiration of the first or any subsequent period of ten years after the making of the agreement, the Board of Trade may, if they are of opinion that the interests of the public are prejudicially affected thereby, cause the same to be revised; and the Board of Trade may require the companies parties thereto to publish such notices of any intended revision of the agreement as the Board of Trade may direct; and the Board of Trade may modify the agreement in such manner as may seem expedient for the protection of the interests of the public, and may declare the modification to be part of the agreement, and the same shall be read and take effect accordingly.

28. Where a company is authorised by a special act hereafter passed, and incorporating this part of this act, to agree with a person being the proprietor of a railway, with respect to all or any of the purposes specified in this part of this act, then and in every such case the provisions of this part of this act shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to the company in relation to such authority, and to the agreement entered into by virtue thereof.

29. For the purposes of this part of this act, any alteration of an agreement by the parties thereto shall be deemed an agreement.

PART IV.—STEAM VESSELS.

30. Where a railway company, incorporated either before or after the passing of this act, is authorised by a special act hereafter passed, and incorporating this part of this act, to build, or buy, or hire, and to use, maintain, and work, or to enter into arrangements for using, maintaining, or working steam vessels for the purpose of carrying on a communication between any towns or ports, and to take tolls in respect of such steam vessels, then and in every such case tolls shall be at all times charged to all persons equally, and after the same rate in respect of passengers conveyed in a like vessel passing between the same places under like circumstances; and no reduction or advance in the tolls shall be made in favour of or against any persons using the steam vessels in consequence of his having travelled, or being about to travel, on the whole or any part of the company's railway, or not having travelled; or not being about to travel, on any part thereof; or in favour of or against any person using the railway in consequence of his having used or being about to use, or his not having used or not being about to use, the steam vessels; and where an aggregate sum is charged by the company for conveyance of a passenger by a steam vessel and on the railway, the ticket shall have the amount of toll charged for conveyance by the steam vessel distinguished from the amount charged for conveyance on the railway.

31. The provisions of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1864, so far as the same are applicable, shall extend to the steam vessels, and to the traffic carried on thereby.

32. The company may from time to time make by-laws in relation to passengers, animals, and goods conveyed in or upon the steam vessels, and as to the embarkation and disembarkation thereof respectively, and may enforce the observance of the same by penalties, in the same manner as they may with respect to passengers, animals, and goods conveyed upon their railway; such by-laws to be sanctioned and authenticated in the same manner as is required by any special or other act with respect to by-laws relating to the company's railway, and being published by being painted on boards, or printed on paper and pasted on boards, and hung up or affixed and contained on some conspicuous part of every steam vessel and landing-place of the company; and such by-laws, and all penalties in respect of the breach thereof, shall be enforced and recovered in the same manner as is provided with respect to by-laws relating to the company's railway, and to penalties in respect of the breach thereof.

33. All tolls and charges for the steam vessels due and payable to the company on any account whatsoever, and all costs, damages, and expenses by the special act directed to be paid in respect of the steam vessels, may be levied by distress; and in England or Ireland any justice, and in Scotland the sheriff, may, on application by or on behalf of the company, issue his warrant accordingly.

The justice or sheriff who issues the warrant of distress may order, that the costs of the proceedings for the recovery of the toll or sum shall be paid by the person liable to pay the toll or sum, and the costs shall be ascertained by the justice or sheriff, and shall be included in the warrant of distress for the recovery of the toll or sum.

34. Any number of names and sums may be included in any warrant of distress or notice obtained or given by the company for any of the purposes of this part of this act, or of the provisions of the special act with respect to the steam vessels, and may be stated either in the body of the warrant or notice, or in a schedule thereto.

35. In every seventh year after the passing of the special act, reckoned from the 1st January next after its passing, the Board of Trade, if they are of opinion that the interests of the public are prejudicially affected by the exercise of the powers of the company relative to steam vessels, may give to the company notice in writing thereof, and of the reasons on which that opinion is founded, and if the company does not, before the beginning of the then next session of Parliament, make provision to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade, for protection of the interests of the public; or if the injury done to the interests of the public is, in the opinion of the Board of Trade, incapable of being remedied by the company, then the Board of Trade, at the beginning of the session of Parliament then next following, shall report to both Houses of Parliament such their opinion, and the reasons on which that opinion is founded, and at the expiration of twelve calendar months after the presentation to the Houses of Parliament of that report, the powers of the company relative to steam vessels, or such of them as are specified in the report, shall, unless Parliament in the meantime otherwise provides, cease to be exercised.

PART V.—AMALGAMATION.

36. This part of this act shall apply where two or more railway companies, respectively incorporated either before or after the passing of this act, are amalgamated by a special act hereafter passed and incorporating this part of this act.

37. For the purposes of this part of this act, companies shall be deemed amalgamated by a special act, in either of the following cases:—

- (1). Where by the special act two or more companies are dissolved, and the members thereof respectively are united into and incorporated as a new company:
- (2). Where by the special act a company or companies is or are dissolved, and the undertaking or undertakings of the dissolved company or companies is or are transferred to another existing company, with or without a change in the name of that company:

And in this part of this act, such special act is referred to as the amalgamating act; the company incorporated or continued by or under the amalgamating act is referred to as the amalgamated company; and the time prescribed in the amalgamating act for the amalgamation taking effect; and if no time is prescribed, then the time of the passing of the amalgamating act, is referred to as the time of amalgamation.

38. In every case of amalgamation, the undertaking, railways, harbours, navigations, ferries, wharfs, canals, works, real and personal property, powers, authorities, privileges, exemptions, rights of action and suit, and all other the rights and interests of the dissolved company, shall, subject to the contracts, obligations, debts, and liabilities of that company, become at the time of amalgamation, and by virtue of the amalgamating act, vested in the amalgamated company, and may and shall be held, used, exercised, and enjoyed by the amalgamated company, in the same manner and to the same extent as the same respectively at the time of amalgamation are, or if the amalgamating act were not passed might be, held, used, exercised, and enjoyed by the dissolved company.

39. The special acts relating to or affecting the dissolved company or their undertaking in force at the passing of the amalgamating act, shall, except so far as they are thereby expressed to be varied or repealed, remain in full force; and all rights and powers thereby conferred on and vested in the dissolved company in relation to their undertaking may be enjoyed and exercised by the amalgamated company in relation to the dissolved undertaking; and all matters to be done, continued, or completed, or which but for the amalgamation would, might, or could be done, continued, or completed, by the dissolved company, or their directors, officers, or servants, under or by virtue of those acts, shall or may be done, continued, or completed by the amalgamated company, and their directors, officers, and servants, as the case may be; and every special act, so far as it relates to or affects the dissolved company or their undertaking, shall be read and construed as if the name of the amalgamated company had been used therein in relation to that undertaking instead of the name of the dissolved company.

40. Except as may be otherwise provided in the special act, all debts and money due from or to the dissolved company, or any persons on their behalf, shall be payable and paid by or to the amalgamated company; and all tolls, rates, duties, and money due or payable by virtue of any act relating to the dissolved company from or to that company shall be due and payable from or to the amalgamated company, and shall be recoverable from or by the amalgamated company by the same ways and means, and subject to the same conditions, as the same would or might have been recoverable from or by the dissolved company if the amalgamating act had not been passed.

41. All deeds, conveyances, grants, assignments, leases, purchases, sales, mortgages, bonds, covenants, agreements, contracts, and securities which before the amalgamation have been executed, made, or entered into by, with, to, or in relation to the dissolved company, or the directors thereof, and which are in force at the time of amalgamation, and all obligations and liabilities which before the amalgamation have been incurred by or to, or which but for the amalgamation might or would have arisen in relation to, the dissolved company or the directors thereof, shall be as valid and of as full force and effect in favour of, against, or in relation to the amalgamated company as if the same had been executed, made, or entered into by, with, or to, or in relation to, or had been incurred by or to or had arisen in relation to, the amalgamated company by name.

42. All causes and rights of action or suit accrued before the time of amalgamation, and then in any manner enforceable by, for, or against the dissolved company shall be and remain as good, valid, and effectual for or against the amalgamated company as they would or might have been for or against the dissolved company affected thereby, if the amalgamating act had not been passed.

43. Nothing in the amalgamating act or in this part of this act shall cause the abatement, discontinuance, or determination of, or in anywise prejudicially affect, any action, suit, or other proceeding at law or in equity commenced by or against the dissolved company, either solely or jointly with any other company or with any person, before the time of amalgamation, and then pending; but the same may be continued, prosecuted, or enforced by or against the amalgamated company, either solely, or, as the case may require, jointly with such other company or with such person; and all persons committing offences against any of the provisions of any special act relating to the dissolved company before the amalgamation may be prosecuted, and all penalties incurred by reason of such offences may be sued for and recovered, in like manner in all respects as if the amalgamating act had not been passed,—the amalgamated company being in respect of all such matters considered as identical with the dissolved company.

44. No submission to arbitration of any matter in dispute between the dissolved company and any other company or any person, under which any reference is pending and incomplete at the time of amalgamation, and no award theretofore made and then remaining in force, shall be revoked or prejudicially affected by anything in the amalgamating act or in this part of this act contained; but every such submission and award shall be as valid and effectual for or against the amalgamated company as it would have been for or against the dissolved company.

45. All works which the dissolved company is at the time of amalgamation authorised or bound to execute and complete, and which are not then executed or completed, may or shall (as the case may require) be executed or completed by the amalgamated company, and for that purpose the amalgamated company shall have and be subject to all the powers, rights, and conditions which were conferred or imposed upon the dissolved company, and which but for the passing of the amalgamating act might have been exercised by or enforced against the dissolved company.

46. Where the dissolved company has under any special act entered into any contract for the purchase of or taken or used any lands, which at the time of amalgamation have not been effectually conveyed to the dissolved company, or the purchase money in respect of which has not been duly paid by the dissolved company,—then and in every such case the contract, if in force at the time of amalgamation, shall thereafter be completed by, and such lands shall be conveyed to, the amalgamated company, or as the amalgamated company directs, and the purchase money shall be paid and applied pursuant to the special acts relating to the dissolved company; and those acts shall, in relation to the completion of the contract and the purchase and conveyance of the lands, and the payment and application of the purchase money in respect thereof, be read and construed as if the amalgamated company were the company named in the acts and contract.

47. Where any money has, before the time of amalgamation, been paid by the dissolved company, or is thereafter paid by the amalgamated company under any special act relating to the dissolved company, into the Bank of England, or into one of the incorporated or chartered banks in Scotland, or into the Bank of Ireland, or to any trustee or trustees, on account of the purchase of any lands, or any interest therein, or for any compensation or satisfaction, or on any other account, such money, or the stocks, funds, or securities in or upon which the same then is or thereafter may be invested by order of any court, or otherwise, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce thereof, shall be applied and disposed of pursuant to such special act; and that and every other act shall, in relation to such money, stocks, funds, or securities, or the interest, dividends, or annual produce thereof, be read and construed as if the amalgamated company were the company therein named with reference to the same money, stocks, funds, securities, interest, dividends, or annual produce.

48. All officers and persons who, at the time of amalgamation, have in their possession or under their control any books, documents, papers, or effects belonging to the dissolved company, or to which the dissolved company would but for such dissolution have been entitled, shall be liable to account for and deliver up the same to the amalgamated company, or to such persons as the amalgamated company may appoint to receive the same, in the same manner, and subject to the same consequences on refusal or neglect, as if such officers and persons had been appointed by and become possessed of such books, documents, papers, or effects for the amalgamated company.

49. All clerks, officers, and servants, who at the time of amalgamation are in the employment of the dissolved company, shall thereupon become clerks, officers, or servants, as the case may be, of the amalgamated company, with the same rights, and subject to the same obligations and incidents in respect of such employment as they would have had or been subject to as the clerks, officers, or servants of the dissolved company, and shall so continue, unless and until they respectively are duly removed from such employment by the amalgamated company, or until the terms of their employment are duly altered by the amalgamated company.

50. All books and documents which would have been evidence in respect of any matter for or against the dissolved company shall be admitted as evidence in respect of the same or the like matter for or against the amalgamated company.

51. All resolutions of any general meeting or board of directors of the dissolved company, or of any duly constituted and authorised committee thereof, so far as the same are applicable and remain in force, shall, notwithstanding the dissolution, continue to be operative, and shall apply to the amalgamated company, and to the directors, officers, and servants of the amalgamated company, until duly revoked or altered by the amalgamated company, or under their authority.

52. All calls made by the dissolved company, and not paid at the time of amalgamation, shall be payable to, and may be enforced by, the amalgamated company, as if such calls had been made by the amalgamated company.

53. All registers of shares, stock, mortgages, and bonds of the dissolved company, and all registers of transfers thereof respectively, and all shareholders' and stockholders' address books, and all certificates of shares or stock of and in the dissolved company, which are valid and subsisting at the time of amalgamation, shall continue to be valid and subsisting, and shall have the same operation and effect as before the dissolution, unless and until new or altered registers, books, and certificates respectively are substituted in their stead; and all transfers, sales, or dispositions of stock or shares made before the dissolution, and not then completed, shall have the same operation and effect as if made after the dissolution.

54. All the by-laws, rules, and regulations of the dissolved company relating to the management, use, or control of their undertaking shall, notwithstanding the dissolution, continue to be in force, and applicable to, and in respect of, the undertaking, and shall and may be enforced by, and available to, the amalgamated company in their own name, as well for the recovery of penalties as for all other purposes, as if the same respectively had been originally made by the amalgamated company, until the expiration of twelve months after the time of amalgamation, or until other by-laws, rules, and regulations are duly made by the amalgamated company in their stead, whichever first happens.

55. Notwithstanding the dissolution of the dissolved company, and the amalgamation, everything before the time of amalgamation done, suffered, and confirmed respectively, under or by virtue of any special act relating to the dissolved company, shall be as valid as if the amalgamating act had not been passed; and the dissolution and amalgamation, and the amalgamating act, and this part of this act, respectively, shall accordingly be subject, and without prejudice, to everything so done, suffered, and confirmed respectively, and to all rights, liabilities, claims, and demands, present or future, which, if the dissolution and amalgamation had not taken place, and the amalgamating act had not been passed, would be incident to, or consequent on, anything so done, suffered, and confirmed respectively; and with respect to all things so done, suffered, and confirmed respectively, and to all such rights, liabilities, claims, and demands, the amalgamated company shall to all intents represent the dissolved company; and the generality of this present provision shall not be deemed to be restricted by any other of the provisions of this part of this act, or by any provision of the amalgamating act that does not expressly refer to this present provision, and expressly restrict the operation thereof.

CAP. XCIII.

An Act for consolidating in One Act certain Provisions frequently inserted in Acts relating to Waterworks.

[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Application of act and interpretation of terms.

3. Power for justices to inquire as to danger of reservoir.

4. Order of justices for immediate repair.

5. Order of justices on undertakers to repair reservoir. Order of justices on failure of undertakers to repair.

6. Form of order.

7. Persons acting under order not trespassers.

8. Order for payment of costs and expenses.

9. Appeal by undertakers.

10. Undertakers not to be responsible for consequences of order.

11. Provisions as to Scotland.

12. Supply for other than domestic purposes.

13. Want of supply for other than domestic purposes, when excused.

14. Power to let meters for hire.

15. Power for ascertaining quantity consumed by meter, and for removing meters, &c.

16. Power to cut off water in certain cases.

17. Penalty for waste, &c. of water by non-repair of pipes, &c.

18. Penalty for application of water contrary to agreement.

19. Penalty for extension or alteration of pipes.

20. Penalty for use of water without agreement.

21. Recovery of rates by action.

Whereas the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, was passed in order to comprise in one act sundry provisions which were at the time of the passing of that act usually introduced into acts of Parliament authorising the construction of certain waterworks:

And whereas sundry provisions of the like nature, but not comprised in the said act, are now frequently introduced into acts of Parliament relating to waterworks, and it is expedient to comprise such last-mentioned provisions also in one act, and that as well for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of repeating such provisions in special acts relating to waterworks, as for insuring greater uniformity in the provisions themselves: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Preliminary.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863;" and the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, and this act, may be cited together as "The Waterworks Clauses Acts, 1847 and 1863."

2. This act shall apply to any waterworks to which any special act hereafter passed and incorporating this act relates; and every such special act is hereinafter referred to as "the special act."

Terms used in this act have the same meanings as the same terms have when used in the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847.

The provisions respecting the recovery of penalties contained in the last-mentioned act shall be incorporated with this act.

Security of Reservoirs.

And with respect to the security of the reservoirs constructed by the undertakers, be it enacted as follows:—

3. Whenever any person interested complains to two justices that any reservoir constructed by the undertakers is in a dangerous state, such justices shall forthwith make inquiry into the truth of the complaint; or two justices, on their own view, and without complaint by any person, may proceed under the present provisions as if a complaint had been so made to them.

4. If, on any such inquiry, the justices are satisfied that the complaint is well founded, and that the reservoir is in a dangerous state, and that the danger is so imminent as not to admit of delay in removing the cause of complaint, they shall order such person as they shall think fit to enter on the property of the undertakers, and to lower the water in the reservoir, and to execute and do all such works and things as the justices think requisite and proper for removing the cause of complaint.

5. If, on such inquiry, the justices are satisfied that there is good cause of complaint, but are not satisfied that the reservoir is in such an imminently dangerous state as not to admit of delay in removing the cause of complaint, they shall issue their summons to the undertakers to answer the complaint; and upon hearing the parties, the justices may, or upon default of appearance of the undertakers, then in their absence, the justices shall, order the undertakers, within such period as the justices think reasonable, and specify in the order to lower the water in the reservoir, and to execute and do all such works and things as the justices think requisite and proper for removing the cause of complaint.

If the undertakers fail to execute or do within that period any such work or thing, the justices who made the order, or any other two justices, on being satisfied of such failure, may either order such persons as the justices think fit to enter on the property of the undertakers, and to lower the water in the reservoir, and to execute and do all such works and things as the justices think requisite and proper for removing the cause of complaint; or may, if they think fit, by order impose on the undertakers a penalty, not exceeding 10*l.*, for every day during which such failure continues after the making of the order imposing the penalty.

6. Any order of justices made in any of the cases aforesaid shall be in writing under their hands, and may be in the form set forth in the schedule to this act, with such variations as circumstances require.

7. Any person acting under and in pursuance of any such order shall not be deemed a trespasser; and if any person wilfully obstructs any person lawfully acting in obedience to any such order, or wilfully does, or instigates, or suffers to be done, anything in contravention thereof, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 50*l.*

8. The justices may order all, or such part as they think fit, of the costs of and incident to the applying for and obtaining of any such order to be paid by the undertakers, and also all, or such part as the justices think fit, of the expenses of the works and things executed and done in pursuance of any such order by any person other than the undertakers, to be paid by the undertakers to such person as the justices appoint.

If the justices before whom the complaint is made think that there is no sufficient ground for the complaint, they may, if they think fit, order the complainant to pay to the undertakers the whole or any part of their costs of or incident to the complaint.

9. If the undertakers consider themselves aggrieved by any order or determination of justices under the present provisions, they may, in like manner and subject to the like conditions as by the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, are provided in the case of appeals in respect of penalties, appeal to the court of general or quarter sessions for the county or place where the cause of appeal arises; and that court may, on the hearing of the appeal, either affirm or quash the order or determination, or make such other order in the premises as may seem fit, and may make such order as to the costs, both of the original proceedings and of the appeal, as may seem fit; but the order or determination appealed against shall, pending the appeal, continue in force.

10. Notwithstanding anything in the special act contained, the undertakers shall not be liable to pay any damages, penalties, costs, charges, or expenses for or in respect of, or be answerable or accountable for, any diminution or cessation of the supply of water, or any other breach or non-performance of their or any of their duties, liabilities, or obligations, under the special act, that may be occasioned by, or result from, the execution of any such order.

11. The present provisions with respect to the security of reservoirs shall apply to England and Ireland; and they shall also apply to Scotland, subject to the following variations, namely, the sheriff shall be deemed to be empowered thereby, as well as two justices; and the appeal given shall be from two justices in manner provided by the 151st and 152nd sections of the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, and shall lie from a sheriff substitute to the sheriff depute, where the matter comes in the first instance before a sheriff substitute; and in that case the sheriff depute shall hear and determine the appeal, and may either confirm, recall, vary, or supersede the order of the sheriff substitute, as he thinks proper; and the costs of the appeal shall be in the discretion of the sheriff; and the order or judgment of the sheriff in the appeal shall be final.

Supply of Water.

And with respect to the supply of water to be furnished by the undertakers, be it enacted as follows:—

12. A supply of water for domestic purposes shall not include a supply of water for cattle, or for horses, or for washing carriages where such horses or carriages are kept for sale or hire or by a common carrier, or a supply for any trade, manufacture, or business, or for watering gardens, or for fountains, or for any ornamental purpose.

13. Where the undertakers are authorised by the special act to supply water for other than domestic purposes, they shall not be liable, in the absence of express stipulation, under any agreement for the supply of water for other than domestic purposes, to any penalty or damages for not supplying such water, if the want of such supply arises from frost, unusual drought, or other unavoidable cause or accident.

14. Where the undertakers are authorised by the special act to supply water by measure, they may let for hire, to any consumer of water so supplied, any meter or instrument for measuring the quantity of water supplied and consumed, and any pipes and apparatus for the conveyance, reception, or storage of the water, for such remuneration in money as may be agreed upon between them and the consumer, which shall be recoverable in the same manner as rates due to the undertakers for water; and the meters, instruments, pipes, and apparatus shall not be subject to distress or to the landlord's hypothec for rent of the premises where the same are used, or be attached or taken in execution under any process of any court of law or equity, or under or in pursuance of any adjudication or order in bankruptcy, or other legal proceeding, against or affecting the consumer of the water or the occupier of the premises, or other the persons in whose possession the meters, instruments, pipes, and apparatus may be.

15. The officers of the undertakers may enter any house, building, or lands to, through, or into which water is supplied by them by measure, in order to inspect the meters, instruments, pipes, and apparatus, for the measuring, conveyance, reception, or storage of water, or for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity of water supplied or consumed, and may from time to time enter any house, building, or lands, for the purpose of removing any meter, instrument, pipe, or apparatus, the property of the undertakers; and if any person hinders any such officer from entering or making such inspection, or effecting such removal, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*; but, except with the consent of a justice or the sheriff, this power of entry shall be exercised only between the hours of ten in the forenoon and four in the afternoon.

Protection of Water.

And with respect to the waste or misuse of the water supplied by or belonging to the undertakers, be it enacted as follows:—

16. If any person supplied with water by the undertakers wrongfully does or causes or permits to be done anything in contravention of any of the provisions of the special act, or wrongfully fails to do anything which, under any of those provisions, ought to be done for the prevention of the waste, misuse, undue consumption, or contamination of the water of the undertakers, they may (without prejudice to any remedy against him in respect thereof) cut off any of the pipes by or through which water is supplied by them to him, or for his use, and may cease to supply him with water, so long as the cause of injury remains or is not remedied.

17. If any person supplied with water by the undertakers wilfully or negligently causes or suffers any pipe, valve, cock, cistern, bath, soil-pan, watercloset, or other apparatus or receptacle to be out of repair, or to be so used or contrived as that the water supplied to him by the undertakers is or is likely to be wasted, misused, unduly consumed, or contaminated, or so as to occasion or allow the return of foul air, or other noisome or impure matter, into any pipe belonging to or connected with the pipes of the undertakers, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

18. If any person—

First, not having from the undertakers a supply of water for other than domestic purposes, uses, for other than domestic purposes, any water supplied to him by the undertakers; or,

Secondly, having from the undertakers a supply of water for any other than domestic purposes, uses, for any purposes other than those for which he is entitled to use the same, any water supplied to him by the undertakers,— he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40*s*., without prejudice to the right of the undertakers to recover from him the value of the water misused.

19. It shall not be lawful for the owner or occupier of any premises supplied with water by the undertakers, or any consumer of the water of the undertakers, or any other person, to affix or cause or permit to be affixed any pipe or apparatus to a pipe belonging to the undertakers, or to a communication or service pipe belonging to or used by such owner, occupier, consumer, or other person, or to make any alteration in any such communication or service pipe, or in any apparatus connected therewith, without the consent in every such case of the undertakers; and if any person acts in any respect in contravention of the provisions of the present section, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*., without prejudice to the right of the undertakers to recover damages from him in respect of any injury done to their property, and without prejudice to their right to recover from him the value of any water wasted, misused, or unduly consumed.

20. If any person, not being supplied with water by the undertakers, wrongfully takes or uses any water from any reservoir, watercourse, conduit, or pipe belonging to the undertakers, or from any pipe leading to or from any such reservoir, watercourse, conduit, or pipe, or from any cistern or other like place containing water belonging to the undertakers, or supplied by them for the use of any consumer of the water of the undertakers, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l*.

Recovery of Rates.

And with respect to the recovery of water rates and other money, be it enacted as follows:—

21. If any person refuses or neglects to pay to the undertakers any rate or sum due to them under the special act, they may recover the same, with costs, in any court of competent jurisdiction; and their remedy under the present section shall be in addition to their other remedies for the recovery thereof.

CAP. XCIV.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Repair of Turnpike Roads in England, and to continue certain Turnpike Acts in Great Britain. [28th July, 1863.]

SECT. 1. Whereas doubts are entertained whether highway boards established under the act of the session of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61, are liable to contribute to the repair of turnpike roads in pursuance of the act of the session of the 4 & 5 Vict. c. 69, and the acts continuing the same: be it enacted, that where any turnpike road is situate in a parish that is included in a highway district, an order may be made on the highway board of the district to contribute to the repair of that road, under the same circumstances under which an order for the same purpose may be made on the parish surveyor, in pursuance of the said act of the session of the 4 & 5 Vict. c. 69, as continued as aforesaid; and for the purposes of the said last-mentioned act, the highway board shall be deemed to be substituted for the parish surveyor, and any rate leviable in pursuance of a precept of the board for the rate or assessment levied or to be levied by the said surveyor as in the said act mentioned, and any monies paid by the board for the purposes or in pursuance of the last-mentioned act, shall be deemed to be expenses incurred by the board in respect of the repair of highways in the parish in which the turnpike road is situate for which contribution is required, and "parish," as used in this section, shall mean any place in a highway district that returns a waywarden or waywardens to the board of that district; and it is hereby declared, that "local act," as used in the 7th section of the said act of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61, does not include turnpike acts.

CAP. XCVI.

An Act to amend the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act (1851), and the Petty Sessions Clerks (Ireland) Act (1858).
[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Provisions of recited acts to apply to complaints or proceedings under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 68, and the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 38, in cases specified.

2. Short title.

CAP. XCVII.

An Act to enable Cities, Towns, and Boroughs of Twenty-five Thousand Inhabitants and upwards to appoint Stipendiary Magistrates.
[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Interpretation of terms.

3. Power to local board to make a by-law as to salary to be fixed, on which the Crown may appoint a justice.

4. Local board to provide and furnish a police office.

5. Justice need not be qualified by estate; but such justice not to sit in courts of gaol delivery.

6. Power to magistrate to appoint a clerk, being an attorney-at-law. Clerk disqualified from acting as attorney in certain cases. As to fees to be taken. Power to remit fees and award costs.

7. Clerk to pay over fees to treasurer. Fees received to form one general fund. Power to local board to make rates for payment of magistrate, &c. Application of fines and penalties. As to penalties appropriated under local acts.

Whereas the execution of the office of justice of the peace within populous cities and places in England and Wales has become difficult and burdensome, the great and increasing extent of the populations therein, and the difficult and important legal questions that arise under various public and local acts, creating unreasonable demands upon the time of justices: and whereas there is reason to believe that such cities and places would secure the services of stipendiary magistrates for the more speedy and effectual execution of the said office, the better protection of the persons and properties of the inhabitants, and the advantage of the public, if provision were made by authority of Parliament for the appointment of such magistrates: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Stipendiary Magistrates Act, 1863."

2. In the construction of this act the following words and expressions shall have the meanings hereby assigned to them, unless they be repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the context or subject-matter in connexion with which they are used; that is to say:—

The words "city" or "place" shall mean any city or place not a municipal corporation, wherein the Public Health Act, Local Government Act, or Local Improvement Act is or shall be in operation, and shall comprise the whole area to which the Public Health Act, Local Government Act, or Local Improvement Act shall extend, provided there is a population within such area of 25,000 persons; and provided such place is not included in any district for which a stipendiary magistrate is acting by virtue of any act of Parliament:

The expression "local board" shall mean the board appointed under any of such acts:

The word "county" shall mean county, riding, parts, liberty, or division:

The word "jurisdiction" shall include the entire area of a city or place to which any of such acts shall extend:

This act shall not extend to the city of London, or to any city or place which is now incorporated or shall be incorporated under the provisions of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, intituled "An Act for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales."

3. If any local board of any city or place shall, by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the number of such board, think it expedient that a stipendiary magistrate should be appointed to execute the office of a justice of the peace within any city or place, such local board is hereby empowered, by a like majority, to make a by-law or minute fixing the amount of the salary which he is to receive in that behalf, subject to the approval of one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and such by-law or minute shall be transmitted to one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and it shall be lawful thereupon for her Majesty, if she shall think fit, to appoint a fit person, being a barrister-at-law of not less than five years standing, to be, during her Majesty's pleasure, police magistrate and justice of the peace for such city or place, and to order that such sum shall be paid quarterly out of the local improvement rate of such city or place as will be sufficient to pay such yearly salary to the said justice so assigned as aforesaid, not exceeding in the whole the salary mentioned in such by-law or minute so approved as aforesaid, clear of all fees or deductions, as to her Majesty shall seem fit; and the treasurer of such local board shall pay to the justice so assigned as aforesaid, out of the local improvement rates, the salary so directed to be paid, by four equal quarterly payments, and in the same proportion up to the time of the death of such justice, or his ceasing to act under such assignment as aforesaid: provided that in every case of vacancy of the office of police magistrate in any city or place aforesaid, no new appointment of police magistrate in such city or place shall be made until the local board, in manner hereinbefore referred to, shall again make application to one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State in that behalf, and, as in the case of the first appointment of a police magistrate in such city or place.

4. The local board are hereby authorised and required to provide and furnish a fit and suitable office, to be called the police office of the city or place, for the purpose of transacting the business of the justices of such city or place, and to pay from time to time, out of the local improvement rates, such sums as may be necessary for providing, upholding, and furnishing, and for the necessary expenses of such police office, provided that no room in any house licensed as a victualling house or alehouse shall be used for the purposes of any such police office.

5. Any person assigned to keep the peace within any city or place under the provisions of this act shall during the continuance of such assignment execute the duties of a justice of the peace in and for the city and place for which he shall have been so assigned, although he may not have such qualification by estate as is required by law in the case of other persons being justices of the peace for a county, provided that such person be not disqualified by law to act as a justice of the peace for any other cause or upon any other account than in respect of estate, and shall sit and act as a justice of the peace within such jurisdiction as aforesaid on all matters where one or more justices are by law now required either alone or together with any other justice or justices of the peace of the city or place wherein his jurisdiction is situate; and that every summons for the appearance of any person, or warrant to compel such appearance, or warrant for the apprehension of any person charged with any offence, or search warrant issued by any justice of the peace acting in and for any city or place in any matter within his jurisdiction, may be respectively served and executed within any county in which the said city or place shall be situate, or within any distance not exceeding seven miles from such city or place, and within such limits as aforesaid, shall have the same force and effect as if the same had been originally issued or subsequently indorsed by a justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place where the same shall be served or executed, any law, statute, charter, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding; and every such summons and warrant shall and may be lawfully served or executed within such limits as aforesaid by the constable or special constable to whom the same shall be directed: provided nevertheless, that no such person, by virtue of such assignment, shall act as a justice of the peace at any court of gaol delivery, or general or quarter sessions, or in making or levying any county rate or rate in the nature of a county rate.

6. It shall be lawful for such magistrate and he is hereby required to appoint one fit and proper person, being an attorney-at-law, in actual practice as a clerk, to be removable at his pleasure, and as often as there shall be a vacancy in the said office of clerk to the magistrate by death, resignation, removal, or otherwise; and such clerk shall attend (except when prevented by illness or some other sufficient cause, to be allowed by such magistrate, who shall appoint a temporary deputy) at all official meetings, and do all such work and transact all such business as is usually done and transacted by justices clerks; and he and his successors shall be paid such yearly salary as the local board shall appoint, subject to an appeal to the Secretary of State, who is hereby empowered finally to determine the amount of the said salary, for his time, trouble, attendance, and expenses in the execution of his said office, by the local board, in four quarterly payments, as hereinbefore directed with reference to the payment of the salary of the said magistrate; but he shall not be concerned, either by himself or partner, in any matter before the said magistrate, or arising out of or consequent thereupon in any other court, on pain of dismissal. Such clerk shall receive and take all such fees as are authorised to be taken by the clerks to the justices acting for the county within which the said city or place is locally situate: provided that a copy of the table of fees shall be affixed in the public office of every magistrate appointed under this act, who may remit any fees, in part or in whole, for reasonable cause, and award such costs as to him shall seem meet to be paid to or by either of the parties to any charge or complaint, whether or not a warrant or summons shall have issued.

7. Such clerk shall pay over all fees to the treasurer of the local board once every quarter of a year, and shall keep accounts of them in writing, and shall at the same time render to the local board an account thereof. All such fees, together with all fines, penalties, and forfeitures hereinafter referred to, shall be carried by the treasurer to the credit of the local improvement rate; provided that it shall be lawful for the local board, if it should become necessary so to do, from time to time to make a rate or assessment not exceeding 1d. in the pound in any one year upon all property rateable to the improvement rate within such city or place for the purpose of raising as much money as, together with the said fees, fines, penalties, and forfeitures, shall be sufficient to pay the salaries of the magistrate and his clerk, the rent and all other expenses of the offices, and of law or other books, printing and stationery, and of all other charges and expenses connected with or incidental to the duties of the magistrate or his clerk; such rate or assessment to be made, levied, and enforced either with and as part of such improvement rate, or to be separately assessed, levied, and enforced, and with the same powers and in the same manner as the improvement rate. All fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by such magistrate, save and except those made payable to the informer who shall sue for the same, or any party aggrieved, and those recoverable under any act relating to the Customs, Excise, or Post Office, or to trade or navigation, or any branch of her Majesty's revenue, shall be recovered for and adjudged to be paid to the said treasurer of the said local board, and shall be by him carried to the credit of the improvement rate, and be applied as part thereof: provided that, if under any local Watch Act such fines, penalties, and forfeitures shall have been already appropriated, the same shall be applied as directed by such local act, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

[28th July, 1863.]

CAP. CII.

An Act to reduce the Duty on Rum in certain Cases.
[28th July, 1863.]

CAP. CIII.

An Act to amend the Law in certain Cases of Misappropriation by Servants of the Property of their Masters.
[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Servants taking their master's corn, &c., without authority, for the purpose of giving the same to their master's horses, &c., not guilty of felony, but shall be liable to imprisonment, &c. Power to justice to dismiss case if deemed too trifling.

2. Power to appeal against conviction.

3. No certiorari, &c.

4. Summary proceedings may be under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43. Except in London and the metropolitan police district.

5. Extent of act.

6. Commencement of act.

Whereas the offence of taking corn or other food by a servant from the possession of his master, contrary to his orders, for the purpose of giving the same, or of having the same given, to the horses or other animals of such master, is by law a felony: and whereas it is desirable to alter the law in this respect: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. If any servant shall, contrary to the orders of his master, take from his possession any corn, pulse, roots, or other food, for the purpose of giving the same, or of having the same given, to any horse or other animal belonging to or in the possession of his master, the servant so offending shall not, by reason thereof, be deemed guilty of or be proceeded against for felony, but shall, on conviction of such offence before two justices of the peace, at their discretion, either be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding three months, or else shall forfeit and pay such penalty as shall appear to them to be meet, not exceeding the sum of 5*l.*; and if such penalty shall not be paid, either immediately after the conviction, or within such period as the said justices shall at the time of the conviction appoint, the servant so offending shall be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding three months, unless such penalty be sooner paid: provided always, that if, upon the hearing of the charge, the said justices shall be of opinion that the same is too trifling, or that there are circumstances in the case which render it inexpedient to inflict any punishment, they shall have power to dismiss the charge, without proceeding to a conviction: provided also, that if, upon the trial of any servant for feloniously taking from his master any corn, pulse, roots, or other food consumable by horses or other animals, such servant shall allege that he took the same under such circumstances as would constitute an offence punishable under this act, and thereof shall satisfy the jury charged with his trial, then it shall be lawful for such jury to return a verdict accordingly; and thereupon the court, before which such trial shall take place, shall proceed to award such punishment against such servant as may be awarded by two justices of the peace on the conviction of any person under the provisions of this act: provided also, that in case of non-payment of any penalty to be imposed by the court on such servant, he shall be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding three months, as the court shall order, unless such penalty be sooner paid.

2. Provided always, that if any person shall think himself aggrieved by any conviction under this act, such person may appeal to the next court of general quarter sessions of the peace which shall be holden not less than twelve days after the day of such conviction, for the county, riding, division, city, borough, or place wherein the cause of complaint shall have arisen: provided also, that such person shall give to the informant a notice, in writing, of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within three days after such conviction, and seven clear days at the least before such sessions, and shall also either remain in custody until the said sessions, or shall enter into a recognisance, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice of the peace, conditioned personally to appear at the said sessions, and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the court awarded; or, if such appeal shall be against any conviction whereby only a penalty, with or without costs, is adjudged to be paid, shall deposit with the clerk of the convicting justices such a sum of money as such justices shall deem to be sufficient to cover the penalty and costs, if any, so adjudged to be paid, and the costs of the appeal; and upon such notice being given, and such recognisance being entered into, or such deposit being made, the justices before whom such recognisance shall be entered into or such deposit shall be made shall liberate such person, if in custody; and the court at such sessions shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, as to the court shall seem meet, and in case of the affirmance of the conviction shall order and adjudge the appellant to be punished according to the conviction, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded, and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing such judgment; and in any case where after any such deposit shall have been made as aforesaid the conviction shall be affirmed, the court may order the penalty and costs, if any, thereby adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the appeal, to be paid out of the money deposited, and the residue thereof, if any, to be repaid to the party convicted; and in any case where after any such deposit the conviction shall be quashed, the court shall order the money deposited to be repaid to the party convicted; and in every case where any conviction shall be quashed on appeal as aforesaid, the clerk of the peace or other proper officer of the court shall forthwith indorse on the conviction a memorandum that the same has been quashed; and whenever any copy or certificate of such conviction shall be made, a copy of such memorandum shall be added thereto, and shall be sufficient evidence that the conviction has been quashed in every case where such copy or certificate would be sufficient evidence of such conviction: provided that the right of appeal against any conviction under this act shall not apply so as to enable any person to appeal against any verdict of a jury as aforesaid.

3. No such conviction, or adjudication made on appeal therefrom, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari into any of her Majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

4. Every offence under this act may be prosecuted and every conviction under this act may be enforced in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43; and all provisions contained in the said act shall, unless repugnant to any of the provisions of this act, be applicable to such prosecution and conviction, in the same manner as if they were incorporated in this act: provided that nothing in this act contained shall in any manner alter or affect any enactments relating to procedure in the case of any offence punishable on summary conviction within the city of London or the metropolitan police district, or the recovery or application of any penalty for any such offence.

5. This act shall extend to England only.

6. This act shall commence and take effect from the 1st September, 1863.

CAP. CIV.

An Act for confirming certain Provisional Orders made by the Board of Trade under the General Pier and Harbour Act, 1861, relating to Blackpool, Deal and Walmer, Exmouth, Rosehearty, Ilfracombe, Instow, Bangor, Chatham, Bray, Dartmouth, and Nairn. [28th July, 1863.]

An Act to remove certain Restrictions on the Negotiation of Promissory Notes and Bills of Exchange under a limited Sum. [28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 30, &c., restraining negotiation in England of notes and bills for a limited sum, and sect. 17, and Schedules (C). and (D.), of stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 38, restraining negotiation in Scotland of like notes, &c., repealed.

2. Term of act three years.

CAP. CVI.

An Act to further amend the Law relating to the Conveyance of Land for Charitable Purposes. [28th July, 1863.]

Preamble recites stats. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 9; 9 Geo. 2, c. 36; and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 17.

Sect. 1. Every deed or assurance by which any land shall have been demised for any term of years for any charitable use shall, for all the purposes of the said recited acts, be deemed to have been made to take effect for the charitable use thereby intended immediately from the making thereof, if the term for which such land shall have been thereby demised was thereby made to commence and take effect in possession at any time within one year from the date of such deed of assurance.

CAP. CVII.

CAP. CX.

An Act to amend the Lunacy Acts in relation to the building of Asylums for Pauper Lunatics.

[28th July, 1863.]

- Sect. 1. Confirmation of certain agreements between counties.
2. Explanation of sect. 8 of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 86.
3. Short title.

Whereas, by the Lunatic Asylums Act, 1853, the justices of every county and borough are required to provide an asylum for the reception of their pauper lunatics; but power is given to two or more counties and boroughs to unite together for the purpose of providing an asylum for their common use: and whereas, by the said act, "county" is defined to include a county of a city or county of a town, and "borough" is defined to mean every borough, town, and city corporate having a quarter sessions, recorder, and clerk of the peace: and whereas, by the Lunacy Acts Amendment Act, 1862, it is provided that the word "county" shall not, except in the case of the city of London, mean a county of a city or county of a town: and whereas certain counties of towns have quarter sessions, but such quarter sessions are not held by a recorder: and whereas, at the date of the passing of the last-mentioned act, certain agreements were pending for the union, with a view to a common asylum, of certain counties, including counties of towns: and whereas it is expedient to confirm such agreements in certain cases, notwithstanding that, by virtue of the last-mentioned act, a county of a town is no longer included under the term "county," and is by such exclusion rendered incapable of carrying into effect such agreement: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. Where, in pursuance of the Lunatic Asylums Act, 1853, an agreement for providing a common asylum has been duly entered into between diverse counties, properly so called, and such agreement has been afterwards varied by the admission as a party thereto of a county of a city or county of a town, the original agreement shall be binding on the counties originally parties thereto, in the same manner as if no variation of such agreement had been made.

2. Whereas, by the 8th section of the Lunacy Acts Amendment Act, 1862, it is provided to the effect, that it shall be lawful for the visitors of any asylum, and the guardians of any parish or union within the district for which the asylum has been provided, to make arrangements, subject to such approval as therein mentioned, for the reception and care in the workhouse of the parish or union of a limited number of chronic lunatics, to be selected as therein mentioned: and whereas doubts are entertained whether the expression "chronic lunatics," therein mentioned, includes lunatics chargeable to parishes or unions other than the parish or union into the workhouse of which they are proposed to be received: now it is hereby declared, that the words "chronic lunatics" in the said section include chronic lunatics chargeable to other parishes or unions, as well as chronic lunatics chargeable to the parish or union into the workhouse of which they are proposed to be received.

3. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Lunacy Acts Amendment Act, 1863."

CAP. CXI.

An Act to amend the Naval Medical Supplemental Fund Society Winding-up Act, 1861.

[28th July, 1863.]

- Sect. 1. Appointment of new trustees of society by First Lord of Admiralty on vacancies.
2. Repeal of sect. 8 of former act, and substitution of new provisions.
3. Construction of sects. 9 and 10 of former act.

CAP. CXII.

An Act to regulate the exercise of Powers under special Acts for the Construction and Maintenance of Telegraphs.

33. Access from future docks to canal.
34. Board of Trade may in any case appoint arbitrator.
35. For works on seashore, consent of proprietors of shore and conservancy or other authorities requisite.
36. Plan of such works to be subject to approval of Board of Trade.
37. Lights and signals for such works.
38. Power of Board of Trade as to such works if disused &c.
39. Local survey of such works by Board of Trade.
40. Recovery of expenses by Board of Trade in such cases.
41. Telegraph to be open for all messages, without preference; subject to leases.
42. Company to be responsible for all damages.
43. Sale, &c. of undertaking and leases of wires (with exceptions) prohibited, except with consent of Board of Trade.
44. Registered office of company for service of documents.
45. Punishment of officers of company for misconduct respecting messages.
46. Saving for effect of future general acts.
47. Certain enactments in special acts not affected by this act.
48. Messages on her Majesty's service to have priority.
49. On request of Board of Trade, company to place telegraph.
50. On refusal or neglect of company, power to Board of Trade to place such telegraph.
51. Remuneration of company for placing such telegraph.
52. In emergencies, telegraphs may be taken possession of for her Majesty's service.
53. Power to proceed against company given to law officers of Crown on certificate of Board of Trade.

Be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Preliminary.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Telegraph Act, 1863."

2. This act shall apply—

- (1). To every company to be hereafter authorised by special act of Parliament to construct and maintain telegraphs:
- (2). To every company so authorised before the passing of this act by any such special act, notwithstanding anything in any such special act contained—but so that, except as hereinafter expressly provided, nothing in this act shall give to any owner, lessee, or occupier of land, or other person, or to any body, as against any such company as last aforesaid, in respect of anything lawfully done before the passing of this act by such company under any such special act, any further or other right, power, jurisdiction, authority, or remedy, than he or they would have had if this act had not been passed: provided also, that nothing in this act shall interfere with the maintenance or repair, under any such special act, of any work lawfully constructed before the passing of this act by any such company under any such special act, or with the increasing of the number of the wires forming part of any such work; and that nothing in this act shall relieve any such company from any obligation or liability under any agreement made before the passing of this act, or shall make lawful any work constructed by the company before the passing of this act which is the subject of any proceedings at law or in equity pending at the passing of this act, or which has been constructed without such consent as was required for the construction thereof before the passing of this act.

3. In this act—

The term "the company" means any company to be hereafter authorised as aforesaid (hereinafter distinguished by the term "future company"), or any company already so authorised (hereinafter distinguished by the term "existing company"):

The term "telegraph" means a wire or wires used for the purpose of telegraphic communication, with any casing, coating, tube, or pipe inclosing the same, and any apparatus connected therewith for the purpose of telegraphic communication:

The term "post" means a post, pole, standard, stay, strut, or other aboveground contrivance for carrying, suspending, or supporting a telegraph:

The term "work" includes telegraphs and posts:

The term "street" means a public way situate within a city, town, or village, or between lands continuously built upon on either side, and repaired at the public expense, or at the expense of any turnpike or other public trust, or ratone tenure, including the footpaths of such way, and any bridge forming part thereof:

The term "public road" means a public highway for carriages being repaired at the public expense, or at the expense of any turnpike or other public trust, or ratone tenure, and not being a street, including the footpaths of such public highway, and any bridge forming part thereof, and also any land by the side and forming part of such a public highway, but not including a railway or canal:

The term "railway" includes any station, work, or building connected with a railway:

The term "canal" includes navigation or navigable river, and any dock, basin, towing-path, wharf, work, or building connected with a canal:

The term "land" means land not being a street, or public road, and not being land by the side and forming part of a public road, and includes land laid out for and proposed by the owner to be converted into a street or public road:

The term "body" includes a body of trustees or commissioners, municipal corporation, grand jury, board, vestry, company, or society, whether incorporated or not; and any provision referring to a body applies to a person, as the case may require:

The term "person" includes corporation aggregate or sole:

The term "the Board of Trade" means the Lords of the Committee of her Majesty's Privy Council for the time being appointed for the consideration of matters relating to trade and foreign plantations:

The term "justice" means justice of the peace acting for the place where the matter requiring the cognisance of any such justice arises:

The term "two justices" means two or more justices met and acting together, or any one police magistrate or justice having by law authority to act alone for any purpose with the powers of two justices:

The term "sheriff" means the sheriff depute of the county or ward of a county in Scotland, and the steward depute of the stewartry in Scotland, in which the matter submitted to the cognisance of the sheriff arises, and includes the substitutes of such sheriff depute and steward depute respectively.

4. The provisions of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, with respect to the recovery of damages not specially provided for, and of penalties, and to the determination of any other matter referred to justices, and the provisions of the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, with respect to the recovery of damages not specially provided for, and to the determination of any other matter referred to the sheriff, or to justices, shall, so far as the same are applicable, and save so far as the same are inconsistent with any express provision of this act, be incorporated with this act; and the terms used in those provisions shall be interpreted as the same terms are directed to be interpreted in this act.

5. The following provisions shall apply to notices and consents under this act:—

- (1). Every notice or consent shall be in writing or print, or partly in writing and partly in print:
- (2). Any notice to or by the company or a body having the control of a street or public road, or of the sewerage or drainage thereunder, may be given to or by the secretary, clerk, or surveyor, or other like officer (if any) of the company, or of such body, as the case may be:

- (3). Any consent may be given on such pecuniary or other terms or conditions (being in themselves lawful), or subject to such stipulations as to the time or mode of execution of any work, or as to the removal or alteration, in any event, of any work, or as to any other thing connected with or relative to any work, as the person or body giving consent thinks fit.

General Powers of Company.

6. Subject to the restrictions and provisions hereinafter contained, the company may execute works as follows:—

- (1). They may place and maintain a telegraph under any street or public road, and may alter or remove the same:
- (2). They may place and maintain a telegraph over, along, or across any street or public road, and place and maintain posts in or upon any street or public road, and may alter or remove the same:
- (3). They may, for the purposes aforesaid, open or break up any street or public road, and alter the position thereunder of any pipe (not being a main) for the supply of water or gas:
- (4). They may place and maintain a telegraph and posts under, in, upon, over, along, or across any land or building, or any railway or canal, or any estuary or branch of the sea, or the shore or bed of any tidal water, and may alter or remove the same:

Provided always, that the company shall not be deemed to acquire any right other than that of user only in the soil of any street or public road under, in, upon, over, along, or across which they place any work.

7. In the exercise of the powers given by the last foregoing section the company shall do as little damage as may be, and shall make full compensation to all bodies and persons interested for all damage sustained by them by reason or in consequence of the exercise of such powers, the amount and application of such compensation to be determined in manner provided by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act 1845, respectively, and any act amending those acts, for the determination of the amount and application of compensation for lands taken or injuriously affected.

8. In the exercise of the aforesaid powers, the company shall also be subject to the following restrictions:—

- (1). They shall cause as little detriment or inconvenience as circumstances admit to the body or person to or by whom any pipe for the supply of water or gas belongs or is used:
- (2). Before they alter the position of any such pipe they shall give to the body to whom the same belongs notice of their intention to do so, specifying the time at which they will begin to do so; such notice to be given twenty-four hours at least before the commencement of the work for effecting such alteration:
- (3). The company shall not execute such work except under the superintendence of the body to whom such pipe belongs, unless such body refuses or neglects to give such superintendence at the time specified in the notice for the commencement of the work, or discontinues the same during the work; and the company shall execute such work to the reasonable satisfaction of such body:
- (4). The company shall pay all reasonable expenses to which such body may be put on account of such superintendence:

And the body to whom any such pipe belongs may, when and as occasion requires, alter the position of any work of the company already constructed, or to be hereafter constructed, under, in, or upon a street or public road, on the same conditions as are by the last foregoing and present sections imposed on the company in relation to such a body mutatis mutandis.

Restrictions as to Telegraphs under Streets and public Roads.

9. The company shall not place a telegraph under any street within the limits of the district over which the authority of the Metropolitan Board of Works extends, or of any city or municipal borough or town corporate, or of any town having a population of 30,000 inhabitants or upwards (according to the latest census), except with the consent of the bodies having the control of the streets within such respective limits.

10. Where the company has obtained consent to the placing, or by virtue of the powers of the company under this act intends to proceed with the placing, of a telegraph under a street or public road, the depth, course, and position at and in which the same is to be placed shall be settled between the company and the following bodies:

The body having the control of the street or public road:

The body having the control of the sewerage or drainage thereunder:

But if such settlement is not come to with any such body, the following provisions shall take effect:—

- (1). The company may give to such body a notice specifying the depth, course, and position which the company desires:
- (2). If the body to whom such notice is given does not, within twenty-eight days after the giving of such notice, give to the company a counter-notice objecting to the proposal of the company, and specifying the depth, course, and position which such body desires, they shall be deemed to have agreed to the proposal of the company:
- (3). In the event of ultimate difference between the company and such body, the depth, course, and position shall be determined in England or Ireland by two justices, and in Scotland by two justices or the sheriff.

11. Every underground tube or pipe of the company shall be so marked as to distinguish it from tubes or pipes of every other company.

12. The company shall not place a telegraph over, along, or across a street or public road, or a post in or upon a street or public road, except with the consent of the body having the control of such street or public road; and where a public road passes through or by the side of any park or pleasure grounds, and where a public road crosses, by means of a bridge or viaduct, or abuts on any ornamental water belonging to any park or pleasure grounds, and where a public road crosses or abuts on a private drive through any park or pleasure grounds, or to any mansion, the company shall not, without, or otherwise than in accordance with, the consent of the owner, lessee, and occupier of such park, pleasure grounds, or mansion, place any work above ground on such public road.

13. Where any landowner or other person is liable for the repair of any street or public road (notwithstanding that the same is dedicated to the public), the company shall not place any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across such street or public road, except with the consent of such landowner or other person, in addition to the consent of the body having the control of such street or public road, where under this act such last-mentioned consent is required: provided, that where the company places a telegraph across or over any street or public road they shall not place it so low as to stop, hinder, or interfere with the passage for any purpose whatsoever along the street or public road.

Removal of Works affecting Streets and public Roads.

14. In the following cases—

- (1). If any part of the company's works is abandoned, or suffered to fall into decay;
- (2). If the company is dissolved, or ceases for six months to carry on business;

the body having the control of any street or public road, or the owner of any land or building affected, in the former case, by such part of the company's works as aforesaid, or, in the latter case, by any of the company's works, may give notice to the company, or leave a notice at the last known office or place of business of the company, to the effect that if such works as are specified in the notice are not removed within one month after the notice given or left, the same will be removed by the body having such control, or by such owner; and in every such case, unless such works are removed accordingly, the body having such control or such owner may, without prejudice to any remedy against the company, remove such works, or any part thereof, and sell the materials thereof or of any part thereof, and, out of the proceeds of such sale, reimburse themselves their expenses relative to such notice, removal, and sale, and consequent thereon (rendering the overplus, if any, to the company), and may recover any unpaid residue of such expenses from the company. The present section shall apply to an existing company, in respect of any work already constructed or to be hereafter constructed, as well as to a future company.

15. In case the body having the control of any street or public road at any time hereafter resolves to alter the line or level of any portion of such street or road under, in, upon, over, along, or across which any work of the company constructed either before or after the passing of this act is placed, the company shall from time to time be bound, on receiving one month's notice of such intended alteration, and at their own expense, to remove such work, and to replace the same in such position and manner in all respects as may be required by such body, or, in the event of difference between such body and the company, in such position and manner in all respects as may be determined in England or Ireland by two justices, and in Scotland by two justices or the sheriff.

16. Where the company has, before the passing of this act, placed posts in or upon a street or public road, and the body having the control of the street or road considers the position of any such post to be dangerous or inconvenient, the following provisions shall take effect:—

- (1). Such body may give to the company a notice requiring them to remove or alter the position of such post, and specifying the grounds of such requisition:
- (2). The company either shall, within fourteen days after receipt of such notice, remove or alter the position of the post in accordance with the notice; or else, if they do not intend to remove or alter the position of the post in accordance with the notice, shall, within one week after receipt of the notice, deliver to such body a counter-notice, specifying their objection to such removal or alteration:
- (3). Such body may send copies of the notice and counter-notice to the Board of Trade:
- (4). As soon as may be after receipt of such copies, the Board of Trade shall (unless the difference between the body giving the notice and the company is arranged) make inquiry and examination, and hear and determine the matter of the notice and counter-notice:
- (5). On hearing any such matter, the Board of Trade may direct that the company shall comply with the notice, wholly or in part, or subject to any such modifications as the Board of Trade prescribes, or on condition that the body giving the notice shall afford to the company all reasonable and proper facilities in their power for substituting some other work for that to which the notice relates, or on any such other condition as to the Board of Trade seems, according to the circumstances of the case, just and expedient, and the expenses incurred in or about such removal or alteration shall be borne and paid by the company or by the body giving the notice, or partly by one and partly by the other, as to the Board of Trade seems, according to the circumstances of the case, just and expedient, the amount of such expenses to be determined in case of difference by the Board of Trade.

Restrictions as to the opening of Streets and public Roads.

17. Subject to any special stipulations made with a company by the body having the control of a street or public road, and to any determinations, orders, or directions of the justices, or sheriff as aforesaid, where the company proceeds to open or break up a street or public road, the following provisions shall take effect:—

- (1). The company shall give to the bodies between whom respectively and the company the depth, course, and position of a telegraph under such street or public road are hereinbefore required to be settled or determined, notice of their intention to open or break up such street or public road, specifying the time at which they will begin to do so—such notice to be given, in the case of an underground work, ten days at least, and in the case of an aboveground work, five days at least, before the commencement of the work; except in case of emergency, in which case notice of the work proposed shall be given as soon as may be after the commencement thereof:

- (2). The company shall not (save in case of emergency) open or break up any street or public road, except under the superintendence of the bodies to whom respectively notice is by the present section required to be given, unless such bodies respectively refuse or neglect to give such superintendence at the time specified in the notice for the commencement of the work, or discontinue the same during the work:
- (3). The company shall pay all reasonable expenses to which such bodies respectively may be put on account of such superintendence.

18. Subject to any such special stipulations as aforesaid, after the company has opened or broken up a street or public road, they shall be under the following further obligations:—

- (1). They shall, with all convenient speed, complete the work on account of which they opened or broke up the same, and fill in the ground, and make good the surface, and generally restore the street or public road to as good a condition as that in which it was before being opened or broken up, and carry away all rubbish occasioned thereby:
- (2). They shall in the meantime cause the place where the street or public road is opened or broken up to be fenced and watched, and to be properly lighted at night:
- (3). They shall pay all reasonable expenses of keeping the street or public road in good repair for six months after the same is restored, so far as such expenses may be increased by such opening or breaking up:

If the company fails to comply in any respect with the provisions of the present section, they shall for every such offence (without prejudice to the right of any person to enforce specific performance of the requirements of this act, or to any other remedy against them), be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*, and to a further penalty not exceeding 5*l.* for each day during which any such failure continues after the first day when such penalty was adjudged; and any such penalty shall (notwithstanding anything hereinbefore, or in any act relating to municipal corporations, or to the metropolitan police force, or in any other act, contained) go and belong to the body having the control of the street or public road, and shall form part of the funds applicable by them to the maintenance of the street or public road.

19. Whenever the permanent surface or soil of any street or public road is broken up or opened by the company, it shall be lawful for the body having the control of the street or road, in case they think it expedient so to do, to fill in the ground, and to make good the pavement or surface or soil so broken up or opened, and to carry away the rubbish occasioned thereby, instead of permitting such work to be done by the company; and the costs and expenses of filling in such ground, and of making good the pavement or soil so broken up or opened, shall be repaid, on demand, to the body having the control of the street or road by the company, and in default thereof may be recovered by the body having the control of the street or road from the company as a penalty is or may be recoverable from the company.

20. The company shall not stop or impede traffic in any street or public road, or into or out of any street or public road, further than is necessary for the proper execution of their works. They shall not close against traffic more than one-third in width of any street or public road, or of any way opening into any street or public road, at one time; and in case two-thirds of such street or road are not wide enough to allow two carriages to pass each other, they shall not occupy with their works at one time more than fifty yards in length of the one-third thereof, except with the special consent of the body having the control thereof.

Restrictions as to Works affecting private or Crown Property.

21. The company shall not place any work by the side of any land or building, so as to stop, hinder, or interfere with ingress or egress for any purpose to or from the same, or place any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across any land or building, except with the previous consent in every case of the owner, lessee, and occupier of such land or build-land, which consent, in case of any land or building belonging to or enjoyed by the Queen's most excellent Majesty in right of her Crown, may be given by the Commissioners for the time being of her Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues, or one of them, on behalf of her Majesty: provided always, that with respect to lands and buildings situate within the limits of the district over which the authority of the Metropolitan Board of Works extends (hereinafter referred to as the metropolis), or within the limits of any city or municipal borough or town corporate, or any town having a population of 30,000 inhabitants or upwards, according to the latest census (hereinafter referred to as a city or large town), if the body having the control of any street in the metropolis or a city or large town, consents to the placing of works by the company in, upon, over, along, or across that street, then and in every such case that consent shall (unless it is otherwise provided by the terms thereof), be sufficient authority for the company, without any further consent, except as to any land or building belonging to or enjoyed by her Majesty in right of her Crown, to place and maintain a telegraph over, along, or across any building adjoining to or near the street, and situate within the limits of the district over which the powers of the consenting body extend, or over, along, or across any land, not being laid out as building land, or not being a garden or pleasure ground, adjoining to or near the street, and situate within the same limits, subject nevertheless to the following provisions:—

- (1). Twenty-one days at least before the company proceeds to place a telegraph by virtue of the authority so conferred, they shall publish a notice stating they have obtained the consent of such body as aforesaid, and describing the intended course of such telegraph:
- (2). Where the company, by virtue of the authority so conferred, places a telegraph directly over any dwelling-house, they shall not place it at a less height above the roof thereof than six feet, if the owner, lessee, or occupier thereof objects to their placing it at a less height:
- (3). If at any time the owner, lessee, or occupier of any building or land adjoining to a building, directly over which building or land the company, by virtue of the authority so conferred, places a telegraph, desires to raise the building to a greater height, or to extend it over such land, the company shall increase the height, or otherwise alter the position of the telegraph, so that the same may not interfere with the raising or extension of the building, within fourteen days after receiving from the owner, lessee, or occupier, a notice of his intention to raise or extend the building; or in case of difference between the company and the owner, lessee, or occupier, as to his intention, then within fourteen days after receiving a certificate, signed by a justice of the peace, certifying that he is satisfied of the intention of the owner, lessee, or occupier, to raise or extend the building:
- (4). The company shall make full compensation to the owner, lessee, and occupier of any land or building over, along, or across which the company, by virtue of the authority so conferred, places a telegraph, and which may be shown to be in any respect prejudicially affected thereby, the amount of such compensation to be determined in manner provided by the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts respectively, and any act amending those acts, for the determination of the amount of compensation with respect to lands injuriously affected:

Provided also, that the consent of any person occupying as a tenant from year to year only shall not be required, nor shall any person so occupying be entitled to such compensation as aforesaid.

22. Subject and without prejudice to the foregoing provisions, the company shall not place a telegraph above ground, or a post, within ten yards of a dwelling-house, or place a telegraph above ground across an avenue or approach to a dwelling-house, except subject and according to the following restrictions and provisions:—

- (1). They shall in each such case obtain the consent of the occupier; if any, of such dwelling-house; and if there is no occupier, then of the lessee entitled to possession; and if there is none, then of the owner:

- (2). The consent of an occupier shall be effective only during the continuance of his occupation:
- (3). On the termination of the occupation of any occupier, the lessee or owner entitled to possession, if he did not consent to the placing of the telegraph or post, may give notice to the company that he requires it to be removed:
- (4). The company shall remove the same accordingly within one month after receiving such notice:
- (5). If any question arises between a lessee or owner and the company as to such removal, or the time or mode thereof, the same shall be referred to the determination in England or Ireland of two justices, and in Scotland of two justices or the sheriff, which justices or sheriff may give such directions as to such removal, and the time and mode thereof, as may seem reasonable, and may impose on the company, for not carrying such directions into effect, such penalty, not exceeding 5*l.* a day, as may seem just.

23. Before the company proceeds to place a telegraph over, along, or across a street (not being a street in the metropolis or in a city or large town) or a public road, or to place posts in or upon a street (not being such a street as aforesaid) or a public road, they shall publish a notice stating that they have obtained the consent in that behalf of the body having the control of the street or public road, and describing the intended course of the telegraph:—

- (1). By affixing such notice on some conspicuous places by the side of the part of the street or road affected, at distances of not more than one mile apart:
- (2). By leaving such notice at every dwelling-house fronting on the part of the street or road affected, and being within fifty feet thereof:
- (3). By inserting such notice as an advertisement, once at least in each of two successive weeks, in some one and the same local newspaper circulating in the neighbourhood of the part of the street or road affected:

And they shall not so place any such telegraph or post until the expiration of twenty-one days from the last publication of such advertisement.

24. At any time during such twenty-one days the owner, lessee, or occupier of any land or building adjoining to either side of such street or road, may give to the company notice of his objection to their intended works as prejudicially affecting such land or building, and send to the Board of Trade a copy of his notice of objection:

25. Until such objection is settled, or is determined in manner hereinafter provided, the company shall not execute that part of their intended works to which the objection relates.

26. As soon as may be after the receipt of such copy of notice of objection, the Board of Trade shall (unless the difference between the company and the person objecting is arranged) make inquiry and examination, and hear and determine the matter of the objection.

27. On hearing any such objection the Board of Trade—

- (1). may allow the objection, wholly or in part; or
- (2). may authorise the company to proceed with their works, subject to the provisions of this act, according to their published notice, paying to the owner, lessee, or occupier objecting, full compensation (the amount thereof to be determined, in case of difference, by the Board of Trade) for any damage done to him; or
- (3). may authorise the company to so proceed subject to any such conditions as to the time or mode of execution of any work, or as to the removal or alteration in any event of any work, or as to any other thing connected with or relative to any work, as the Board of Trade thinks fit; or
- (4). may authorise the company to so proceed, subject to any such modification of any intended work as the Board of Trade prescribes; but so that in that case such notice and opportunity of objecting and being heard as the Board of Trade directs, shall be given to any owner, lessee, or occupier, whom such modification may affect.

28. The determination of the Board of Trade on the matter of any such objection shall be final and conclusive.

29. The Board of Trade may allow to any owner, lessee, or occupier so objecting, such costs as seem just, to be paid by the company.

Removal or Alteration of Works affecting Land or Buildings.

30. Where, at any time before or after the passing of this act, the company has constructed any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across any land or building, or any street or public road adjoining to or near any land or building, and any owner, lessee, or occupier of such land or building, or any lord of a manor, or other person having any interest in such land or building, desires to build upon or inclose such land, or in any manner to improve or alter such land or building, or to use such land or building in some manner in which it was not actually used at the time of the construction of such work by the company, and with which the continuance of such work would interfere, then and in every such case the following provisions shall take effect:—

- (1). Such owner, lessee, occupier, lord of a manor, or other person interested, may give to the company a notice specifying the nature of such intended building, inclosure, improvement, alteration, or other use of the land or building, including ingress or egress thereto or therefrom, and requiring the company to remove or alter their work so that the same may not interfere therewith:
- (2). Within fourteen days after the receipt of such notice, or in case of difference between the company and the person giving the same as to his intention, then within fourteen days after the receipt of a certificate, signed by a justice of the peace, certifying that he is satisfied of the intention of such person to make such building, inclosure, improvement, alteration, or other use of the land or building, and that the continuance of such work would interfere therewith, the granting of such certificate being deemed to be a matter referred to the determination of the justice so certifying, the company shall remove or alter their work so that the same shall not interfere with such intended building, inclosure, improvement, alteration, or other use of the land or building:
- (3). When such certificate is required by the company the costs thereof, when obtained, shall be paid by the company to the person giving the notice:
- (4). Nothing herein shall empower any person to obtain the removal or alteration of any work contrary to the terms of any grant or consent in writing made or given by him, or by any person through whom he takes his estate or interest.

31. Where the company has, before the passing of this act, constructed any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across a street or public road, and the owner, lessee, or occupier of any land or building adjoining to or near the street or public road considers such land or building to be prejudicially affected by such work, then the following provisions shall take effect:

- (1). Such owner, lessee, or occupier may give to the company a notice requiring them to remove or alter such work, and specifying the grounds of such requisition:
- (2). The company either shall, within one month after receipt of such notice, remove or alter the work in accordance with the notice, or else if they do not intend to remove or alter the work in accordance with the notice, shall, within one week after receipt of the notice, deliver to the person giving the notice a counter-notice, specifying their objection to such removal or alteration:
- (3). The person giving the notice may send copies of the notice and counter-notice to the Board of Trade:
- (4). As soon as may be after receipt of such copies the Board of Trade shall (unless the difference between the person giving the notice and the company is arranged) make inquiry and examination, and hear and determine the matter of the notice and counter-notice:
- (5). Such owner, lessee, or occupier shall be entitled to obtain a direction from the Board of Trade for the removal or alteration of such work in every case where it appears to the Board of Trade that such land or building is prejudicially affected by such work, and that the removal or alteration thereof may be effected consistently with a due regard to the efficient working of the company's telegraphs, such direction nevertheless to be given on such terms and conditions as to the Board of Trade seem, according to the circumstances of the case, just and expedient, including, if it seems expedient, the condition of the payment by such owner, lessee, or occupier of any expense incurred by the company in or about such removal or alteration, the amount thereof to be determined in case of difference by the Board of Trade:

- (6). Nothing herein shall empower any person to obtain the removal or alteration of any work contrary to the terms of any grant or consent in writing made or given by him, or by any person through whom he takes his estate or interest.

Restrictions as to Works affecting Railways and Canals.

32. The company shall not place any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across any railway or canal, except with the consent of the proprietors or lessees, or of the directors or persons having the control thereof. But this provision shall not restrict the company from placing any work (subject and according to the other provisions of this act) under, in, upon, over, along, or across any street or public road, although such street or public road may cross or be crossed by a railway or canal, so that such work do not damage the railway or canal, or interfere with the use, alteration, or improvement thereof.

33. If at any time after the company has placed any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across any canal, any person having power to construct docks, basins, or other works upon any land adjoining to or near such canal constructs any dock, basin, or work on such land, but is prevented by the company's work from forming a communication for the convenient passage of vessels with or without masts between such dock, basin, or other work, and such canal, or if the business of such dock, basin, or other work is interfered with by reason or in consequence of any such work of the company, then the company, at the request of such person, and on having reasonable facilities afforded them by him for placing a telegraph round such dock, basin, or other work, under, in, upon, over, along, or across land belonging to or under his control, shall remove and place their work accordingly. If any dispute arises between the company and such person as to the facilities to be afforded to the company, or as to the direction in which the telegraph is to be placed, it shall be determined by the Board of Trade.

Appointment of Arbitrator by Board of Trade.

34. If in any case where any matter is hereinbefore authorised or directed to be determined by the Board of Trade, it appears to the Board of Trade to be expedient, for convenience of local investigation, or for any other reason, that the matter should be determined by an arbitrator, the Board of Trade may, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, and whether the Board of Trade has entered on the investigation or not, refer the matter to some competent and impartial person as arbitrator; and with respect to the matter so referred any such arbitrator shall have the like authority and jurisdiction as the Board of Trade has under this act, and his determination shall have the same effect as a determination of the Board of Trade under this act. The reasonable expenses and remuneration of the arbitrator (to be settled, in case of difference, by the Board of Trade) shall be paid by the company.

Restrictions of to Works affecting Seashore.

35. The company shall not place any work under, in, upon, over, along, or across any estuary or branch of the sea, or the shore or bed of any tidal water, except with the consent of all persons and bodies having any right of property, or other right, or any power, jurisdiction, or authority in, over, or relating to the same, which may be affected, or be liable to be affected, by the exercise of the powers of the company (which consent, where her Majesty, in right of her Crown, is interested, may be given on behalf of her Majesty by the Commissioners for the time being of her Majesty's Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues, or one of them, in writing signed by them or him).

36. Before commencing the construction of any such work as last aforesaid, or of any buoy or sea-mark connected therewith, except in cases of emergency for repairs to any work previously constructed or laid, and then, as speedily after the commencement of such work as may be, the company shall deposit at the office of the Board of Trade a plan thereof for the approval of the Board of Trade. The work shall not be constructed otherwise than in accordance with such approval. If any work is constructed contrary to this provision, the Board of Trade may, at the expense of the company, abate and remove it, or any part of it, and restore the site thereof to its former condition.

37. Notwithstanding anything in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1864, or any act amending the same, contained, the company may, in or about the construction, maintenance, or repair of any such work, use on board ship or elsewhere any light or signal allowed by any regulation to be made in that behalf by the Board of Trade.

38. If any such work, buoy, or sea-mark is abandoned, or suffered to fall into decay, the Board of Trade may, if and as they think fit, at the expense of the company, either repair and restore it, or any part of it, or abate and remove it, or any part of it, and restore the site thereof to its former condition.

39. The Board of Trade may at any time, at the expense of the company, cause to be made a survey and examination of any such work, buoy, or sea-mark, or of the site thereof.

40. Whenever the Board of Trade, under the authority of this act, does, in relation to any such work, any act or thing which they are by this act authorised to do at the expense of the company, the amount of such expense shall be a debt due to the Crown from the company, and shall be recoverable as such, with costs, or the same may be recovered, with costs, as a penalty is or may be recoverable from the company.

General Obligations and Liabilities of Company and their Servants.

41. Every telegraph of the company shall be open for the messages of all persons alike, without favour or preference; but this provision shall not prejudicially affect the operation of any lease or agreement authorised by this act.

42. The company shall be answerable for all accidents, damages, and injuries happening through the act or default of the company, or of any person in their employment by reason or in consequence of any of the company's works, and shall save harmless all bodies having the control of streets or public roads, collectively and individually, and their officers and servants, from all damages and costs in respect of such accidents and injuries.

43. The company shall not sell, transfer, or lease their undertaking or works, or any part thereof, to any other company, or to any body or person, except with the consent of the Board of Trade previously obtained for such sale, transfer, or lease; but this provision shall not, as far as it relates to leases, apply to the Universal Private Telegraph Company, constituted, by the special act of 1861, in the schedule to this act mentioned, and shall not restrict the granting of any lease by the company in pursuance of any agreement in that behalf made before the 12th February, 1863, and shall not restrict the making or carrying into effect by any company of any arrangement with any person for providing any work for his private use only.

44. The company, before exercising any power for the construction of works or the opening or breaking up of streets or public roads in any one of the three parts of the United Kingdom, shall give to the registrar of joint-stock companies acting for that part of the United Kingdom under the Companies Act, 1862, notice of the situation of some office where notices may be served on the company within that part of the United Kingdom; and the company shall from time to time give to such registrar notice of any change in the situation of such office: every such notice shall be recorded by the registrar, and the record thereof may be inspected from time to time by any person: the delivery at the office of which notice is so given of any notice, writ, summons, or other document addressed to the company shall, for the purposes of this act and all other purposes, be deemed good service on the company: the company shall, on giving each notice to the registrar under the present section, pay such fee as is payable under the last-mentioned act on registration of any document by that act required or authorised to be registered, other than a memorandum of association; and every person inspecting the record of such notice with the registrar shall pay such fee as is for the time being payable under the last-mentioned act for inspection of documents kept by the registrar under that act.

45. If any person in the employment of the company—

Willfully or negligently omits or delays to transmit or deliver any message;

Or by any wilful or negligent act or omission prevents or delays the transmission or delivery of any message;

Or improperly divulges to any person the purport of any message—

He shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20*l*.

46. Nothing in this act, and nothing in any future special act, except so far as express provision to the contrary hereof may be thereby made, shall relieve the company from being subject to any restrictions, regulations, or provisions which may hereafter be made by act of Parliament respecting telegraphs or telegraph companies or their charges.

Saving as to Restrictions on and Duties of existing Companies.

47. Nothing in this act shall affect any of the enactments specified in the schedule to this act.

Powers of her Majesty's Government over Company.

48. If one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, or the Board of Trade, or other department of her Majesty's Government, requires the company to transmit any message on her Majesty's service, such message shall (notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained) have priority over all other messages; and the company shall as soon as reasonably transmit the same, and shall, until transmission thereof, suspend the transmission or all other messages.

49. On the request of the Board of Trade, the company shall from time to time place and shall maintain such a telegraph as the Board of Trade appoints, to be for the exclusive use of her Majesty, and to be applied to such purposes, whether for the immediate service of her Majesty, or otherwise, as her Majesty thinks fit.

50. If the company refuses or neglects to place a telegraph in accordance with such request, the Board of Trade may cause such a telegraph to be placed in connexion with any of the company's works, by such persons and in such manner as the Board of Trade thinks fit, and for that purpose shall have and may exercise all the powers under this act or otherwise vested in the company; subject, nevertheless, to the restrictions and provisions under this act or otherwise applicable to the company, and without prejudice to the exercise by the company of the powers under this act or otherwise vested in them.

51. Where the company places a telegraph, in pursuance of such request of the Board of Trade, the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury shall pay to the company, as remuneration for the same, out of money to be provided by Parliament for the purpose, such sum, annual or in gross, or both, as may be settled between the Board of Trade and the company by agreement, or, in case of difference, by arbitration; such arbitration to be conducted as follows:—

(1). The Board of Trade and the company shall each, within fourteen days after the delivery by one to the other of a demand in writing for an arbitration, nominate an arbitrator:

(2). The two arbitrators nominated shall, before entering on the arbitration, nominate an umpire:

(3). If either party or arbitrator makes default in nominating an arbitrator or umpire within fourteen days after receiving from the other a demand in writing for such nomination, the Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster may, on the request of the Board of Trade, or of the company, by writing under his hand, nominate an arbitrator or umpire:

(4). The arbitrators shall make their award within twenty-eight days after their nomination, otherwise the matter shall be left to be determined by the umpire:

- (5). The umpire shall make his award within twenty-eight days after notice from the arbitrators or one of them that the matter is left to be determined by him; or, on default, a new umpire shall be appointed as nearly as may be in manner aforesaid, who shall make his award within the like time, or on default be superseded; and so toties quoties :

The award of the arbitrators or umpire shall be final and conclusive as between the Board of Trade and the company.

52. Where, in the opinion of one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, an emergency has arisen in which it is expedient for the public service that her Majesty's Government should have control over the transmission of messages by the company's telegraphs, the Secretary of State, by warrant under his hand, may direct and cause the company's works, or any part thereof, to be taken possession of in the name and on behalf of her Majesty, and to be used for her Majesty's service, and, subject thereto, for such ordinary service as may seem fit; or may direct and authorise such persons as he thinks fit to assume the control of the transmission of messages by the company's telegraphs, either wholly or partly, and in such manner as he directs. Any such warrant shall not have effect for a longer time than one week from the issuing thereof; but the Secretary of State may issue successive warrants from week to week as long as, in his opinion, such emergency continues. The Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury shall pay to the company, as compensation for any loss of profit sustained by the company by reason of the exercise by the Secretary of State of any of the powers of the present section, out of money to be provided by Parliament for the purpose, such sum as may be settled between the Secretary of State and the company by agreement, or, in case of difference, by arbitration,—such arbitration to be conducted in manner provided in the last foregoing section, the Secretary of State being only substituted for the Board of Trade.

53. Where it appears to the Board of Trade that any provision of this act has not been complied with on the part of the company, and that it would be for the public advantage that compliance therewith should be enforced, the Board of Trade may certify accordingly to her Majesty's Attorney-General for England or for Ireland, or to the Lord Advocate for Scotland, as the case may require; and thereupon the Attorney-General or Lord Advocate may, by such civil or criminal proceeding as the case may require, enforce compliance with such provision, by the recovery of penalties, or otherwise according to law. But no such certificate shall be made by the Board of Trade until the expiration of twenty-one days after they have given notice to the company of their intention to make the same. This provision shall be deemed to be cumulative, and to be without prejudice to any other remedy or process against the company on the part of her Majesty or of any person or body.

CAP. CXIII.

An Act to prohibit the Sale and Use of poisoned Grain or Seed. [26th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title of act.

2. Penalty for sowing poisoned grain, seed, or meal.

3. Penalty for sowing &c. poisoned grain, seed, or meal.

4. Solutions or infusions, &c. allowed for use in agriculture.

5. Recovery of penalties. Application of stats. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, to this act. Informer (not a constable) entitled to moiety of penalty. Indemnity to witnesses, &c.

Whereas it is expedient to prohibit the sale and use of poisoned grain or seed: be it enacted, &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Poisoned Grain Prohibition Act, 1863."

2. Every person who shall offer or expose for sale or sell any grain, seed, or meal which has been so steeped or dipped in poison, or with which any poison or any ingredient or preparation has been so mixed, as thereby to render the same poisonous, and calculated to destroy life, shall in either case for every such offence, upon summary conviction, as hereinafter provided, forfeit any sum not exceeding 10*l*.

3. Every person who shall knowingly and wilfully sow, cast, set, lay, put, or place, or cause to be sown, cast, set, laid, put, or placed, into, in, or upon any ground or other exposed place or situation, any such grain, seed, or meal which has been so steeped or dipped in poison, or with which poison or any ingredient or preparation has been so mixed as thereby to render such grain, seed, or meal poisonous, and calculated to destroy life, shall, upon a summary conviction thereof as hereinafter provided, forfeit any sum not exceeding 10*l*.

4. Nothing in this act shall prohibit the offering or exposing for sale or selling or the use of any solution or infusion, or any material or ingredient for dressing, protecting, or preparing any grain or seed for bona fide use in agriculture only, or the sowing of such last-mentioned grain or seed so prepared.

5. All penalties imposed by this act may be recovered in England and Ireland before two justices of the peace, and in Scotland before two justices of the peace or the sheriff; and for that purpose, in England and Scotland, the provisions of the act of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and in Ireland the "Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851," shall extend and apply to this act, and to all proceedings in relation thereto; and it shall not, in any such proceedings, be necessary to allege or prove the ground or other place where an offence is committed to be the property of or occupied by any person: provided always, that the convicting justices or sheriff may, if they or he shall think fit, award to the informer or prosecutor (not being a police constable or peace officer) in any such proceedings any portion, not exceeding one moiety, of any penalty recovered under the aforesaid enactments: provided also, that every informer or prosecutor, and every person who shall give evidence against any other person proceeded against under this act, shall be freed and discharged from any such penalty which he may have incurred for or by reason of his having participated or aided in the commission of the offence with respect to which he shall so inform or prosecute or give evidence, provided the information against such other person has been laid, or such evidence has been given, before the laying of any information (if any) against such informer, prosecutor, or witness, for the recovery of any penalty he may have so incurred.

2. Power to medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances to inspect any animal, &c.

3. Penalty for obstructing medical officer of health, &c.

4. This and recited act to be as one act.

5. Short title.

Whereas the provisions of the Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855, with regard to the inspection and seizure of diseased and unwholesome meat, are defective; and it is, therefore, expedient that the same should be repealed, and that other and more effectual provisions in that behalf should be substituted therefor: be it therefore enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. From and after the passing of this act, the 26th section of the said act is repealed.

2. The medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances may at all reasonable times inspect and examine any animal, carcase, meat, poultry, game, flesh, fish, fruit, vegetables, corn, bread, or flour exposed for sale, or deposited in any place for the purpose of sale, or of preparation for sale, and intended for the food of man, the proof that the same was not exposed or deposited for such purpose or purposes, or was not intended for the food of man, resting with the party charged; and in case any such animal, carcase, meat, poultry, game, flesh, fish, fruit, vegetables, corn, bread, or flour appear to him to be diseased, or unsound, or unwholesome, or unfit for the food of man, it shall be lawful for such medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances to seize, take, and carry away the same, or direct the same to be seized, taken, and carried away by any officer, servant, or assistant, in order to have the same dealt with by a justice; and if it shall appear to the justice that any such animal, or any of the said articles, is diseased, or unsound, or unwholesome, or unfit for the food of man, he shall order the same to be destroyed, or so disposed of as to prevent such animal or articles from being exposed for sale or used for such food; and the person to whom such animal, carcase, meat, poultry, game, flesh, fish, fruit, vegetables, corn, bread, or flour belongs, or did belong, at the time of sale, or of exposure for sale, or in whose possession, or on whose premises, the same is found, shall, upon conviction, be liable to a penalty not exceeding 20l. for every animal, carcase, or fish, or piece of meat, flesh, or fish, or any poultry or game, or for the parcel of fruit, vegetables, corn, bread, or flour so found, or, at the discretion of the justice, without the infliction of a fine, to imprisonment in the common gaol or house of correction for a term of not more than three calendar months.

3. In case any person shall in any manner prevent such medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances from entering any slaughter-house, shop, building, market, or other place where such animal, carcase, meat, poultry, or fish is kept for the purpose of sale, or of preparation for sale, or shall in any manner obstruct or impede him, or his servant or assistant, when duly engaged in carrying the provisions of this act into execution, such person shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5l.

4. This act and the Nuisances Removal Act for England, 1855, shall be read and construed together as one act.

5. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Nuisances Removal Act for England (Amendment) Act, 1863."

Whereas the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Companies Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, respectively, were passed in order to comprise in one general act such provisions relating to the constitution and management of joint-stock companies incorporated for the purpose of carrying on undertakings of a public nature in England or Ireland, or in Scotland, respectively, as were at the times of the passing of those acts usually introduced into acts of Parliament relating to such companies:

And whereas sundry provisions of the like nature, but not comprised in the said general acts respectively, are now frequently introduced into acts of Parliament relating to such companies, and it is expedient to comprise such last-mentioned provisions also in one general act, such act to be applicable to England or Ireland, or to Scotland, as the case may require, and that as well for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of repeating such provisions in the acts relating to such undertakings, as for insuring greater uniformity in the provisions themselves:

Be it therefore enacted, &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Companies Clauses Act, 1863."

2. This act shall be deemed to be divided into four parts, as follows:—

Part I, relating to cancellation and surrender of shares;

Part II, relating to additional capital;
Part III, relating to debenture stock;
Part IV, relating to change of name.

PART I.—CANCELLATION AND SURRENDER OF SHARES.

3. This part of this act shall apply to every company incorporated either before or after the passing of this act which obtains a special act incorporating this part of this act.

4. Where any share of the capital of the company is after the passing of this act declared forfeited under and in pursuance of the provisions with respect to the forfeiture of shares for nonpayment of calls contained in the Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Companies Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, respectively, and the forfeiture is confirmed by a meeting in accordance with the same provisions respectively, and notice of the forfeiture has been given,—then and in every such case, if the directors of the company are unable to sell the share for a sum equal to the arrears of calls and interest and expenses due in respect thereof, the company at any general meeting held not less than two months after such notice is given may, in case payment of the arrears of calls, interest, and expenses due in respect thereof is not made by the registered holder of the share before the meeting is held, resolve that the share instead of being sold shall be cancelled, and the share shall thereupon be cancelled accordingly.

5. A declaration in writing made by some credible person, in England or Ireland before a justice, and in Scotland before any sheriff or justice, stating that a sum of money sufficient to pay the arrears of calls, interest, and expenses due in respect of the share, could not, at the time of the cancellation of the share, be obtained for the same upon the Stock Exchange prescribed in the special act; and if no Stock Exchange is prescribed, then upon the Stock Exchange, as to England, of the city of London, and as to Scotland, of the city of Edinburgh, and as to Ireland, of the city of Dublin, shall be sufficient evidence of the fact so declared.

6. Where it is so resolved that any share shall be cancelled, the holder thereof shall, from and after the passing of the resolution, be precluded from all right and interest therein and in respect thereof; but the cancellation shall not affect the liability of the last registered holder of the share to pay to the company all arrears of calls, interest, and expenses due in respect of the share at the time of the cancellation, or the power of the company to enforce payment thereof by action or otherwise.

7. Provided always, that if the company enforces the payment of the arrears of calls, interest, and expenses, under the last preceding provision, the value of the share at the time of the cancellation thereof shall be deducted from the amount so then due: provided also, that if payment of all arrears of calls, interest, and expenses is made before such meeting as aforesaid is held, the share shall revert to the person to whom it belonged at the time of forfeiture, and shall be re-entered on the company's register accordingly.

8. Where any share is declared forfeited, or where any sum payable on any share remains unpaid, the company, with the consent in writing of the registered holder of the share, and with the sanction of a general meeting, may resolve that the share shall be cancelled, and immediately thereupon the share shall be cancelled, and all liabilities and rights with respect to the share shall thereupon be absolutely extinguished.

9. The company may from time to time accept, on such terms as they think fit, surrenders of any shares which have not been fully paid up.

10. The company shall not pay or refund to any shareholder any sum of money for or in respect of the cancellation or surrender of any share.

11. The company may from time to time, in lieu of any shares that have been cancelled or surrendered, issue new shares of such amounts as will allow the same to be conveniently apportioned or disposed of according to the resolution of any ordinary or extraordinary meeting of the company, and may from time to time fix the amounts and times of payment of the calls on any such new shares, and dispose thereof on such terms and conditions as may be so resolved upon: provided, that the aggregate nominal amount of the new shares shall not exceed the aggregate nominal amount of the shares in lieu of which the new shares are issued, after deducting the amount actually paid up in respect of the shares cancelled or surrendered.

PART II.—ADDITIONAL CAPITAL.

New Ordinary Shares or Stock.

12. Where any company, incorporated either before or after the passing of this act for the purpose of carrying on any undertaking, is authorised by any special act hereafter passed, and incorporating this part of this act, to raise any additional sum or sums by the issue of new ordinary shares, or by the issue of new ordinary stock, or (at the option of the company) by either of those modes, then and in every such case the company, with the sanction of such proportion of the votes of the shareholders and stockholders entitled to vote in that behalf at meetings of the company, present (personally or by proxy) at a meeting of the company specially convened for the purpose, as is prescribed in the special act, and if no proportion is prescribed, then of three-fifths of such votes, may, for the purpose of raising the additional sum or sums, from time to time create and issue (according as the authority given by the special act extends to shares only, or to stock only, or to both) such new ordinary shares, of such nominal amount, and subject to the payment of calls of such amounts, and at such times, as the company thinks fit, or such new ordinary stock as the company thinks fit.

Preference Shares or Stock.

13. Where any such company is authorised by any special act hereafter passed and incorporating this part of this act to raise any additional sum or sums by the issue of new preference shares, or by the issue of new preference stock, or (at the option of the company) by either of those modes, then and in every such case the company, with the like sanction as aforesaid, may, for the purpose of raising such additional sum or sums from time to time create and issue (according as the authority given by the special act extends to shares only, or to stock only, or to both) such new shares or new stock, either ordinary or preference, and either of one class, and with like privileges, or of several classes, and with different privileges, and of the same or different amounts, and respectively with any fixed, fluctuating, contingent, preferential, perpetual, terminable, deferred, or other dividend or interest, not exceeding the rate prescribed in the special act; and if no rate is prescribed, then not exceeding the rate of 5l. per centum per annum, and subject (as to any such new shares) to the payment of calls of such amounts, and at such times, as the company from time to time thinks fit:

Provided always, that any preference assigned to any shares or stock so issued under the special act shall not affect any guarantee, or any preference or priority in the payment of dividend or interest, on any shares or stock, that may have been granted by the company under, or confirmed by, any previous act, or that may be otherwise lawfully subsisting.

14. The preference shares or preference stock so issued shall be entitled to the preferential dividend or interest assigned thereto, out of the profits of each year, in priority to the ordinary shares and ordinary stock of the company; but if in any year ending on the day prescribed in the special act, and if no day is prescribed, then on the 31st December, there are not profits available for the payment of the full amount of preferential dividend or interest for that year, no part of the deficiency shall be made good out of the profits of any subsequent year, or out of any other funds of the company.

15. The terms and conditions to which any preference share or preference stock is subject shall be clearly stated on the certificate of that preference share or portion of preference stock.

General Provisions as to new Shares or Stock.

16. If, after having created new shares or new stock, the company determines not to issue the whole of the new shares or new stock, they may cancel the unissued new shares or new stock.

17. If, at the time of the issue of new shares or new stock, the ordinary shares or ordinary stock of the company are or is at a premium, then, unless the company before the issue of the new shares or new stock otherwise determines, the new shares or new stock then issued shall be of such amount as will conveniently allow the same to be apportioned among the then holders of the ordinary stock and ordinary shares, respectively, in proportion, as nearly as conveniently may be, to the ordinary shares and ordinary stock held by them respectively, and shall be offered to them at par in that proportion; provided, that it shall not be obligatory on the company so to apportion or offer any new shares or new stock unless the amount of every new share or portion of new stock to be so offered would if so apportioned be at least the sum prescribed in the special act, and if no sum is prescribed then at least 10l.

18. The offer of new shares or new stock shall be made by letter under the hand of the treasurer or secretary of the company given to every such shareholder or stockholder as aforesaid, or sent by post addressed to him according to his address in the shareholders' or stockholders' address book, or left for him at his usual or then last-known place of abode in England, Scotland, or Ireland (as the case may require); and every such offer made by letter sent by post shall be considered as made on the day on which the letter in due course of delivery ought to be delivered at the place to which it is addressed.

19. The new shares or portions of new stock so offered shall vest in and belong to the shareholders or stockholders who accept the same, or their nominees.

20. If any shareholder or stockholder fails for the time prescribed in the special act, and if no time is prescribed, then for one month, after the offer to him of new shares or new stock, to signify his acceptance of the same, or any part thereof, then and in every such case, at the expiration of that period, he shall be deemed to have declined the offer of such new shares or new stock, or such part thereof, as aforesaid, and the same may be disposed of by the company as herein-after provided:

Provided, that where a shareholder or stockholder, from absence abroad or other cause satisfactory to the directors of the company, omits to signify within the time aforesaid his acceptance of the new shares or new stock offered to him, the directors, if they think proper, may permit him to accept the same, notwithstanding that such time has elapsed.

21. Subject to the foregoing provisions, the company may from time to time dispose of new shares and new stock at such times, to such persons, on such terms and conditions, and in such manner, as the directors think advantageous to the company, but so that not less than the full nominal amount of any share or portion of stock be payable or paid in respect thereof.

PART III.—DEBENTURE STOCK.

22. Where any company, incorporated either before or after the passing of this act for the purpose of carrying on any undertaking, is authorised by any special act hereafter passed, and incorporating this part of this act, to create and issue debenture stock, then and in every such case the company, with the sanction of such proportion of the votes of the shareholders and stockholders entitled to vote in that behalf at meetings of the company, present (personally or by proxy) at a meeting of the company specially convened for the purpose, as is prescribed in the special act, and if no proportion is prescribed, then of three fifth of such votes, may from time to time raise all or any part of the money which for the time being they have raised, or are authorised to raise, on mortgage or bond, by the creation and issue, at such times, in such amounts and manner, on such terms, subject to such conditions, and with such rights and privileges, as the company thinks fit, of stock to be called debenture stock, instead of and to the same amount as the whole or any part of the money which may for the time being be owing by the company on mortgage or bond, or which they may from time to time have power to raise on mortgage or bond, and may attach to the stock so created such fixed and perpetual preferential interest not exceeding the rate prescribed in the special act, and if no rate is prescribed, then not exceeding the rate of 4l. per centum per annum, payable half-yearly or otherwise, and commencing at once, or at any future time or times, when and as the debenture stock is issued, or otherwise, as the company thinks fit.

23. Debenture stock, with interest thereon, shall be a charge upon the undertaking of the company, prior to all shares or stock of the company, and shall be transmissible and transferable in the same manner and according to the same regulations and provisions as other stock of the company, and shall in all other respects have the incidents of personal estate.

24. The interest on debenture stock shall have priority of payment over all dividends or interest on any shares or stock of the company, whether ordinary or preference or guaranteed, and shall rank next to the interest payable on the mortgages or bonds for the time being of the company legally granted before the creation of such stock; but the holders of debenture stock shall not, as among themselves, be entitled to any preference or priority.

25. If within thirty days after the interest on any such debenture stock is payable the same is not paid, any one or more of the holders of the debenture stock holding, individually or collectively, the sum in nominal amount thereof prescribed in the special act, and if no sum is prescribed, then a sum equal to one tenth of the aggregate amount which the company is for the time being authorised to raise by mortgage, by bond, and by debenture stock, or the sum of 10,000*l.*, whichever of the two last-mentioned sums is the smaller sum, may (without prejudice to the right to sue in any court of competent jurisdiction for the interest in arrear) require the appointment in England or Ireland of a receiver, and in Scotland of a judicial factor.

26. Every such application for a receiver shall be made to two justices, and every such application for a judicial factor shall be made to the court of session; and on any such application the justices or court (as the case may be), by order in writing, after hearing the parties, may appoint some person to receive the whole or a competent part of the tolls or sums liable to the payment of the interest, until all the arrears of interest then due on the debenture stock, with all costs, including the charges of receiving the tolls or sums, are fully paid; and upon such appointment being made, all such tolls or sums shall be paid to and received by the person so appointed; and all money so received shall be deemed so much money received by or to the use of the several persons interested in the same, according to their several priorities.

The receiver or judicial factor shall distribute rateably and without priority, among all the proprietors of debenture stock to whom interest is in arrear, the money which so comes to his hands, after applying a sufficient part thereof in or towards satisfaction of the interest on the mortgages and bonds of the company.

As soon as the full amount of interest and costs has been so received, the power of the receiver or judicial factor shall cease, and he shall be bound to account to the company for his acts or intromissions or the sums received by him, and to pay over to the company any balance that may be in his hands.

27. If the interest on debenture stock is in arrear for thirty days next after any of the respective days whereon the same is payable, the holder for the time being thereof may (without prejudice to his power to apply for the appointment of a receiver or judicial factor) recover the arrears with costs by action or suit against the company in any court of competent jurisdiction.

28. The company shall cause entries of the debenture stock from time to time created to be made in a register to be kept for that purpose, wherein they shall enter the names and addresses of the several persons and corporations from time to time entitled to the debenture stock, with the respective amounts of the stock to which they are respectively entitled; and the register shall be accessible for inspection and perusal at all reasonable times to every mortgagee, bondholder, debenture stockholder, shareholder, and stockholder of the company, without the payment of any fee or charge.

29. The company shall deliver to every holder of debenture stock a certificate stating the amount of debenture stock held by him; and all regulations or provisions for the time being applicable to certificates of shares in the capital of the company shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to certificates of debenture stock.

30. Nothing herein or in the special act authorising the issue of debenture stock contained shall in any way affect any mortgage or bond at any time legally granted by the company before the creation of such stock, or any power of the company, to raise money on mortgage or bond, but the holders of all such mortgages and bonds shall, during the continuance thereof respectively, be entitled to the same priorities, rights, and privileges in all respects as they would have been entitled to if the special act authorising the issue of debenture stock had not been passed.

31. Debenture stock shall not entitle the holders thereof to be present or vote at any meeting of the company, or confer any qualification, but shall, in all respects not otherwise by or under this act or the special act provided for, be considered as entitling the holders to the rights and powers of mortgagees of the undertaking other than the right to require repayment of the principal money paid up in respect of the debenture stock.

32. Money raised by debenture stock shall be applied exclusively either in paying off money due by the company on mortgage or bond, or else for the purposes to which the same money would be applicable if it were raised on mortgage or bond instead of on debenture stock.

33. Separate and distinct accounts shall be kept by the company, shewing how much money has been received for or on account of debenture stock, and how much money borrowed or owing on mortgage or bond, or which they have power so to borrow, has been paid off by debenture stock, or raised thereby, instead of being borrowed on mortgage or bond.

34. The powers of borrowing and reborrowing by the company shall, to the extent of the money raised by the issue of debenture stock, be extinguished.

35. The provisions of this part of this act shall be deemed to apply to mortgage preference stock, and to funded debt, as the case may require, in all respects as if mortgage preference stock or funded debt were mentioned throughout this part of this act wherever debenture stock is mentioned therein.

PART IV.—CHANGE OF NAME.

36. Where by any special act hereafter passed and incorporating this part of this act the name of any company incorporated either before or after the passing of this act for the purpose of carrying on any undertaking is changed, then and in every such case from the passing of the special act the company by their new name shall have and may exercise the powers then vested in the company by their original name; and all acts relating to the company by their original name shall be read and interpreted as if throughout those acts, wherever the original name of the company or any reference to the company by their original name occurs, the new name of the company or a reference to the company by their new name were substituted.

37. No action, suit, bill, process, writ, indictment, information, or other proceeding, whether civil or criminal, which at or immediately before the passing of the special act is commenced and is then pending,—either at the suit or instance of the company, by their original name, against any other corporation or any person, or at the suit or instance of any other corporation or any person against the company, by their original name,—shall abate, determine, or be otherwise impeached or affected for or by reason of the change of the name of the company; nor shall any notice, tender, requisition, warrant, summons, pleading, civil or criminal writ or other process, record, deed, contract, agreement, writing or instrument then or thereafter to be made, issued, written, or commenced, be deemed to be vacated, discharged, invalidated, prejudiced, or affected by reason of the company or their undertaking being therein respectively called by the original name of the company or undertaking; and it shall not be necessary in any bill, suit, indictment, information, proceeding, notice, tender, requisition, warrant, summons, pleading, civil or criminal writ, or other process, or in any record, deed, contract, agreement, writing, or other instrument or matter, to aver that the company had been called or known for any period by the original name of the company, or that their undertaking had been called or known within that period by the original name of the undertaking, and that by the special act effecting the change the names of the company and their undertaking were changed, and that after the passing of that special act the company had been called or known by their new name, and their undertaking by its new name; but it shall be deemed true, lawful, and sufficient therein to aver the style and describe the company by their new name, and their undertaking by its new name, in the same manner as if the company had been originally incorporated, called, or known by their new name, and as if their undertaking had been originally called or known by its new name.

38. Notwithstanding the change of the name of the company, everything before the passing of the special act effecting the change done, suffered, or confirmed under or by virtue of any other act shall be as valid as if the special act effecting the change were not passed; and the change of name and last-mentioned special act respectively shall accordingly be subject and without prejudice to everything so done, suffered, or confirmed before the passing of the last-mentioned special act, and to all rights, liabilities, claims, and demands, then present or future, which, if the change of name had not happened and such last-mentioned special act had not been passed, would be incident to or consequent on anything so done, suffered, or confirmed.

30. Notwithstanding the change of the name of the company, all deeds, instruments, purchases, sales, securities, and contracts before the passing of the special act effecting the change made under any other act, or with reference to the purposes thereof, shall be as effectual to all intents in favour of, against, and with respect to the company as if the name of the company had remained unchanged.

CAP. CXIX.

An Act to prevent false Representations as to Grants of Medals or Certificates made by the Commissioners for the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1862. [28th July, 1863.]

SECT. 1. Penalty on false representations. As to having obtained medals.

2. Provisions as to proceedings under this act.

3. Definition of terms.

4. Recovery of penalties.

5. Conviction not to affect any right or civil remedy.

6. Short title.

Whereas it is expedient to prevent false representations with respect to grants of medals and certificates by the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 and the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1862: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

SECT. 1. If any trader commits any of the offences following; that is to say,

(1). Falsely represents that he has obtained a medal or certificate from the Exhibition Commissioners in respect of any article or process for which a medal or certificate has been awarded by the commissioners:

(2). Falsely represents (knowing such representation to be false) that any other trader has obtained a medal or certificate from the Exhibition Commissioners:

(3). Falsely represents (knowing such representation to be false) that any article sold or exposed for sale has been made by, or by any process invented by, a person who has obtained in respect of such article or process a medal or certificate from the Exhibition Commissioners:

He shall incur the following penalties; that is to say,

(1). For the first offence he shall forfeit to her Majesty a sum not exceeding 5*l*.

(2). For any subsequent offence he shall forfeit to her Majesty a sum not exceeding 20*l*., or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding six months.

2. In proceedings under this act it shall not be necessary to prove that any person has sustained damage by the false representations of the defendant.

It shall not be necessary in any proceedings under this act to set out any copy or fac-simile of any medal or certificate.

3. For the purposes of this act "The Exhibition Commissioners" shall mean the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1851 and the Commissioners for the Exhibition of 1862, or either of such bodies of commissioners.

The term "defendant" shall mean any person against whom proceedings may be taken under this act.

4. Offences under this act may be prosecuted summarily in England and Ireland before two justices; as to England, in manner directed by an act passed in the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary Convictions and Orders," or any act amending the same; as to Ireland, in manner directed by the act passed in the session holden in the 14 & 15 Vict., intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts regulating the Proceedings in Petty Sessions, and the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Quarter Sessions in Ireland," or any act amending the same.

In Scotland, an offence against this act may be prosecuted summarily at the instance of the procurator fiscal before any sheriff or sheriff substitute, or before any two justices of the county, or before the magistrates or any police magistrate of the burgh in which the offence was committed.

5. No provision of this act shall take away, diminish, or prejudicially affect any suit, process, proceeding, right, or remedy which any person may be entitled to at law, in equity, or otherwise; nor exempt or excuse any person from answering or making discovery upon examination as a witness, or upon interrogatories or otherwise, in any suit or other civil proceeding: provided always, that no evidence, statement, or discovery which any person shall be compelled to give or make shall be admissible in evidence against such person in support of any indictment for a misdemeanour at common law or otherwise, or of any proceeding under the provisions of this act.

6. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Exhibition Medals Act, 1863."

CAP. CXX.

An Act for the Augmentation of certain Benefices, the Right of Presentation to which is vested in the Lord Chancellor. [28th July, 1863.]

SECT. 1. Power to Lord Chancellor to sell advowsons in first schedule.

2. Parties desirous of purchasing to make an offer to Lord Chancellor, stating terms.

3. More offers than one may be received.

4. Power to Lord Chancellor to require from incumbents a return of income and outgoings.

5. Purchasers may pay the money into the Bank, or in other modes, with consent of Lord Chancellor.

6. Purchase money may be applied under direction of Lord Chancellor.

7. Annuities or rent-charges may be purchased.

8. Parsonage houses may be built out of purchase money.

9. What proportion may be applied to augmentation of living.

10. Inquiry as to title and the sufficiency of value of proposed security.

11. Form of instrument of conveyance.

12. Form of annuity.

13. Form of mortgage.

14. Incidents of annuity.

15. Annuity to be payable half-yearly.

CAP. CXXI.

An Act to establish the Validity of Acts performed in Her Majesty's Possessions abroad by certain Clergymen ordained in Foreign Parts, and to extend the Powers of Colonial Legislatures with respect to such Clergymen.

[28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Colonial legislatures may authorise exercise of clerical functions by persons ordained by bishops consecrated under the 26 Geo. 3, c. 84.

2. Acts heretofore performed by such persons to be valid.

Whereas, by the 3rd section of an act passed in the 26 Geo. 3, c. 84, intituled "An Act to empower the Archbishop of Canterbury or the Archbishop of York for the Time being to consecrate to the Office of a Bishop Persons being Subjects or Citizens of Countries out of His Majesty's Dominions," it was enacted, that no person or persons admitted to the order of deacon or priest by any bishop or bishops so consecrated, or by the successor or successors of any bishop or bishops so consecrated, should be thereby enabled to exercise his or their respective office or offices within his Majesty's dominions: and whereas by an act passed by the Legislature of Barbadoes, in the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 20, intituled "An Act to enable the Reverend Joseph Shepherd Mayers to exercise his Office of Clergyman within this Island," it was enacted, that it should be lawful for the said Reverend Joseph Shepherd Mayers to exercise the office of priest, and the said Reverend Joseph Shepherd Mayers hath from that time exercised the said office in the island of Barbadoes: and whereas it is apprehended that divers persons, having been ordained by such bishop or bishops as aforesaid, or their successors, have at times exercised their respective offices in British colonies: and whereas doubts are entertained respecting the validity of the aforesaid act passed by the Legislature of Barbadoes, and of the marriages solemnised and other acts performed by the said Reverend Joseph Shepherd Mayers under the authority of the said act, or by other persons so ordained as aforesaid, and it is advisable to remove such doubts, and to define the power of colonial legislatures in this respect: be it hereby enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. It shall be lawful for the legislature of any of her Majesty's possessions abroad, by any law or laws to be by them passed, to authorise any persons admitted to the order of priest or deacon by any of such bishops as are mentioned in the first-recited act, to exercise their respective offices in such possession, anything in the aforesaid act of Parliament to the contrary notwithstanding, and all laws heretofore passed by any such legislature for that purpose shall be, and the same are hereby declared to be, valid and effectual to all intents and purposes.

2. All acts heretofore performed in any British colony by any person having been admitted to the office of priest or deacon by any of such bishops as aforesaid, or of their successors, shall be as valid and effectual at law for all purposes whatever as if such person had been so admitted by a bishop or bishops of the United Church of Great Britain and Ireland.

CAP. CXXII.

An Act to enable Her Majesty in Council to make Alterations in the Circuits of the Judges. [28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Power to her Majesty in Council to alter circuits of judges.

2. Powers in sect. 3 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 71, extended to this act.

3. Power to Treasury, with sanction of Lord Chief Justices and Lord Chief Baron, to alter salaries of clerks of assize on alteration of circuits.

4. Power to alter numbers of revising barristers to be appointed within circuits affected by alterations.

Whereas it is expedient to make provision for such alterations in the circuits of her Majesty's judges as may from time to time appear to be necessary for the better despatch of assize business in England and Wales: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Sect. 1. Her Majesty, by and with the advice of her most honourable Privy Council, shall have power from time to time to order and direct that the circuits of her Majesty's judges in England and Wales, or any of such circuits, shall be altered, by taking away from any circuit any county or counties, or any part or parts of any county or counties, and annexing the same to any other circuit or circuits; and every such alteration shall take effect upon and from the date of the Order in Council in and by which the same shall be ordered and directed, or from such other time as shall be provided in such order.

2. All the powers and provisions contained in the 3rd section of the act of the session of Parliament holden in the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 71, shall extend, so far as the same are applicable, to all Orders in Council to be made and to all acts to be done by virtue of this act, and may be used and applied for any of the purposes herein mentioned.

3. It shall be lawful for the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury for the time being, and they are hereby authorised and required, by and with the sanction of the Lord Chief Justices and the Lord Chief Baron, to make such alterations in the amount of the salaries of any of the officers mentioned in Schedule (B.) to the act of the session of Parliament holden in the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 73, as may appear to the said Lords Commissioners, by and with such sanction as aforesaid, to be reasonable and proper upon and in consequence of any alteration to be made in any of the circuits by virtue of this act; and all such new or altered salaries shall be deemed to have been fixed and appointed under and subject to the provisions of the said last-mentioned act.

4. And whereas by the 28th section of the act of Parliament holden in the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 13, it is enacted, that, except as is hereinafter provided, no greater number of barristers shall be appointed in any year to revise the lists of voters in the election of members to serve in Parliament for the several counties, cities, boroughs, and places within the several circuits in England and Wales than as therein provided: be it enacted, that upon any alteration or alterations being made in any of the said circuits by her Majesty in Council by virtue of this act, it shall also be lawful for her Majesty, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to order and direct that the number of revising barristers to be appointed for the several counties, cities, boroughs, and places within any circuit or circuits affected by such alteration or alterations as aforesaid, shall be increased or diminished as to her Majesty, by and with such advice as aforesaid, may seem meet, anything in the last-recited act to the contrary notwithstanding; provided always, that the present total number of revising barristers shall not be augmented otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of the 29th section of the said last-mentioned act.

CAP. CXXIII.

An Act to amend the Law relating to District Parochial Churches in Ireland. [28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Power to churchwardens of district parochial churches erected under provisions of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 17, to levy pew rents. As to situation of free sittings.

2. Application of pew rents.

CAP. CXXIV.

An Act for the more effectual Condensation of Muriatic Acid Gas in Alkali Works. [28th July, 1863.]

Sect. 1. Short title.

2. Commencement of act.

3. Interpretation of terms.

4. As to the conduct of alkali works.

5. Owner to be liable for offences in the first instance, unless he prove that the offence was committed by some agent, &c., without his knowledge, in which case such agent, &c. to be liable.

6. As to the registration of alkali works.

7. Appointment of inspectors.

8. What persons disqualified from acting as inspectors.

9. Duties and power of inspector.

10. Salaries of inspectors and sub-inspectors.

11. General penalties on violation of act.

12. Inspector to report to Parliament.

13. Power to owners of works to make special rules.

14. As to recovery of penalties in England for other than offences against a special rule.

15. As to recovery of general penalties in Scotland.

16. As to recovery of general penalties in Ireland.
17. Application of penalties.
18. As to recovery of penalties for offences against special rule.
19. Term of act.

Whereas it is expedient to provide for the better condensation of the muriatic acid gas evolved in alkali works: be it enacted &c., as follows:—

Preliminary.

- Sect. 1. This act may be cited as "The Alkali Act, 1863."
2. This act shall come into operation on the 1st January, 1864.

3. The term "alkali work," as hereinafter used, shall mean every work for the manufacture of alkali, sulphate of soda, or sulphate of potash in which muriatic acid gas is evolved:

The term "owner," as hereinafter used, shall mean the lessee or occupier or any other person carrying on any alkali work:

The term "the inspector" shall mean the inspector to be appointed under this act.

Alkali Works.

4. Every alkali work shall be carried on in such manner as to secure the condensation to the satisfaction of the inspector, derived from his own examination or from that of a sub-inspector, of not less than ninety-five per centum of the muriatic acid gas evolved therein: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall entitle the inspector to direct any alteration to be made in the process of manufacture or the apparatus used therein.

If any alkali work is carried on in contravention of this section, the owner of that work shall, on its being made to appear to the court before which any proceedings for recovery of a penalty may be instituted that ninety-five per centum at least of the muriatic acid gas evolved in such work has not been condensed, be deemed to be guilty of an offence against this act, and be subject in respect of the first conviction to a penalty not exceeding 50*l.*, and in respect of every offence after a previous conviction to a penalty not exceeding 100*l.*: provided always, that no such owner shall be convicted of more than one such offence in respect of any one day: provided also, that no such penalty shall be inflicted unless the inspector shall produce before the court having cognisance of the matter a statement in writing of the facts on which he founds his opinion that ninety-five per centum of the muriatic acid gas evolved in the alkali work is not condensed therein, and serve a copy thereof with the process commencing the proceedings.

5. The owner of any alkali work in which any offence against this act has been proved to have been committed, and for which a pecuniary penalty may be imposed, shall in every case be deemed to have committed the offence, and shall be liable to pay the penalty, unless he shall prove to the satisfaction of the court before which any action shall be brought for the recovery of such penalty that he has used due diligence to comply with and to enforce the execution of this act, and that the offence in question was committed by some agent, servant, or workman, whom he shall charge by name as the actual offender, without his knowledge, consent, or connivance, in which case such agent, servant, or workman shall be liable to and may be sued for the payment of the penalty, and of the costs of all proceedings which may be taken for the recovery thereof, either against himself or against the owner under this act; provided that it shall be lawful for the inspector to proceed in the first instance against the person whom he shall believe to be the actual offender, without first proceeding against the owner, in any case in which it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of such inspector that the owner has used all due diligence to comply with and to enforce the execution of this act, and that the offence has been committed by the person whom he may charge therewith without the knowledge, consent, or connivance of the owner, and in contravention of his orders.

6. No alkali work shall at any time after the expiration of three months after the appointment of the inspector be carried on or prosecuted until such work has been registered by the owner with the inspector. In every register hereby required to be made there shall be inserted the name in full of the owner, and of the parish or township in which the work is situate, and within one month after change of ownership in any such work the register of such work shall be amended by inserting the name of the new owner; and if any alkali work is carried on in contravention of this section, the owner thereof shall, on conviction, be deemed to be guilty of an offence against this act, and shall be subject to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.* for every day during which such work shall have been so carried on.

Inspectors.

7. For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this act, the Board of Trade may from time to time appoint any fit and proper person to be inspector of alkali works under this act, and may from time to time remove any inspector so appointed, and appoint another person in his place. The Board of Trade may also, on application of the inspector, from time to time appoint and remove such sub-inspector or sub-inspectors as the said board may deem necessary for the purpose of carrying this act into effect. Notice of the appointment of such inspector and sub-inspectors shall be published in The London Gazette, and a copy of the Gazette shall be evidence of the appointment made.

8. No person either directly or indirectly acting or practising as a land agent, or directly or indirectly engaged in any manufacture, or interested in any patent in or according to which the decomposition of salt or the condensation of muriatic acid gas may be effected, shall act as an inspector or sub-inspector under this act.

9. It shall be the duty of every inspector under this act to ascertain from time to time that all the alkali works are carried on in conformity with the provisions of this act, and to enforce the said provisions, and to cause notice to be given to every owner whose work shall be carried on in contravention of this act of the commission of such offence as soon as conveniently may be after the commission thereof; and with a view to the performance of that duty he or any sub-inspector may at all reasonable times, by day and by night, without giving previous notice, but so as not to interrupt the process of the manufacture, enter upon and inspect any alkali work, and examine into the efficiency of the condensing apparatus, and the quantity of muriatic acid gas condensed, and generally into all matters and works tending to shew compliance or non-compliance with the provisions of this act. And the owner of such works, upon demand of the inspector, shall within a reasonable time furnish him with a plan, to be kept secret by such inspector, of those parts of such works in which the decomposition of salt or other process causing the evolution of muriatic acid gas or the condensation thereof is carried on.

It shall be lawful for the inspector or any sub-inspector under his direction, but so as not to interfere with the process of the manufacture, to apply any tests or make any experiments he may think proper for the purpose of ascertaining the efficiency of the condensing apparatus, or the quantity of gas condensed; and the owner or agent of the works shall be deemed to be guilty of an offence against this act unless he renders to the said inspector or sub-inspector all necessary facilities for their entry, examination, and testing.

10. Every inspector and sub-inspector appointed under this act shall be paid such salary as may be determined by the Board of Trade, with the consent of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury.

11. Every person who wilfully obstructs any inspector or sub-inspector in the execution of this act, and every owner of any alkali work who refuses or neglects to afford to the inspector or sub-inspector the facilities necessary for making any entry, inspection, examination, or testing under this act, or who neglects or wilfully violates any provision of this act, for the neglect or violation of which no other penalty is by this act imposed, shall be guilty of an offence within the meaning of this act, and shall for every such offence incur a penalty not exceeding 10*l.*

12. The inspector shall, on or before the 1st March in every year, make a report in writing to the Board of Trade of his proceedings during the preceding year, and a copy of such report shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament.

Special Rules.

13. The owner of any alkali work may, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, make, alter, or repeal special rules for the guidance of such of his workmen as are employed in any process causing the evolution of muriatic acid gas, or whose duty it is to attend to the apparatus used in the condensation of that gas, and may annex penalties to any violation of such rules, so that no penalty exceeds 2*l.* for any one offence.

A printed copy of the special rules in force in any alkali work shall be given by the owner of the work to every person working or employed in or about that work affected thereby.

Penalties.

14. The following regulations shall be enacted with respect to the recovery in England of penalties for offences other than offences against a special rule:—

Every such penalty shall be recovered by action in the county court having jurisdiction in the district in which the alkali works are situate in respect of which the penalty arises:

The action shall be brought, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, by the inspector appointed under this act, within three months after the commission of the offence, and for the purposes of such action the penalty shall be deemed to be a debt due to such inspector:

The plaintiff in any action for a penalty under this act shall be presumed to be the inspector appointed under this act, until the contrary is proved by the defendant:

The court may, upon the application of either party, appoint a person to take down in writing the evidence of the witnesses, and may award to that person such compensation as the court thinks just:

The amount of compensation awarded by the judge shall be deemed to be costs in the cause:

If either party in any action for a penalty under this act feels aggrieved by the decision of the court in point of law, or on the merits, or in respect of the admission or rejection of any evidence, he may appeal from that decision to any of the superior courts of common law at Westminster:

The appeal shall be in the form of a special case, to be agreed upon by both parties or their attorneys, and if they cannot agree, to be settled by the judge of the county court upon the application of the parties or their attorneys:

The court of appeal may draw any inferences from the facts stated in the case that a jury might draw from facts stated by witnesses:

Subject to the provisions of this section, all the enactments, rules, and orders relating to proceedings in actions in county courts, and to enforcing judgments in county courts, and appeals from decisions of the county court judges, and to the conditions of such appeals, and to the power of the superior courts on such appeals, shall apply to an action for a penalty under this act, and to an appeal from such action, in the same manner as if such action and appeal related to a matter within the ordinary jurisdiction of the court:

Within the city of London and the liberties thereof the Sheriff's Court, established by a local act passed in the 11 Vict. c. lxxi, intituled "An Act for the more easy Recovery of Small Debts and Demands within the City of London and the Liberties thereof," shall be deemed to be the county court having jurisdiction in the case.

15. In Scotland, any offence under this act, with the exception of offences against a special rule, shall be prosecuted at the instance of the inspector, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, before the sheriff or sheriff substitute of the county in which the offence has been committed, and the sheriff or sheriff substitute having cognisance of such offences may award costs to either party, and may sentence the offender to imprisonment for any period not exceeding six months, unless the penalty and costs be previously paid; and any decision or sentence of such sheriff or sheriff substitute shall be subject to review and appeal according to law.

16. In Ireland, all penalties incurred under this act, with the exception of penalties against a special rule, may be recovered by civil bill at the instance of the inspector, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, in the manner and with the appeal directed by an act passed in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 57, or any act or acts amending the law relating to civil bills.

17. All penalties recovered under this act, except in respect of offences against a special rule, shall be paid into the receipt of her Majesty's Exchequer in such manner as the Commissioners of the Treasury may determine.

18. All penalties incurred under this act in respect of any offence against a special rule may be recovered summarily in England and Ireland before two or more justices; as to England, in manner directed by an act passed in the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary Convictions and Orders," or any act amending the same; as to Ireland, in manner directed by the act passed in the session holden in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts regulating the Proceedings of Petty Sessions, and the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Quarter Sessions, in Ireland," or any act amending the same; and in Scotland, before the sheriff or two justices in manner directed by the Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, with respect to penalties imposed by that act the recovery of which is not otherwise provided for.

19. This act shall continue in force to the 1st July, 1868, and no longer.
